What Became of the Indian Mounds That Made St. Louis the "Mound City"?

The sad, commercial truth is these elevations of old, having got in the way of progress, have been leveled to make way for streets and houses, the last of them in Forest Park being cut down because it obstructed a photographic view of World's Fair officials.

Distinguished French Scientist, Visiting This Community Nearly Half a Century Ago, Wrote in Complimentary Terms of Our Plan Then to Preserve the Forest Park Group, but the Necessities of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Landscape Brought About Their Destruction.

Still, We Have the Great Cahokia Earth Tower, Which Few of Us Have Seen, Though Many Pilgrims From Across the Seas Come Annually to Look Upon and Marvel at This Visual Evidence of the Capacity of the First Americans for Planning and Executing Prodigious Works.

BY CARLOS F. HURD.

ST. LOUIS is the Mound City.

So we all learned in the old geographies, that used to have little brown freckles on this part of the map of Missouri, to show where the mounds were.

But where are our mounds?

Chicago is the Windy City, and Chicago has the wind, all ready to show anybody who passes the corner of State and Madison streets.

Philadelphia is the Quaker City, and proves it by standing William Penn 537 feet above the pavement.

Boston is Beantown, and has Chili sauce to spare, in the verbal output of a peppery itinerant Mayor.

Pittsburg is the Smoky City, and packs the atmosphere with soot until corpses passing through in baggage cars sit up and cough.

Cleveland is the Forest City, and some of the traction men are still in the woods that Tom Johnson drove them into.

Detroit is the City Beau——

Why pile up any more instances of cities that make good on their nicknames? St. Louis hasn't done it. And our nickname is such a nice, dignified one, too, more's the pity.

Almost every St. Louisan who has had visitors from out of town has been, at some time or other, embarrassed by this Mound City matter. The first time a stranger asked me what car one should take to see the St. Louis mounds, I had to feign, quite willfully, that I misunderstood his question, and directed him to the Mound City Rowing Club.

Later I inquired from some of the business firms whose names commence with the mystic words "Mound City," what the idea was. There is a long list of them in the telephone book, and they manufacture everything from chewing gum to coffins.

Many "Mound City" Firms, but None Knows the Reason Why

"IT'S a nice name, don't you think?" said the stenographer at one place, where the boss was too busy to talk to me.

"But what does it mean? What is the where and whyfore of it?" I insisted, kindly but quite firmly.

"I'll ask the bookkeeper," said the typist.

Some minutes later the bookkeeper, who I suspected had in the meantime talked with the boss, informed me that the company never discussed matters of business policy with persons who were not stockholders.

At another place, the venerable president of the firm, who had been in business at the same stand for 42 years, told me he named his establishment the "Mound City" because he came from a town of that name in Pulaski County, Ill.

Another man said his grandfather named the business, said he had frequently thought of looking into the meaning of the name, and thanked me for calling his attention to it. By way of research, he looked in an unabridged dictionary, and pointed to the definition:

"Mound—a raised bank."

"That may explain it," he said. "I've often heard grandfather say he had a hard time making a raise at the bank, to start this place."

I looked in an odd volume of an encyclopedia of local history, which happened to be lying around the office. It contained this heading: "Mounds—See 'Archeology.'" But I couldn't find the "A" volume of the work.

While dense ignorance thus obsessed me, I chanced to see this item in a Friday morning paper:

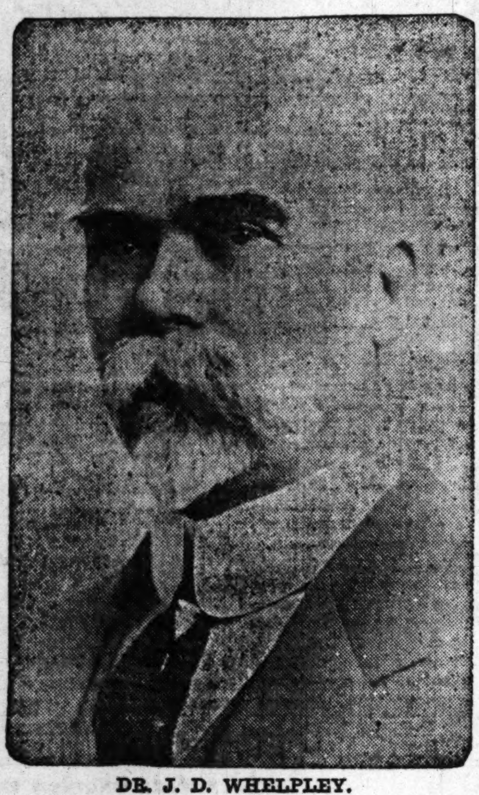
"The Cahokia Mound" will be the subject of a lecture to night at the Jefferson Memorial in Forest Park by Dr. H. M. Whelpley before the Missouri Historical Society. An outing to the mound, near East St. Louis, will be conducted by Dr. Whelpley tomorrow afternoon.

Ah, Dr. Whelpley Is the Man to Solve the Mystery

I LEFT home early, so as to be sure of getting a seat in the Memorial auditorium—it seats only 1000 person or so. On the car, going out, I met a man who is supposed to know all about St. Louis.

"Once for all," said I, "why is St. Louis the Mound City?"

"There used to be mounds here," he said.



DR. J. D. WHELPLEY.

"And there used to be a Mississippi River here," I replied, "and it's still here. Nobody has stolen it. Who got away with the mounds?"

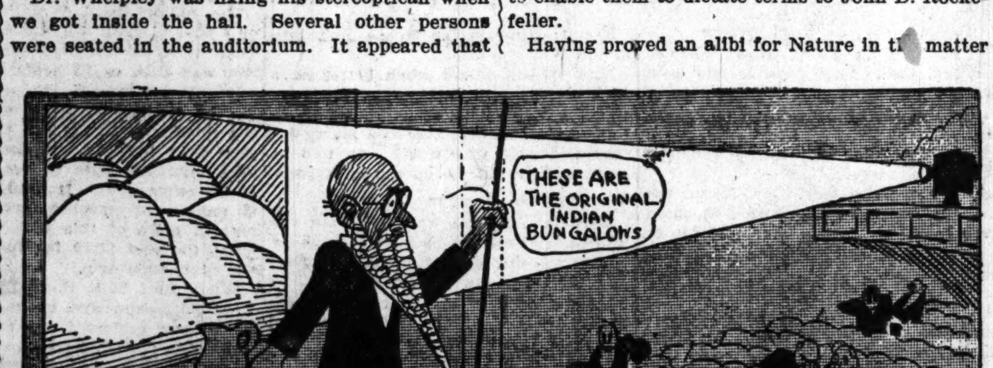
"I don't know," he said, "I understand they're all over on the East Side now."

He argued that if this was once the Mound City it was always the Mound City, and that the smoothing of a few bumps out of the civic phrenology should not deprive the town of a good, serviceable synonym for its name, for oratorical and newspaper headline use.

"Look at Colorado Springs, Colo.," my friend remarked. "Did you ever find any springs there, without paying trolley fare over to Manitou? And yet they grow and thrive under that name. A little matter of inaccuracy in an unofficial name shouldn't worry anyone. That is not what's the matter with St. Louis. I'll tell you what is the mat"——

Fortunately, we reached our getting-off place at that time.

Dr. Whelpley was fixing his stereoptican when we got inside the hall. Several other persons were seated in the auditorium. It appeared that there would be at least enough vacant seats for us all to spread out our overcoats on.



THESE ARE THE ORIGINAL INDIAN BUNGALOWS
SCM

A Thrilling Moment in Dr. Whelpley's Jefferson Memorial Lecture.

Dr. Whelpley the Embodiment of Subject That Enthralls Him

WHEN as many as sixty or seventy of us had arrived, the speaker went up front.

Dr. Whelpley has a beard of the shape of an inverted pyramid, and the mound of thought which rises above his eyes and ears is as handsomely rounded as any the Mound Builders ever wrought. Also, it is as bare of vegetation as a mound in the midst of the desert. It reminds one of the unkind remark which a fellow member of the Business Men's League once 'pulled" on Walker Hill, stating in an after-dinner talk that he had lately visited a town which was named after the president of the Mechanics-American.

"What town was it," asked Hill, "Hillsboro?"

"No," said the other man, "Bald Knob."

The doctor, who is a good talker, none of your droning classroom lecturers, began by telling us how much civilization owed to the Indians. He did not mention the matter of tobacco, which is generally considered the Indian's chief contribution, such as it was, to the world's progress. He only said, in a general way, that it was unfortunate the Indian had so long been considered a menace, and that we were beginning to appreciate his good qualities. As a token of appreciation, he handed the aborigines a pet name, calling them "Amerinds." I would hate to call some Indians a name like that, at close range.

He then placed a large cannon cracker under the theory of certain archeologists, that "a mythical race of high civilization" lived in America before the Indians did, and built mounds, to show posterity how smart they were.

"The Indians were the first people who ever lived on this continent, so far as anyone can determine," said the doctor. "They built the mounds.

"Why did they build them? As monuments to the dead, as observation towers, as defenses, as a place for ceremonies. Some were effigies of animals, some were residence sites, some temples.

St. Louis Mounds We Never Go to See Draw Visitors From Europe

"STUDENTS come from Europe, Asia and Africa," he went on, "to investigate mounds that we do not even take the trouble to go across Eads Bridge to see."

This reminded me of my mound-hunting friend, to whom I had not even been able to suggest the Eads Bridge route. The doctor was evidently going to tell us, pretty soon, where the St. Louis mounds had gone.

But not just yet. He had some more theories to demolish. Some geologists, it appeared, had sought to prove that the mounds were thrown up by the force of the Mississippi River. If this were true, the doctor thought, the river made a neater job of it than of any earth-modeling work it has done in our own time.

The doctor also mentioned the clever commercial archeologists who, some years ago, figured out that the mounds were pushed up by natural gas, and sunk a shaft in one of the mounds, in hope of striking oil. They did not get enough oil to enable them to dictate terms to John D. Rockefeller.

Having proved an alibi for Nature in the matter of mound building, the doctor again inquired just why the Indians went to so much trouble to build mounds, when they might have stayed around the reservation and absorbed firewater. The Indians around St. Louis were agricultural Indians, it appears from the number of stone hoes and spades which they left along with their spears and arrowheads; but farmers had enough to do in those times, even as they do now, in keeping their crops rotating and in making payments on automobiles and grand pianos, without going in for landscape gardening.

Built When Haroun-al-Raschid Was Slumming Around Ancient Bagdad

SOME have thought, he said, that the mounds were built for refuge in time of flood. But this would not account, he said, for the mounds that are found on the bluffs, above all high-water marks since Noah's time.

The mounds were probably built, it appeared, because some person was interested in having them built, and had the men to build them with. Whether the chiefs had enough influence with their own people to get them to do the work on Saturday afternoons, instead of playing golf, or whether they let the work on contract, or worked prisoners and captives, the doctor didn't pretend to know.

"How long ago?" was the doctor's next question as to the building of the mounds, and the answer was, "At least 1000 years."

That means that, when Haroun-al-Raschid was slumming around the cabarets of Bagdad; when Northmen were shooting arrows at the Saxon soldiers in France; centuries before the trees had taken root from which should grow the timbers of Columbus' ship or of Pierre Laclede's ancestral home, these patient, bucolic redskins were mixing cement, sinking caissons and discussing the location of approaches for the mounds.

Now, at last, the speaker got to the question why St. Louis is the Mound City. There used to be two groups of mounds in the city, he said. One group was around Broadway and Mound street. He blamed the commercial development of North St. Louis for their destruction. When the biggest of these mounds was torn down in 1869, he said, a chamber was found which some of the newspapers heralded as the St. Louis end of a tunnel under the river. Investigation did not bear out this startling idea, which, had it been correct, would have meant for the Terminal Association one more fine business opportunity. The doctor thinks the chamber was only a large burial room.

We Promised to Preserve Them, but World's Fair Got in the Way

THE other group of St. Louis mounds, he said, was in Western Forest Park. In 1879 Conant, a scholarly traveler, wrote of these mounds:

"I am happy to know that the Park Commissioners have resolved to preserve them."

But in 1903-4, it appears, they got in the way when some photographs of World's Fair officials were being taken, and soon all that was left of them was a small pile of flint arrowheads.

Dr. Whelpley then went on to tell about the Cahokia Mound near Edwardsville, also known as Monks' Mound, from the fact that a Trappist monastery stood there 100 years ago. He showed pictures of the mound, which is 100 feet high and covers 16 acres. This description he made so interesting that most of his hearers were on hand, at 2 p. m. yesterday, to take a special car on Eads Bridge for the mound. Dr. Whelpley and Charles Parsons Pettus marshaled the explorers, who stayed at the mound until nearly dark.

"Does this car go near the mound?" one elderly member of the expedition asked the conductor.

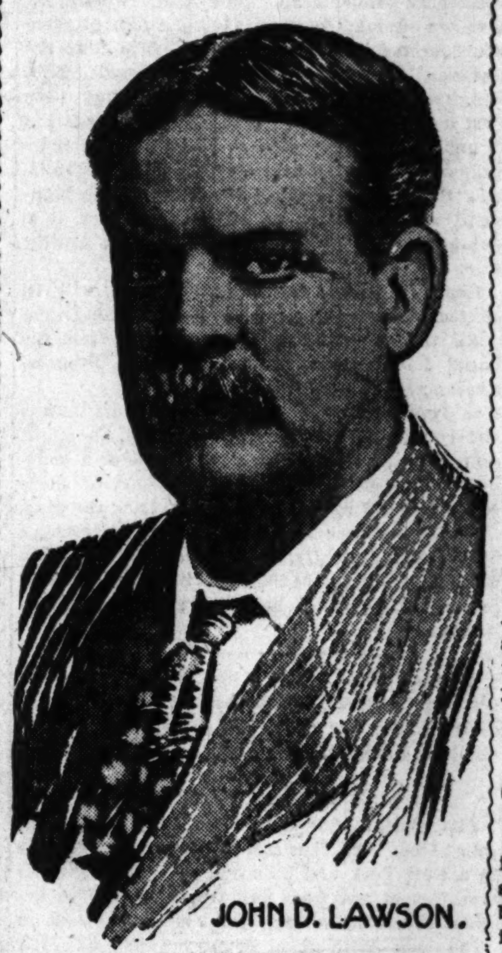
"Right by it," he replied. "The mound is on the line between St. Clair and Madison counties."

Why speculate further? The Cahokia Mound was undoubtedly built as a place of business and of refuge for East St. Louis city officials.

Dean Lawson Describes the French Court Practice as Best of All After Watching It in Operation 6 Months

Representative of the American Bar Association Returns From Trip Abroad More Convinced Than Ever That the American Tribunals Must Cut the Red Tape of Precedent That Binds Them If They Would Restore Public Confidence in Themselves by Their Expeditiousness in Handling All Cases That Come Before Them

While Admitting That a Nation Saturated With the Anglo-Saxon Idea of the Administration of the Criminal Law Would Hardly Accept the Continental Method, Yet He Thinks We Might Adopt That Feature of It That Puts the State Above the Individual and Abolishes All Rules of Evidence.



JOHN D. LAWSON.

In France the criminal knows that all the discussion in the world over technicalities will not save him if he is guilty.

In the United States 40 per cent of the criminal cases are decided on technical details, and the criminal often escapes as the result of an error in the machinery of the law regardless of the question of guilt or innocence.—Judge John D. Lawson.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 1.

JUDGE JOHN D. LAWSON, dean of the Missouri University School of Law, has returned from a six-months' inquiry into the methods of the French Court more firmly convinced than ever that American tribunals must cut out the bundles of red tape that bind them to precedent if they would restore public confidence in themselves.

Judge Lawson, besides prosecuting his investigation into French practice, delivered the principal addresses before the International Law Association at Madrid. He was one of the two delegates from the American Bar Association, Gov. Baldwin of Connecticut being the other.

While Judge Lawson was in Madrid, he had the pleasure of meeting King Alfonso. He had always heard a great deal about the pomp and stiffness of the Spanish Court, and he, accordingly, was astounded to find His Majesty quite as democratic and unassuming as an American. The King has a sense of humor, likes a good joke and doesn't take himself nearly as seriously, according to Judge Lawson, as American writers have represented him.

"In France the criminal knows that all the discussion in the world over technicalities will not save him if he is guilty," said Judge Lawson.

"In the United States 40 per cent of the criminal cases are decided on technical details, and the criminal often escapes as the result of an error in the machinery of the law, regardless of the question of guilt or innocence.

"Expedition in bringing a prisoner to trial and disposing of the case is very marked in England criminal procedure, a very short time lapsing between the committal of the prisoner and his trial. There is no such thing in England as putting off a case from term to term."

Some Phases of French Practice He Finds Better Than Ours

JUDGE LAWSON, who is a former St. Louisan, studied criminal procedure in England two years ago as the representative of the American Bar Association and of the American Society of Criminal Law and Criminology. Later as their representative he spent three months in France studying French criminal procedure. Last March he again began his study of procedure in France and remained there until the last of September.

"America might be wise to adopt certain features of the French criminal procedure," he says, "but in main the American people would not tolerate the general principles characterizing Continental methods.

"Having for two years made a study of English procedure, and now having had the opportunity of contrasting Continental procedure as illustrated by French methods, my opinion is that there is much good in the French system, but I believe that the Americans would hesitate to indorse entirely the latter and would prefer to work out reforms along the English methods.

"One of the troubles with American procedure is that with our variety of courts and our differing state laws it is difficult to get uniformity or to obtain a speedy settlement of cases, either civil or criminal. There, where all the courts are national, not local, there is a certainty about the criminal procedure to which we cannot attain. The travesty of procedure in the Thaw case, for instance, would have been impossible in France of England.

France Puts the Interest of State Above That of Individual

"THE main difference between Anglo-American and French procedure is that in the former the courts are bound by strict rules as to evidence, while in France there is no law of evidence at all. Everything which the French Judge thinks is of any importance to the issue is admitted.

"With us cases are tried over and over again because in the opinion of the Apellate Court some piece of evidence has been wrongly excluded. Such an issue cannot be raised in French courts. England, in the last 40 years, has largely abolished the old rules as to the technical evidence, while we in the United States still adhere to them strictly.

"On the other hand, it must be conceded that the French system certainly conduces to the protection of the public and, after a study of the different systems, I am inclined to favor the French methods of criminal procedure, against the American system, which puts the interest of the individual above that of the public.

"The enormous amount of crime recorded daily by the newspapers in the United States would undoubtedly be much reduced if our criminal classes had before them the terrors of the French courts.

"I think it certain, until we change our system of criminal trials and come a little nearer to French ideas, life and property in America will not be safer."

But, as Judge Lawson believed that the Americans would prefer to adopt reforms along English lines, he says:

"Indictment, a subject which plays so important a part in our criminal appeals and which is the ground for so many reversals in our courts, is practically unheard of in English courts. In the olden days it was common, and our hair-splitting rules in regard to what an indictment should contain are taken from the English law.

"But an English barrister who should set up such an objection to an indictment as our criminal lawyers do every day, would be told by the Judge, as Pollock, C. B., told a technical counsel a half century ago: 'Your point has nothing in it, though it is likely that a hundred years ago you might have succeeded.'"

2000 Words in American Indictment; 30 in English Form

TO illustrate the difference in the American and English indictments, Judge Lawson showed a copy of the form of an average indictment drawn in Missouri, which is representative of the United States, and which is buried in 2000 words of technical phrases charging a man with murder, and a copy of an English indictment which is for the same charge but which is expressed in 30 words.

"The joke in this (the Missouri) kind of technical indictment," said Judge Lawson, referring to the American indictment, "is that after a long argument over the indictment just set out, the court reversed the conviction and ordered a new trial on the ground that the document did not sufficiently show whether the mortal blow was inflicted with a club or not.

"Here, as in England, we should have a presiding judge who takes an active part in the trial of criminal cases. Modern American legislation has shorn the trial judges of most of his common law powers and with an unlimited right of appeal from any of his rulings, his real position in most states is not far from that of a bailiff to preserve order and direct proceedings.

"New trials should never be granted for technical errors, but only to prevent the miscarriage of justice. In America we still cling to technicalities and court procedure has become not a way to secure justice, but a place to 'win the game.' Our judges become mere umpires who cannot search independently for truth and justice.

"What would you say if other trades and professions were as foolish in their methods of procedure as we are in law? What would you say if a train was running west from St. Louis when it should be running east and this train was called back because it had been switched to the wrong track in the St. Louis yards. What would you say if you were called upon to reattend a concert you heard last year because the musician had just discovered that he had struck the wrong note once? Yet, this is what we are doing today in law by granting a retrial because one word was left out of the indictment.

Judge Not a Justice, but an Umpire for the Lawyers

"AT present the judge in America is a mere umpire, who does not search out and administer justice, but who simply sees to it that the attorneys in the fight obey the 'rules of the game.'

"In this country new trials are granted in 40 per cent of the cases. We endeavor to get error into the record rather than dispose of the matter finally and upon its merits. What is the result of our present system?

"Lynch law has become our national disgrace, but it is the protest of the people, ordinarily law abiding, against a condition which, because of the lax enforcement of our criminal law, has become intolerable.

"For 75 years, in England, Scotland, Ireland and other colonies of the British Empire, scattered all over the world, among people of all races and colors, no man's life has been taken by what is called lynch law. In the United States every year Judge Lynch demands a heavy toll."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

WOMEN'S CLUBS AND WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

By Alice Curtice Moyer.

Another proof that the world does progress with every turn on its axis is illustrated in the present-day attitude of women's clubs toward woman suffrage. A decade or so ago suffrage was taboo among them. If by chance there was a member who stood for woman's enfranchisement, she kept it carefully to herself or merely whispered it to some friend of whose sympathy she was assured, for her club was composed largely of women of leisure, society women, whose children were not hungry and whose men were not working at a starvation wage. The club was merely a place of pleasure, where the members discussed things wholly of their own interests. They talked a little about the newest books. They brushed up mildly on Shakspeare. They discussed the servant problem, wore their best gowns, sipped their coffee and went home perfectly satisfied with the lovely time they had had. It was all very pretty and dainty, and even their most caustic critics know now that it was all very necessary, and that it made a foundation for the present-day social conscience, where, with the rest of the world, they stand convicted that the man or woman who hopes to measure up to the requirements of today must be willing to do some part of the world's work. And with this conviction there has gradually come to the clubwoman a desire for the most effective means of influence. Naturally, with this desire, there is a decided inclination toward woman suffrage, and among even the most conservative there is a willingness to at least "think about it."

But all this, of course, has been very gradual and often exceedingly slow, for many of the prominent clubwomen have found it difficult indeed to get out of the rut of narrowness and to outgrow the reasons for the first club organizations. Necessity is the miracle that saved many of them, for as times demanded more and more that these women of leisure take their part in the world's problems, and they began to work for legislation, they found themselves seriously handicapped. And it was then that they began to ask why. Some of their reform measures, through "indirect influence," did squeeze through, but they began to see how much wasted labor they could save themselves and how much more good they could do, did they but have the prestige of citizenship back of them. And as they more and more realized this, they began to come over to the suffrage cause in shoals.

Among the state federations that have passed resolutions indorsing suffrage are New York, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Kansas, Nevada and California. (Among these, by the way, are some who had accomplished most by indirect influence.) at the last biennial it was clear that the majority of delegates favored woman suffrage, and the resolution indorsing it was opposed only because of the fear that some of the less advanced clubs might withdraw from the Federation. But this fear seems to have been groundless. The president of the Wisconsin Federation made a special inquiry into the question last year and has stated that nowhere did she find an alienation even of the most conservative clubs. She did hear, she says, that two women in Minnesota threatened to withdraw, but this seems to have been the extent of the damage. A former president of the Illinois Federation states that their indorsement of woman suffrage never seemed to have made any difference in the harmonious working together of the clubs of her state. A former president of California makes the statement that the indorsement of suffrage by the Federations of her state was one of the great determining influences of the success of the amendment presented to the voters in 1911, which resulted in the enfranchisement of the California women.

This year, for the first time in its history, the Federation of Maine discussed the subject of suffrage and voted to study it. In Pennsylvania and other states the clubwomen also are studying it, and all over the country suffrage sentiment among women's clubs is making rapid strides. It is even said by some who claim to know that no woman can be elected president of the General Federation nowadays except she be a suffragist. This is a wonderful change from the days when the General Federation was first organized.

Clubwomen as a class are very generally intelligent and are quick to see what they ought to do, what they wish to do and what it is that prevents their doing it. They see that disfranchisement hinders them, and naturally they turn to that which they have reason to believe will help them in their effort to do their share in the work of the world.

For instance, clubwomen east, west, north and south have unceasingly prodded the authorities for better sanitation. In the midst of it, they have seen with what ease the women of Chicago tackled and settled the garbage question of their city the moment they became voters.

And they have looked on and have seen the women in all the enfranchisement state doing with ease and dispatch the things which they have tried, unsuccessfully, to do by "indirect influence" for many years, and seeing all this, those located beyond the borders of the favored states are more and more realizing and acknowledging their own need of the greatest and the most practical influence ever put into the hands of the citizens of any country—the influence of the ballot.

Use for Free Bridge.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I think it is a shame that no revenue is derived from the Free Bridge, as it stands, to relieve the weary taxpayer. I would suggest that it be converted into a dancing floor for the study and practice of the "hesitation" waltz. Amid such surroundings it is bound to be a success.

C'EST BIRE.

UNDER THE WIRE TUESDAY.

We'll know more about which way the political winds are blowing after next Tuesday. On that day some hotly contested races will finish.

New York City will choose between Tammany and anti-Tammany city tickets, headed by McCall and Mitchel. With over 660,000 voters registered and the Sulzer exposures confusing the normal line-up, Tammany is not overconfident.

New Jersey will elect a Governor—either Acting-Governor Fielder, indorsed by President Wilson, or ex-Gov. Stokes, the Republican nominee. Mr. Fielder's late declaration against votes for women has somewhat distressed his managers, but they claim his election by 25,000.

Perhaps the most interesting test, in a national view, will be that in Massachusetts, erstwhile rockribbed Republican stronghold, where six men are running for Governor, and four of them are conceded to have a chance. The four are Gardner, Republican; Welsh, Democrat; Bird, Progressive, and Gov. Foss, who having been first a Republican, then a Democrat and again a Republican, is now making the race as an independent. With Democratic ranks fairly solid, and three men dividing the Republican, high-tariff vote, Welsh ought to win. However, it is not good form in Massachusetts to bet against Foss.

Henry C. Stuart of Russell County will be elected Governor of Virginia, heading the Democratic ticket, without opposition except from the Social Labor party. Republicans and Progressives made no nominations.

In Pennsylvania, where Supreme Court Judges and county officers are to be elected, the fight centers on a referendum to the people of a legislative proposition to issue $50,000,000 of State bonds to build roads. Republicans back the plan, Democrats oppose it. It appears Pennsylvania's State roads recently built have cost $22,000 a mile, and that for $4,000,000 actually invested in new roads, $5,000,000 has been spent for administration.

A MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY.

The cruiser with Gen. Felix Diaz aboard has sailed from Vera Cruz and will transfer him at sea to a New York and Cuba mail steamer. Similar transfers at sea from one vessel to another became, it will be remembered, the chief events in "The Man Without a Country" story of 1863. Felix is himself a man without a country. In Mexico his life would be in peril, and not even the prestige of his uncle would make him welcome elsewhere in civilization.

The hero of Mr. Hale's ingenious tale enforcing the lesson of patriotism was condemned because of hasty words which, while of shocking disloyalty, were spoken in a moment of petulance. Felix was a principal in a deliberate, cold-blooded, murderous plot that brought ruin and desolation on his unhappy country.

The punishment of the original Man Without a Country was perpetual. Its justice would be better deserved in Felix's case, but probably it will be safe for him to sneak back to Mexico after President Wilson's wise policies have restored order there.

BUNEAU-VARILLA STILL "KNOCKING."

M. Buneau-Varilla, whom the Republic of Panama on gaining independence sent as its first Minister to Washington, goes to further extremes at Paris in disparaging the Panama Canal. Not only will it be inadequate for traffic in 10 years' time, but he now says it is only a third-class piece of engineering work any way. Comparisons with great projects elsewhere are not necessary to determine the rank of the work. Comparisons with the project of the French on Panama itself will suffice. Their canal was to be 29.5 feet deep and have a minimum width of 72 feet on the bottom. Ours is 41 feet deep and has a minimum width of 300 feet with 110 feet in the locks. A work planned by the greatest of French engineers but on which France had failed was bought by the United States and completed on a vastly more ambitious scale.

It has been said that no engineering enterprise of the very highest rank can be executed without graft. If this is the standard Buneau-Varilla had in mind, the French canal will remain as history's most monumental enterprise and the American must rank even below the class in which he has placed it.

SHALL MISSOURI RAISE CALVES?

A valued reader, whose Democracy usually inspires his letters, has written to the editor seriously proposing that the State of Missouri shall "rent or buy a State farm, and raise calves to 3 years old," in order to save said calves from slaughter and so to reduce the price of beef by increasing the number of beeves. He adds: "This plan may be socialistic, but that cuts no figure."

Does it not? The Socialists talk and write glibly about the State going into the cattle or any other business. Let us suppose that the provision in the State Constitution, reserving to farmers and others "the enjoyment of the gains of their own industry" were set aside by an amendment, and that the State were ready to go into the business of calf raising.

In order to seriously affect the market price of meats, the State must compete with all the cattle growers of this and adjoining states in calf raising. It would have to buy up all the calves offered. And immediately this process began, the price of calves would go up tremendously. Of course a commission might be created to fix the values. But, in any event, an enormous tract of grazing land would have to be bought or rented; huge quantities of fodder would have to be bought to keep the stock through the winters; barns covering acres and acres would have to be built to protect the calves from the sleet and snow, and an army of skilled cattle raisers would have to be hired to look after the State industry.

Missouri has been justly proud of her prize-winning cow, Josephine. The State, as a State, knows how to raise calves and does it. But just a few to show how. That is all we shall probably do for some years to come.

GOVERNMENT.

Most governments down to date have been planned by the wise minority to harness the industrious majority for taxing purposes. The big new idea concerning government is that the machinery ought to be so reorganized and simplified that it will automatically register the will of the majority.

A free city is one in which the majority can use the governmental machinery to render community services efficiently at low cost, without having to pay a tribute tax to the shrewd minority for the privilege. This, in essence, is what progressive American cities (more or less consciously) are seeking in their new charters.

ST. LOUIS' VISITOR.

Secretary Redfield, manufacturer and statesman, was one of the first and most effective protestants against the high-tariff doctrine that Americans are incompetent to compete with other peoples in the world's markets, or to hold our own markets without the aid of Chinese-wall import duties. He has proved the contrary in his own business and has helped powerfully to destroy that offensive and hurtful superstition fostered by the tariff subsidy takers.

MR. VANDERLIP'S DIAGNOSIS.

The opposition of President Wilson, the stubbornness of the House of Representatives and the declaration of the Baltimore platform are now the only things that interfere with the enactment of a central bank bill that would just suit Wall street, according to Frank A. Vanderlip.

We gather that if an overwhelming majority of the people were not also on the negative side Wall street would have hopes of getting a central bank set up and all ready for business by the first of the year.

COL. CULPEPER DEFENDS GOOD WHISKY.

In the course of his address last night upon the slogan which he has adopted for his senatorial campaign, "Up with Personal Liberty and Down with Public Hypocrisy," Col. Culpeper referred feelingly to the misconduct of the late Admiral Eaton as described by Mrs. Eaton on the witness stand in her trial for murder.

"If the Admiral did what she says he did—and I would much rather believe ill of a dead man than doubt the word of a lady"—declared Col. Culpeper with a sweeping gesture eloquent of innate gallantry, "then I can only condemn his conduct as typical of the injustice so frequently perpetrated by enemies of personal liberty. She says he would eat drugs until he became 'dopey' and then sprinkle a little good whisky on his beard, cravat, or waistcoat to give off the false and fragrant pretense of mere gentlemanly distress. How often is a disreputable condition falsely laid to a respectable cause! How many sins are blamed on whisky that don't belong there! How rarely is such injustice exposed!

"I know that I am accused of being the candidate of the liquor interests, the champion of the breweries, the hope of the distilleries. I want to take this opportunity to say to the people of St. Louis and the State of Missouri that I have never drunk a drop of beer in my life, that I have never acquired an interest in any brewery or distillery and that no brewer or distiller has ever acquired an interest in me or contributed a dollar to my campaign fund. I haven't got any campaign fund and I'm not asking a copper of anybody's money. I hate to see a candidate begging for money or begging for votes. I'm like President Wilson, though I hope not immodest, when I say that I don't care a continental whether I'm elected or not. I'll say more—I don't care whether I run or not. Let the office seek the man or let it stay away. I'll say still more—I'd rather not have the confounded office at all—I'd rather stay on my country place and listen to the music of my sweet-voiced hounds than stoop to gain the cheers and plaudits of the mob. If the people of Missouri want me they'll have to come and get me, and if they don't they can go plumb to—William Joel Stone. The Prohibitionists can all vote for Stone if they want to, or for anybody else.

"But I'm standing up here now with the courage to tell you what I think about good whisky. I hold no brief for bad whisky, and no respect for any Democrat who will defend it. When it comes to good whisky I differ with Col. Roosevelt. The smell of a toddy does not make me sick and I can stand more than a part of one julep. I hold that good liquor is not to blame for all the ills humanity is heir to, and under the emblem of liberty, the Stars and Stripes, and the Constitution of a free republic I maintain the right of a gentleman to an occasional modicum or jigger of good whisky, provided he can find it. I will abandon my race for the Senate if need be, I will abandon the State of Missouri if I must, but while life lasts I will not abandon my standard, my principles, my self-respect or my slogan, 'Up with Personal Liberty and Down with Public Hypocrisy!'"

We think Col. Culpeper has fairly covered his case. What more need be said?

SONG.

IT will be Fall again, dearie—
After the cold and the snow
It will be Indian Summer,
And the southwind will tenderly blow.
The hickory trees will be golden,
The sumach will glow on the hill,
And after the peril of Winter
It will be lovelier still.

IT will be Fall again, dearie—
After the danger is past;
It will be Indian Summer,
And beautiful unto the last.
The pheasant will drum in the morning,
The southwind will list where it will,
And in the soft glory of morning
It will be lovelier still.

MISS WILSON'S WEDDING.

It is too bad about Miss Wilson's wedding. Everything possible had been done by the family to make the wedding as inconspicuous as possible. It had been reduced in simplicity to the point where it was but one degree removed from an elopement.

Alas! for democracy. Mr. Mann, the minority leader in the House, proposed that everybody in the chamber chip in $5 for a wedding present. Mr. Gray of Indiana objected. He thought it would be in bad taste to contribute money to any such end, and he offered instead a resolution of congratulation. Mr. Mann thereupon said it would be impossible to put into Mr. Gray's soul the expression which finds itself in the heart of every other member of the House, whatever that means. Mr. Pou of North Carolina said something bitter in opposition to Mr. Gray's resolution.

Result: Row in the House, and pain in the White House.

Miss Wilson would much better have gone right ahead with a wedding such as Alice Roosevelt had. One cannot be the President's daughter and marry inconspicuously. One would as well be great and try to die on the back page.

Here is a unique want ad from the matrimonial column of a German newspaper: "Young woman of ancient lineage, beautiful as Helen, prudent as Penelope, economical as the Electress Sophia of Brandenburg, witty as Mme. de Stael, austere as Lucretia, charitable as St. Elizabeth of Hungary, devoted as Florence Nightingale, loving as Virginie, with the voice of an angel, an artistic soul and possessed of a splendid fortune, desires correspondence with a view to matrimony."

DIESEL ENGINE'S ECONOMY.

From the New York Sun.

The Diesel engine yacht Idealia got a test yesterday which indicated that the use of fuel oil is going to revolutionize the means of propulsion in vessels of commerce and large vessels used for pleasure. American engineers have been experimenting with the fuel oil engine for about two years. The first to make a practical demonstration was the Electric Launch Co., of Bayonne. That concern built a yacht 84 feet long, with 14 feet beam and constructed a fuel engine of 150-horse power. To produce this engine cost more than $50,000.

For the benefit of some naval engineers and architects Henry R. Sutphen sailed the Idealia up the Hudson River. A start was made from the Columbia Yacht Club at the foot of Eighthy-sixth street, shortly before 11 o'clock, and the yacht ran to Croton Point and back, a distance of about sixty miles. It took five hours to make the run, an average of about 12 miles an hour. The engineers tested the motors in every way, in starting, stopping and reversing and at high and low speed.

The motors used 35 gallons of fuel oil, which costs 3¼ cents a gallon. Thus the cost for fuel for the entire run was $1.14, or 1.9 cents a mile. For lubricating purposes one and one-half gallons of oil were used, which makes the total cost of the run 2.6 cents for each mile traveled. If the yacht had been equipped with a gasoline motor of the same power, it would have used 65 gallons of gasoline, which, at the present price of this fuel, would have made the cost $13.50 for fuel alone for the sixty-mile trip.

When first built these Diesel motors were quite expensive, but now that they have been perfected the cost is much reduced. The 150-horse power motor costs now $7500, as compared with $5500 for a gasoline motor. This $2000 is soon saved by the economy of fuel.

MEXICO.

From Harper's Weekly.

Many criticisms have been made of the administration policy toward Mexico, but no suggestion has been put forward for a proposition that would have been wiser. What the administration has done has met the approval of the most impartial citizens, and especially of those citizens who believe in the new attitude toward war. Gone is the day when it is accepted without question that thousands of lives should be sacrificed, millions of hard-earned dollars wasted, and the hearts of men degraded, in order to protect a few investors who knew what kind of country they were going into when they made their investments, or in order to enable Americans to live in such a country without running the risks natural to their residence. The present administration has a great constructive work to do at home. It leads and interprets the wishes of a new America. There could hardly be a greater disaster than for the attention of the country and the work of Congress and the President to be turned away from a task which will make men happier to the exciting but degrading occupation of war. That has been the President's standpoint, and he has acted throughout on the best information he could get, and with penetration, tact and confidence in his own well-matured opinion.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

L. C.—One with unequal hips may cure them, if inequality be not too far advanced, by a 10-minute exercise daily. Bring knee on the larger side up to chest and lower it again, all the while standing as nearly erect as possible. Do this 20 or 30 times each day. (It is said that every lopsided person should have spine examined.)

MISS CLARA.—Violet curling fluid: Carbonate of potash, 1¼ drams; powdered cochineal, ½ dram; ammonia water, 1 dram; extract of violet, 4 drams; glycerin, 2 oz.; rectified spirits, 1½ oz.; distilled or violet water, 1 pint. Let mixture digest with frequent stirrings for one week, then strain. If the hair be moistened with this fluid when dressing it, it will wave slightly all over the head. Unless exposed to dampness, it should retain its crispness for several days.

CLEANSING.

Keep in small jars, closed from the air, and rub into the joints and muscles twice a day.

You are fortunate in having had no more than 7 doctors, though it is often so hard to pay one. For belching, try foods that do not ferment. Eat no fruit with vegetables; no acid fruits with milk, no sugar with milk. Eat as little as will keep your strength. Chew thoroughly. Avoid great variety. Be regular. One man cured himself by drinking freely of fresh buttermilk. Breathe deeply in pure air and exercise all muscles. Diet of cheese and milk has been recommended. Nervousness sometimes causes belching.

BECKER.—The Indian population of the country has fallen off heavily since the settlements of the white man began. The best summarizing of early writers would seem to make the entire early population east of the Mississippi River about 200,000. No figures can be found as to that west of that dividing line, but it is supposed to largely exceed that number.

C. R. M.—One writer says: "To clean meerschaum pipe, place it in cold sweet milk in an earthenware jar stood in boiling water; let it boil very slowly." Another says: "Meerschaum pipe may be boiled in sour milk or paraffin to restore the original whitish color. It should never be handled, for in handling a coating or wax which covers the outer surface is partly removed."

WILL.—So far as C is concerned, he can move out and rent the place, the holders of the first and second deed of trust having nothing to say as to that; all that is required of C is to meet his interest and payments as they mature. If C desires he can also dispose of the property subject of course to such incumbrances which any purchaser would assume and agree to pay according to terms of the deed of trust.

CURIOUS.—We have no list of great men in literature, art, politics, etc., who got their start as barbers. One great man, whose name has escaped us, was called upon, when a barber, to shave a brutal sea captain. The captain swore that if the barber should cut him he would kill the barber. The captain was not cut, and after the shaving he asked the barber if he had not been afraid. "No," said the barber. "And why not?" said the captain. "Because," replied the barber, "had I cut you, I should have immediately cut your throat."

A. G. G.—While wife is living, husband has no right to any of her property. His lawful interest in the estate of his deceased wife is one-half in both real and personal property when no children or other descendants capable of inheriting survive; such half being subject to wife's debts; in the remainder her parents, brothers and sisters or their descendents would share, unless by will she otherwise directed. Providing there are children, or descendants of any deceased child, husband has a life estate in the realty and the share of a child absolutely in personal property.

HARRY.—Chief of the Secret Service wrote the Post-Dispatch: Section 5459 refers only to the gold and silver coins of the United States, there being no law against the mutilation, lightening, or other treatment of minor coins. The courts have held, however, that a minor coin that has been plated with either gold or silver so that it resembles a coin of either metal, is counterfeit within the meaning of the statute. There have been no court decisions, as far as I know, relating to the plating of minor coins where such coins have been transformed into ornaments. The only cases in which we have maintained prosecutions have been those in which plated minor coins were passed on careless or ignorant persons as gold coins.

M. G. A.—The King-George-2-Wives story was proved to be absolutely without foundation by evidence produced in open court. In February, 1911, in the High Court in London, a man named Edward Mylius was convicted of criminal libel and sentenced to 12 months' hard labor by the Lord Chief Justice for circulating a statement that the King previous to his marriage with the Queen had contracted a morganatic marriage with the daughter of Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour. The Attorney-General read a message from the King, who stated that he would have personally attended to give evidence had he not been advised by the law officers of the Crown that it would be unconstitutional for him to do so.

THE MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

A DIGEST OF THE BEST EDITORIAL COMMENT AND INFORMATION ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE READERS OF THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.

MEXICAN SITUATION TO THE FORE AGAIN

THE futile presidential "election," the activity of the British Minister, the ordering of foreign warships to the Gulf, the flight of Felix Diaz to an American gunboat, and the promise of a new message from President Wilson, these, with other incidents, have made the Mexican situation the leading editorial topic of the week. The jingo spirit has about disappeared from American newspapers, which, regardless of party, support President Wilson's course with practical unanimity.

A One-Man Constitution.

New York World: The trouble with the constitution of Mexico is that it works only when one man, who may call himself President or Dictator sets it in motion. When he interferes the constitution is a blank. This fact explains the strange results of Sunday's election. By the constitution there is universal suffrage; yet few voted. By the constitution Congress must determine the results; yet there is no Congress. By the constitution Huerta, the present dictator, cannot be elected; yet, as he is in place, he may decide to hold on indefinitely.

"Waking Up.

Philadelphia Evening Star: If President Wilson serves notice on the governments of Europe that the United States will permit no interference by foreign warships in the Mexican situation he will go no further than he has a perfect right to go. At last the administration appears to be waking up to the importance of the trend of affairs in Mexico and to be adopting a policy which can be discerned and which means something which may be understood by all. Too long has he waited in doing this.

Cowdray's Oil Interests.

Indianapolis News: It is to be noted that the Cowdray oil interests are suspected—perhaps more than suspected—of having given very strong support to Huerta. There is mention of this in dispatches. And it may be of these that the London Daily News was thinking when it said that the English were "not prepared to sacrifice the friendship of the United States at the dictation of a few rich speculators." Lord Cowdray, it is said, is not without influence with the British Government.

"No Dollar Diplomacy."

Louisville Post: Successful in dealing with the backward nations; successful in securing privileges and exemptions, which in time invole revolt and bloodshed. The English nation is a nation of great administrators, no doubt; but it s not a nation that is scrupulous in its respect or the rights of other people. We want in Mexco no "dollar diplomacy" under the American lag.

'An Affront to Washington.

Pittsburg Gazette: There is no such thing as retelling the next development or of anticipat g the future course of the United States in the sk of bringing the contending political forces t the Mexican republic to their senses. British cognition of the dictatorship has undoubtedly nplicated matters, involving as it does an af nt to Washington diplomacy and encourage nt to Huerta. For its failure to arrive at a r understanding with Great Britain, in view restalling this unnecessary precipitancy of ning street, the administration at Washing has something to explain. Our State Depart t is being operated spasmodically, with too h attention to partisan publicity and not gh to diplomacy and statesmanship.

glish Press Divided.

vening Wisconsin:. The English press is di d, with a large number of journals taking part of the United States in regard to entirely tuitous criticism said to have been uttered the new British Ambassador to Mexico. It is ewerthy that the latter denies he used the rds which have been put in his mouth. De te minor reassurances, the Mexican situation not looked so threatening for months. The ire of the Government at Washington to pro t American prestige is as evident as its inten n of using every honorable resort to avoid ned intervention.

Nothing to Fear."

hiladelphia Ledger: England, Germany, France know how far they may go in dealing with xico. There is no cause for alarm; no Max lian will undertake to build another empire our doors; France will think twice before tak any step that may be displeasing to Uncle ; Germany will temper her aggressiveness discretion, and England will not eventually sue a policy in accord with the splenetic divi ons of a waspish diplomat of the Sir Lionel den type. America has nothing to fear except American indiscretion and haste.

ould Stand Alone."

ston Herald: What is the United States Gov nent likely to do, provided Huerta remains at head and the diplomatists in the City of Mex continue to deal with him as the de facto ident? The United States would then stand e in its determination to withhold recogni from successful revolution because it disap ves the means by which success was won. according to present indications it would to act alone.

t Hunting Trouble.

w York Evenng Sun: American sentiment rally puts our national duties and dignity er than the placating of a self-appoined dic r whose methods are arbitrary and repulsive he American idea. None the less it is proper recognize that we are seeking a peaceable lement in Mexico and are not hunting occa for a crusade.

idn't Like Huerta."

iladelphia Inquirer: Wilson never has seemed nderstand the situation. He didn't like Huer Nor can anyone else in his right mind de the course of this bloodthirsty conspirator assassin. But Mexico has been nurtured lood and assassination. The fact of the mat is that Huerta got himself elected Provisional ident. The fact of the matter also is that En d and other nations recognized that he ac ly was the ruler. By so doing they have had r Ministers stationed at the City of Mexico y to deal officially with the Government. As the United States, this country has refused gnition; long ago withdrew its Minister; has living for months without official relations Mexico, and all because Wilson could not Huerta.

tsburg Dispatch: It is a singular feature of present situation that the two men who are prominent in the public mind owe it en y to their acting together to overthrow the itutionally elected President of Mexico, and his murder to quarrel over the spoils. If United States should, by its action to protect from arrest, seem to become committed to support, it will be in a position of equal falsi that of Huerta.

rta's Threat.

iladelphia Evening Telegraph: When Huerta about probable conditions which will bring the United States Government into such relations with foreign powers as to result in setting aside the Monroe Doctrine he is merely making a threat. No one can say what the Wilson administration intends to do, if it intends to do anything. It has got itself in an undeniably unfortunate, if not untenable, position by its lack of spirit in the treatment of the Mexican case, but Huerta greatly mistakes the temper of the American people if he thinks that they, no matter what the weakness of the Administration, will ever permit the Monroe Doctrine to be encroached upon.

"Cold Comfort."

Washington Times: This story of Cowdray influence being responsible for British recognition of Huerta was started a long time ago. There is good reason to believe it is not without warrant. Lord Cowdray is deep in promotion, business and finance in Mexico. So are a number of groups of American business interests. Every business interest in Mexico is more or less a political partisan; they all imagine that their home governments ought to make their investments good for them. None has been more urgent in this regard that some of the American groups; and none has received colder comfort from the home Government. If the various governments should yield to the pressure of their citizens engaged in Mexican business, there would very easily be developed a huge international complication.

British Oil Fields.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The British Government may or may not be influenced by the fact that the new naval plans call for the construction of oil-burning dreadnaughts. The oil-fuel warship is the very latest development of naval science, and the Government at Westminster is highly interested in any naval advance. In all the vast British Empire there are no rich oil fields. Is it possible that the haste of Britain to recognize and make friends with the usurping and well-nigh ineffable Huerta is due to a desire to have a ready source of oil? One would rather believe this than to believe that the Liberal ministry is merely subservient to the private selfish interests of the British-Mexican capitalists.

"Do Not Stand for Murder."

Milwaukee Journal: Just what is the present difficulty? It springs from Great Britain's insistence on giving aid and support to Huerta, the assassin and usurper. She has not yet realized that the United States is ready to stand her ground. When Great Britain does realize this, she will back down, and for two reasons. In the first place, she has not so many friends in Europe that she can afford to place in jeopardy her friendship with the United States. In the second place, her common people do not stand for usurpation, tyranny and murder.

Oil at the Bottom of It.

Cleveland Leader: Sir Lionel Carden is a close friend of Lord Cowdray, the head of a big British syndicate which has heavy investments in Mexico. It is not impossible that to this fact was due his appointment to the post he holds. According to former Ambassador Wilson, all the revolutions in Mexico were backed by oil millionaires. When Huerta came into power the oil interests that had not been favored by Madero—the British interests—were, according to Mr. Wilson, "quick to take advantage of the situation, and in the earlier stages contributed materially to the establishment of the prestige of Huerta and the new Mexican administration abroad."

"Optimists at Washington."

New Orleans Times-Democrat: Between the lines of Huerta's latest statement, which combines a final appeal for recognition by Washington with a threat of dire consequences to follow intervention, one reads the dictator's tacit confession of his own belief that definite and drastic action by the United States cannot much longer be fended off. Even the official optimists at Washington admitted that this Government "might take drastic steps." They were said to feel that the United States could no longer depend upon the help of Great Britain, and that Washington would have to "go forward single-handed, if necessary, in a firm and aggressive policy." The British Ministry's attitude toward Huerta is disappointing to Americans, but we do not see that it gives Washington any just grievance against England.

PARTITION OF ULSTER

THE first official utterance by the Coalition Government on the Ulster controversy was made by Premier Asquith Oct. 25, when he suggested that four counties might be temporarily excluded from the operation of the Irish Home Rule bill. A. Bonar Law on behalf of the Conservatives and Sir Edward Carson on behalf of the rebellious Ulsterites replied to this Oct. 29, that they would "consider the overtures."

"Means Home Rule."

New York World: Asquith's speech means home rule for Ireland, "full speed ahead," regardless of the serried ranks of skylarkng grocers' boys in Sir Edward Carson's Ulster army. What else could the Liberal Government do but push ahead? It was put in power by a heavy vote, upon a platform in which home rule was a leading issue. Under the House of Lords reform act the Commons have but to pass once more the bill which the Lords rejected and it becomes law without their consent. If the Lords are right—if the country sustains them—it will go Conservative at the coming general election, and Parliament may repeal the home rule act even before it is put into effect. On the other hand, such a Liberal success as the bye-elections seem to indicate will make a home-ruling Ireland a part of the permanent constitutional structure.

One ray of hope is left the Unionists. Mr. Asquith is sympathetic with Winston Churchill's suggestion that the Unionist half of Ulster might be left for a limited period under imperial control. Such an amendment would make of the bill new legislation. The Commons could not consent to it without a pledge from the Conservatives to pass the amended bill in the Lords. Here opens the way, the only way, for a solution of the Ulster question that shall not "call" the Unionist threat of armed rebellion.

"Use Armed Force."

Evening Wisconsin: Premier Asquith suggested a compromise by which the northeast corner of Ulster should be permitted to remain under the direct domination of the imperial Parliament for a certain period after the establishment of home rule in the remainder of Ireland. Should this compromise be rejected, he went on, he would favor the use of armed force to carry the law into effect and put down the proposed resistance of Sir Edward Carson and his army. The Government, the Premier declared, intends to keep faith with the Irish majority and to do its utmost to insure a bright and prosperous future for Ireland. What Sir Edward and his Orange following desire is regarded by the friends of home rule not as a compromise, but as a surrender.

"A Ticklish Position."

Pittsburg Dispatch: If Ulster accepts this olive branch, it is certain to provoke resentment among the home rulers. It will be regarded by the rest of Ireland as a betrayal and may wreck the whole home rule plans if the Irish members do not prefer a half loaf to none at all.

"Consent of Nationalist Allies."

Philadelphia Ledger: Friends of a peaceful settlement of the controversy, aroused by Northeast Ulster's threats of armed resistance, will, however, find scant comfort from the Premier's intimation that the Government might consent to a temporary exclusion of the protesting counties from the operation of the bill. While the head of the coalition Government would hardly have made such a statement without having previously had the consent of his Irish Nationalist allies, it is by no means certain that the Ulster covenanters themselves will now be satisfied with anything short of a new submission of the issue to the electorate of the United Kingdom. Mr. Asquith made it very plain that in the event of the failure of compromise the home rule bill would be passed under the operation of the Parliament act, and that in the event of its being opposed by force the Government would use the armed forces of the Empire to carry it into effect.

"The Life of His Ministry."

Pittsburg Gazette: Evidently Asquith puts forth his suggestion as a feeler rather than as declaration of change of policy. In most respects he maintains the principle of autonomous government for all Ireland. He speaks of the situation that has been created as "the problem of Ulster." He recognizes, however, in spirit and in the substance of his general remarks, that superior to it is the age-long problem of Ireland. He recognized that it was the "duty of the Government to deal respectfully with the deep-seated and genuine sentiment of the minority in Ireland," but the higher claim of the deep-seated and genuine sentiment of the vast majority is one that he could not and did not ignore. Neither can he nor does he ignore the very important fact that the life of his ministry and the success of its uncompleted reform policies is dependent upon the favor and continued adhesion of the votes of the majority party in Ireland, though he does not dwell upon it

"Moderate Course Is Best."

Washington Post: The Asquith ministry will be charged with weakness as a result of the announcement that a compromise will be accepted with reference to home rule for Ireland, but, after all, the moderate course is best. The world breathes easier as a result of Asquith's decision to compromise by leaving the northeast corner of Ulster, where the civil war sentiment is strongest, to remain under the imperial Parliament for a limited period. The Premier intimates that an insuperable barrier must not be erected which might permanently sever the unity of Ireland or prevent the Protestant minority from ultimately throwing in their lot with the rest of their fellow countrymen. Time is depended upon to heal the breach between the opposing factions in Ireland, and much will depend upon the temperance and moderation with which the home rule leaders wield the power that will be conferred upon them.

"Beat Us to It."

Washington Times: If the butt end of Ireland is not to be governed from London because it doesn't like that kind of government, why should Ulster be governed from Dublin when it doesn't like that kind? Sauce for Cork ought to be seasoning for Belfast. When all Ireland gets real home rule and rejoices over it, Washington will be the last big English-speaking community in the world to be ruled from the outside without representation or voice in its government. Ireland has beaten us to it.

A Quieting Effect.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Since Mr. Asquith announces that the armed forces of the empire will be resorted to if necessary to carry out the final decision concerning home rule, there is less reckless talk about the headquarters of that "army" at Belfast.

Carson and Pankhurst.

Atlanta Georgian: Mrs. Pankhurst was tried, and jailed, because she had told women they should not submit to laws that treated them unjustly. At the same time, in Ulster, certain eminent gentlemen WITH VOTES were organizing themselves into an army of 100,000, had bought arms, and were openly announcing their intention of resisting with bullets and swords any effort by the British Empire to enforce home rule, regularly passed in the legislative body. Nothing is done to punish those Ulster men WITH VOTES when they defy the law, but the law is quick to put in jail a woman who, without weapons or guns, opposes injustice.

"Cloud Is Breaking."

Indianapolis News: The Government scarcely desired to ride roughshod over the opposition of the Ulster Protestants, but at the same time it had given its promise for home rule, and this promise must be fulfilled. All England knows why Asquith is so firm in his declaration that home rule must be established. It knows that the Liberal party is in the minority, and that with the support of the Irish Nationalists the Government would be doomed. All that holds John Redmond and his Nationalists to the Government is the Government's promise to establish an Irish Parliament. But the cloud is breaking. Sir Edward Carson's troops threatened civil war, yet the Liberal ministry seems disposed to overlook this indiscretion.

"Will Not Fight."

Philadelphia Record: The new offer contemplates only a separate control of educational affairs and police for a part of Ulster, the legislative and administrative union of Ireland in all other respects to go into effect immediately upon passage of the bill. The word "immediately" means "one year after," for the new Irish Government could not be established in less time than that. The Ulstermen will have 12 months to make up their minds whether to acquiesce or fight—and they probably will not fight.

ROOSEVELT IN SOUTH AMERICA

COL. ROOSEVELT never travels abroad without making speeches that show a broad grasp of international relations and excite discussion with new views on that subject. Among such must be placed his utterances in South America.

"A Corking Time."

New York World: "T. R.'s Bahia Speech Riles Argentina." The Colonel evidently is having a perfectly corking time in Brazil.

"Entirely Unofficial."

Evening Wisconsin: Col. Roosevelt is attracting attention in South America by reason of his forceful personality and the high station he once occupied. What he says, while interesting, is entirely unofficial.

"A Patriotic Thrill."

Washington Post: Col. Roosevelt's stirring utterance at Rio de Janeiro, urging Latin-American participation with the United States in carrying out the Monroe Doctrine ought to evoke a thrill of patriotic spirit and heartiest approval here at home. The hour certainly had come for a more robust enunciation of our purpose to adhere to and defend the right of jurisdiction proclaimed by the fathers and jealously enforced for almost a century. Col. Roosevelt's appeal to the three Americas could not have been more opportune, seeing that a distinct line of cleavage is forming between the United States and Europe on the subject of intervention in Mexico.

"A Stage in His Career."

Louisville Courier-Journal: Col. Roosevelt has now reached the stage of his career in which he spends a comparatively quiet day being received by a South American government, and is little pestered by the press of interviews.

"Property of the Nation."

Atlanta Constitution: One forgets that Theodore Roosevelt is a national and an international institution until he goes abroad. Then comes surging the realization that the Colonel is the property of the nation, and the feeling isn't changed by the mere fact that it finds a lodgment in Democratic and Republican as well as Bull Moose bosom. Take his South American trip. The cables say that immediately he stepped on the quay at Rio de Janeiro he was welcomed by a brilliant native assemblage. Cabinet officers, army and naval officers and representatives of the President were on hand to give the Colonel the glad hand.

"A Genuine Service."

Detroit Free Press: The Colonel was happy in his assumption that Brazil, Argentina and Chile have arrived at stages in their development where they stand on an equal plane with the United States and are in no sense nations under protection or in tutelage. There exists today among the larger nations of South America some distrust of this country. This distrust is not so much jealousy of the prosperity of the United States as it is fear of her imperialistic tendencies. Indeed, within the last year there have not been wanting persons who have advocated a defensive combine between Argentina, Chile and Brazil to resist possible American aggression, and it is more than possible that the live naval programs of those nations have been given at least an additional impetus by a feeling of uncertainty concerning the attitude of the American Government. Col. Roosevelt has accordingly done his own country as well as Brazil, Argentina and Chile a genuine service in striving to correct this erroneous impression.

The Colonel's Method.

Philadelphia Inquirer: President Wilson's self-sufficiency in his discussion of the Mexican situation could not have been surpassed by Col. Roosevelt himself, the only difference between the two being that Wilson is merely academic, while the Colonel would "take Panama and talk about it afterward."

FOREIGN NEWS GATHERED FOR THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH

Erring Clara Ward's Son Heads House of Chimay

But His Erratic Mother Is Not Likely to Find Her Fortunes Bettered, for the Young Man Has Been Taught That She Grievously Wronged His Father.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World. Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Prince Joseph de Chimay, the new head of the rich and important house of Caraman-Chimay, is the son of the former Clara Ward of Detroit, whose escapades, beginning a few years ago, scandalized two continents.

This Prince, born in Paris, is 19 years old. He has hardly known his mother, but has been made fully acquainted with her history and the wrong she did her husband.

It is not in the least probable that she will reap any benefit from her son's new position. He becomes the fifth Prince of Chimay and the fourth Prince of Caraman, and succeeds to the lands and revenues of the richest principalities in Belgium.

The family has lived principally in Paris for the last three generations, and the former Clara Ward's two children, Prince Joseph and Princess Marie, who is 22 years old, have been brought up here. Their education has been carefully superintended by their father's sister, Countess Greffulhe, one of the most accomplished and intellectual women in the French capital. Her salon is famous for its gatherings of distinguished men and women and she has been called a second Mme. de Stael.

Her brother, the late Prince Caraman-Chimay, was no less talented. He was a man of dignity and good heart, whose one weakness was his infatuation for Clara Ward.

His children probably will see something of American society later, as they are related through his own family to Count Szechenyi, the husband of the former Miss Gladys Vanderbilt.

Explorer Operates on Himself by Candle Light

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Dr. Hamilton Rice, an American surgeon and traveler, is recuperating in London from the effects of 21 months' exploration in Southeast Colombia and Northwest Brazil, where he traversed about 100,000 square miles of almost unknown territory.

In crossing streams he and his party were attacked by a vindictive swordfish which inflicted ugly septic wounds attended with much pain. These resulted in Dr. Rice being afflicted with poisonous ulcers and he was compelled to operate upon himself by candlelight, by injecting coacaine and cutting his leg to the bone. The operation took two hours, and although that was nine months ago, the wounds had not healed when Dr. Rice reached London.

All of the members of the party were at times practically starving and were reduced to one meal a day. They wero plagued by ants, bees and mosquitoes and in peril of deadly reptiles.

'Thanks for the Lobster' Is Newest Paris Joke

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Paris has a new catch phrase. It is "Thanks for the Lobster." It was brought from the seaside and nobody seems to know what particular lobster is meant or why anybody should be thankful for it. But when a person sends a postcard to a friend it always bears the phrase and if two Parisians are saying good-by, one of them is certain, if the other does not beat him to it, to say "Thanks for the Lobster." That is not the worst. Every day persons are being rung up on the telephone, only to hear an unknown voice say: "Merci pour la longouste."

PRINCIPALS AND BRIDEMAIDS IN ENGLAND'S LATEST ROYAL WEDDING

PRINCE ARTHUR of Connaught, cousin of the King of England, married the Duchess of Fife, the King's niece. There was no best man, because there never is at royal weddings, but the Duchess had numerous little cousins as bridemaids, among them Princess Mary, daughter of the King.

It was said that her elder cousins refused to serve because the Duchess' mother, who is very frumpish, wished them to dress in her own old-fashioned way. However, the accompanying photographs show that the little bridemaids look very pretty in their simple costumes.

Begger's Fortune to Charity.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 1.—William Robbie, for 20 years a familiar figure in the streets of Ballarat where he earned a living by begging, died at the age of 71, leaving scrip to the value of $140,000, which he bequeathed to the Ballarat Hospital and the Aberdeen University.

"CARMEN SYLVA'S" SIGHT WILL BE LOST AFTER ALL

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 1.—Queen Elizabeth, who is universally known as the gifted writer "Carman Sylva," is steadily losing her sight, in spite of another operation. She can scarcely see anything now and can never hope to read again. She manifests great fortitude, but she receives nobody outside of her own family.

There is a history of blindness in the house of Wied, from which she sprang, and her favorite charity is the blind community near Bucharest. In speaking of it to the Post-Dispatch correspondent once Her Majesty remarked that "the tragedy of blindness is one of the greatest afflictions that God visits upon man. It has haunted me since childhood and therefore my dearest dream has been to relieve the sufferings of the blind."

COMPOSER REBUKES KAISER AND WAR LORD APOLOGIZES

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—M. Saint-Saens, the French composer, who came to Berlin to conduct a special performance of his opera "Samson and Delilah," received a message of welcome from the Emperor In reply, he sent a telegram of thanks, at the same time expressing his regret that he was unable to conduct the performance of "Samson and Delilah" at the Royal Opera House because he was unable to preside at the production of a shortened version of his work.

The Emperor replied that the composer was right, and gave instructions that the opera should be given without "cuts."

CROWN PRINCE AGAIN SET BACK IN ARMY BY KAISER.

German Ruler Once More Shows His Disapproval of His Self-Opinionated Son's Attitude on the Brunswick Succession Controversy by Delaying His Promotion to Brigade Commander 6 Months.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Victoria, who became the reigning Duchess of Brunswick last Monday afternoon, is determined to take with her to the Brunswick palace all possible reminders of her early days as an Imperial Princess of Germany and of her early wedded life as a simple officer's wife at Rathenow. All the furniture in the Rathenow home will be transferred.

Emperor William's indignation at the Crown Prince's opposition to the Brunswick succession finds expression in the new army list, which shows that Crown Prince, the eldest cavalry commander still in charge of a regiment, has been set back in the line of promotion in favor of a younger man, Col. Kleeman, who was made a Colonel two months later than the Prince and now commands a brigade. Under ordinary circumstances a Colonel that is passed over would apply to be retired from the service if again passed over in promotion. This being impossible for the Crown Prince he must be promoted before next April.

Empress Leads Evangelist Party.

Some indiscreet publications regarding Empress Augusta Victoria in conection with her fifty-fifth birthday (Oct. 22) have informed the Germans that instead of always being a quiet, demure German matron concerned with "charities, children, church and kitchen," she has played a considerable part in politics.

The Deutsche Montags Zeitung asserts that she is the leader of the so-called Mirbach party at court (which is strictly evangelical and almost puritanical) and that when the German Government, led by Foreign Minister Kiderlein-Waechter proposed to arrange defensive alliance with Turkey against the encroachments of the Balkan powers the Empress' party bitterly opposed the scheme on the ground that a Christian power could not ally itself with a Mohammedan country against other Christian powers. But for this opposition Germany undoubtedly would have supported Turkey at the beginning of the Balkan war and the whole history of the last two years might have been vastly different.

That Emperor William considers himself a first class architect America discovered when he rejected the plan for a new German Embassy at Washington, which had been accepted by a competent committee, from among numerous designs submitted in competition from leading architects of this and other countries.

Kaiser Rebuilds Famous "Ugly" Church.

Recently he had a church at Waidmanns-l rebuilt according to his own ideas. The edifice dedicated to the celebrated Queen Louise of Prussia. Happening to pass it one day His Majesty remarked on its ugliness. Hearing its name, ordered an attendant to get further particulars as, "in nowise should the memory of so great lady be perpetuated inartistically." Although the alterations are complete the Emperor has not yet had time to view his new creation. But he has sent to the builders a check for $7500 out of his own purse.

WOMEN MUST PROTECT HAT PINS OR QUIT CAR RIDE.

HAMBURG, Nov. 1—The police authorities have ordered tramway car conductors, under penalty of losing their licenses, not to allow women with unprotected hatpins to remain in their cars. The police are ordered to take the names and addresses of women with unprotected hatpins, who are liable to a fine of from $5 to $10.

BATAILLE'S PLAY SHOCKS EVEN PARISIANS.

Costumes, as Well as the Handling of the Theme, Declared to Be Indecent by the Critics.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World. Copyright, 1913, by Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Parisians have at last been scandalized by a play, one which even the most liberal among the critics condemn as going beyond all limits of audacity. This new piece, "La Phalene" (The Moth), by Henry Bataille, produced at the Theater du Vaudeville tells the story of a talented young sculptress suffering from tuberculosis, who is given but five years more to live.

Though courted by an Italian prince, who begs her to marry him, she prefers a life untrammeled by wedlock. At the Bal des Quatz Arts she is fascinated by a good looking, brutal young American art student, whose companion she becomes. Soon thereafter she returns to the Prince and tells him her experiences, her costume during the recital being as scanty as Salome's, with the omission of six of the seven veils, according to one critic. She still refuses to become the Prince's wife, but when he leaves her in fear of contracting consumption the girl kills herself at supper.

The piece is brilliantly produced and acted by a notable cast, headed by Yvonne de Bray, who is supported by Capellans. Not only do the dramatic critics almost unanimously attack the piece's spirit, but such heavy moralists as Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, write special editorials condemning its decadent, morbid tone. All agree, however, that the workmanship is equal to Bataille's best efforts, such as "Les Flambeaux" (The Torches), which had a successful run last winter at the Porte St. Martin Theater; "The Scandal," produced by Charles Frohman in New York three years ago, and Bataille's dramatization of Tolstoy's "Resurection."

This is not the first time that this author's work has been criticized for audacious treatment of sex problems. The late Mlle. Lanthelme refused to act in Bataille's "Manon Lescant" on the ground that the play was indecent. She was fined $4000 by a civil court for breach of contract. "The Love Child" is another Bataille play that shocked the public.

In "La Phalene" the dramatist makes use of all sorts of topics of the day—aviation, tango dances, Hungarian orchestras and Isadora Duncan. The heroine is regarded as more or less of a copy of the character of Marie Bashkirseff, the girl artist whose published diary created a sensation about 15 years ago, and the anniversary of whose death was celebrated by admirers in the little Passy cemetery on the very day of the production of Battile's piece. Many of Marie Bashkirtseff's friends remarked upon the coincidence.

D'ANNUNZIO PLANS "MOST ORIGINAL SUICIDE ON RECORD" IN 2 YEARS.

Poet Says That After Completing Two More Books He Will So Destroy Himself That Not a Vestige of His Body Shall Remain.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Gabriel d'Annunzio, the well-known Italian poet, recently told Charles Lebargy, the actor, and Edmund Rostand, the playwright, that because he could not endure any life that was not one of most violent and intense emotions, he had carefully prepared for suicide in two years' time.

The form of self-destruction chosen is unique, for no vestige of his body will remain. He says the whole world will long talk of his death as the most remarkable suicide on record.

The poet speaks of his intention constantly and with the utmost seriousness. All his friends believe he will do as says and suspect he has some method of destroying himself by chemical means. D'Annunzio says he will finish two more works and then reduce himself to dust and so startle the world with his last effort of originality.

Gabriel d'Annunzio, whose real name is Rampagnetta, says he was born at Pescara, on the Adriatic coast, in 1864, but there are some who believe he is long past his fiftieth year. He married early in life the Duchess di Galliese, from whom he has been separated for many years.

His first great dramatic success was "La Giaconda," in which Elonora Duse appeared 14 years ago.

COLLAPSIBLE OPERA HATS FOR WOMEN, LONDON STYLE

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The collapsible opera hat for woman has arrived. It is made on a wire foundation, fitted with a hinge on either side of the frame which, when pressed, has the effect of bringing the front and the back of the hat together in a crescent shape, in which shape it can be sat upon without injury. There is no limit to the different styles in which the collapsible hat can be supplied. Three can be packed in one small cardboard box.

PRINCESS ARTHUR NOW ENJOYS HER CIGARETTE

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Prince Arthur of Connaught's bride, the Duchess of Fife, heretofore prim and prudish, has not only changed from a "frump" to a fashionable woman, but if apparently trustworthy report is true, she smokes her cigarette before going out to play golf.

NEW MONARCH OF BAVARIA IS A REAL FARMER

Being Poor, He Has Had to Grub and This Has Made Him Hate Fashion and Stiff Court Etiquette.

MUNICH, Nov. 1.—Bavaria's Regent, whom the Diet has just caled to the throne, will assume the title of Louis III.

He proposes to modify or abolish what is termed "Spanish etiquette" and the stiff formality which on Mad King Otto's succession, made the court the most uninteresting in Europe. Louis so dislikes formality that while he was regent he was popularly called "The crowned bourgeois or farmer king."

Farming has been his chief occupation, not, as in the case of Emperor William, for amusement, but to "make both ends meet" for hitherto Louis has been very poor. The Munich tailors declare that his clothing is their despair. He likes everything cut very easy. His trousers are usually baggy at the knees and like trumpets at the end.

The Bavarian Diet hesitated before sanctioning a change of succession. The Catholics wanted the Regent to proclaim himself King, for they feared that the Diet would refuse its permission.

The new Queen was Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria and Princess Royal of Hungaria and Bohemia. She has nine children and seven grandchildren.

QUEEN OF ITALY LEARNS TO DANCE "REFINED" TANGO

ROME, Nov. 1.—Italy's chief tango "fiend" is the Duke of the Abruzzi, who recently set Venice tangoing at the Lido. After an official dinner the other evening the Duke astonished the assembled guests by leading off the new dance with his mother, Princess Laetitia.

Naturally news of the affair reached King Victor Emmanuel, but far from being annoyed at his cousin cutting such high capers in public, the King expressed a desire to judge the new dance himself. Accordingly two experts were commanded to appear at the castle at San Rossore, where the regal family was staying. Queen Helena, who is one of the most graceful dancers in Italy, as she was in her native Montenegro, immediately began to learn a modified form of the tango.

Ambassador's Thanksgiving Plans Disappoint Berlin Americans.

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—The American colony is profoundly disappointed because Ambassador Gerard accepted an invitation to attend a Thanksgiving dinner in Hamburg. The Berlin colony regrets that even though the Hamburg invitation was first received, he did not withhold acceptance until he ascertained whether Berlin would extend an invitation, particularly as the Thanksgiving dinner given here will be the occasion of Consul-General Thackara's leave-taking.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

THERE are all kinds of teas, just now—teas dansante and tango teas—but the latest are the "Symphony Teas," which will be given during the Symphony season by Mrs. Thomas H. McKittrick and eral other leaders who always seem to know "what's what."

The plan is to invite in a number of women and men who are inter-ted in music and have someone explain the program to be given at the xt concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. Tea will follow the dis-urse.

It is a happy thought and one which is quite the vogue in other places t boast big orchestras.

Margaret Gale's coming out party the last part of November, but just what it will be is not decided upon. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Gale. She was graduated at Mary Institute in the class of '12 and wrote the class hymn.

At the time of her formal debut, Miss Gale will have Miss Isabel Haldeman of Louisville, Ky., for her guest. Miss Haldeman will arrive about Nov. 24.

There will be something for Miss Jane McNair, who landed at New York Tuesday, after an absence of two years abroad, and was met there by her father, Lilburn G. McNair, and her sister, Miss Cornelia McNair, who is a student at the Georgetown Convent.

Miss Helen Lane will be presented by her grandmother, Mrs. Francis A. Lane, who has opened her home on West Pine boulevard again after being abroad for nearly two years. Mrs. Lane only returned last week and as yet nothing definite has been arranged. Miss Lane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel T. Lane and was educated here and in Europe. She will doubtless follow in the footsteps of her mother and her aunt, Mrs. John S. Carter, and be one of the belles of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. McBride are planning a ball for their daughter, Miss Kathleen McBride, some time during the Christmas holidays, and Mr. and Mrs. James W. Garneau, who entertain all the time with small dinners and luncheons, will give a large dance during the winter for their debutante daughter, Miss Clemence Garneau.

Then there is Miss Ellanore Scott, who is yet to be presented, and rumor has it that her mother, Mrs. Charles Wiggins, who is busy getting settled in the Stribling mansion in Portland place, which she and Mr. Wiggins have leased, will entertain a great deal for her.

On Monday a 25 per cent reduction on all early French hats. Few hats and novelty fur sets on Wednesday. Sally Meagher Millinery Co., 801 Century Bldg.

Following the Eastern custom of running over to one city from another for a ball or some other affair, Mrs. Charles Pope O'Fallon will take her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Overton, and Miss Eleanor Dozier, two of the debutantes who are already belles, to Memphis for the Chickasaw ball, Thursday, Nov. 13, which is one of the most brilliant social events of the year and where the most important debutantes of the season are presented.

They will make a flying trip, going directly from Mrs. Frank Hammer's dinner dance for her cousin, Miss Marion Perry, on the 12th, to the train, arriving in Memphis the day of the ball. They will stay only a day or two, for they must be back in time for the tea which Miss Annie Lewis will give to formally introduce her niece, Miss Dozier, Tuesday, Nov. 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Fallon will give a dinner dance at the St. Louis Club, Friday, Dec. 19, in honor of Miss Overton.

Mrs. William H. Walker and her daughter, Miss Adelaide Walker, have landed at New York after an absence of a year in Europe. Mr. Walker and his niece, Miss Martha Pitman, went on to meet them and will remain there for a fortnight. Last winter, while in Paris, Miss Walker was quite ill with the grip and the report that she had died reached the States, got into one of the Eastern papers, into the Social Register and caused great consternation for a few days until word came that she had recovered and was in Switzerland enjoying the ice sports at San Moritz.

Walter Gerak, pupil of world's famous European masters, teaches voice at the Kroeger School, Musical Arts Building.

Mrs. Edward L. Preetorius of 4534 West Pine boulevard has gone to Pittsburg to visit Mrs. William Hodgman and from there she will go to Wilmington, Del., where she will be the guest of Mrs. James Avery Draper Jr. Mrs. Draper was Miss Elsie Ford of St. Louis.

Miss Frances Carroll's marriage Saturday evening at 8 o'clock to Philip Hoffman Lantz of New York will be one of the notable weddings of the winter and will remove from the city one of St. Louis' most charming girls. The ceremony will be at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Carroll, 5465 Delmar boulevard, and will be performed by the Rev. William McKittrick.

Miss Margaret Carter of Kansas City, Mo., will be maid of honor and the bridemaids will be Miss Gertrude Mack of Philadelphia and Miss Helen Barnes. Mr. Lantz will bring his best man, Ward Chamberlain, from New York, and the groomsmen will be Earl Moon, Arthur Hiemenz and John Carroll Jr. After their wedding trip Mr. Lantz will take his bride to Baltimore, Md., where their home is ready for them.

Lucky men are those who plan ahead. Hence Mr. H. Cramer makes the best-looking fancy ladies' suits, at 4517 Olive.

Mrs. Oliver L. Garrison Jr. of Von Versen avenue has as her guest her sister-in-law, Mrs. George W. Robertson Jr. of Mexico, Mo.

There will be several socially important weddings during the week that are of more than ordinary interest.

The first, that of Miss Kate Carter Lee, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. James Wideman Lee of 5068 Washington avenue, and Wilbur Tyson Trueblood will be a large church wedding taking place in St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the bride's father is pastor.

The ceremony will be at 8 o'clock, Dr. Lee officiating.

Miss Lee's brother, Ivy L. SHH! LADIES! SECRET TO DARKEN YOUR FADED GRAY HAIR—USE SAGE TEA

Sage Tea Mixed with Sulphur Restores Natural Color and Luster to Hair—Just Comb or Brush it in the Hair.

Why suffer the handicap of looking old. Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance.

Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use; but listen, avoid preparations put up by druggists, as they usually use too much sulphur, which makes the hair sticky. Get "Wyeth's" which can always be depended upon to darken beautifully and is the best thing known to remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

By using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair. It does it so naturally and evenly—you moisten a sponge or soft brush, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time which requires but a few moments. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored and it becomes glossy and lustrous and you appear years younger.—ADV.

ECZEMA ITCHED TERRIBLY ON HANDS

White Little Spots. Scratching Made Them Worse. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

1261 Marion Place, Chicago, Ill.—"I had eczema for four or five years. One day I came into the house and saw some white little spots coming out on my hands. A week later I saw that the spots began opening and in their places came deep holes. Later it took the form of some red little spots. Those spots itched me terribly and every night when I was asleep I always used to scratch and make the spots worse and made some new spots. The trouble caused loss of sleep. My hands cost my father a fortune.

"I used remedies for three and one-half years but they made me worse. I used ———, which helped a little bit, but in a day or two it got worse; also ———. Later on I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment two times a day, in the morning and at night before going to sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment afforded relief in one or two weeks, and it only took two months before the cure was complete." (Signed) Clement Levinson, Nov. 22, 1912.

Although the Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most successful in the treatment of affections of the skin, scalp, hair and hands, they are also most valuable for everyday use in the toilet, bath and nursery, because they promote and maintain the health of the skin and hair from infancy to age. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞ Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL, GLOSSY HAIR, NO DANDRUFF—25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Hair coming out?—If dry, thin or your scalp itches, and is full of dandruff—Use "Danderine"—No disappointment.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—ADV.

How to be Beautiful

Secrets of Health and Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. Miss Ainsworth is noted for her marvelous beauty, as well as famous as a talented concert singer, and artists the world over rave at her beauty and have sought her for their masterpieces. She frankly admits that hers is a cultivated, but natural beauty—and no "make-up" is ever used. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

A bride asks: "I have been horrified lately by the appearance of pimples and blackheads on my face and forehead. My skin looks oily. What is the cause and treatment?"

Answer: You probably indulge too freely in sweets and pastries. Overeating and lack of exercise loads the blood with impurities. Begin taking 1-grain tablets quinoxide at once to purify the blood, clear and whiten the skin. Also use gloriol emollient massage. The tablets are obtained in sealed tubes.

S. C. B. asks: "I am annoyed and embarrassed by my total inability to keep my hair looking respectable. It is stubborn and strings like the frayed end of a rope. Please advise what is best."

Answer: This same trouble afflicts a large number of my correspondents, and to all I have recommended the toilet necessity which I use, called wavolene. Applying it to the hair keeps it curly or waving for days at a time, and, persistently used, it improves the texture of the hair, resulting in a natural fluffy or wavy appearance.

Belva C. asks: "What can one do to increase the growth and thickness of the hair and eyebrows?"

Answer: Make a hair tonic containing no alcohol. Use one-half oz. concentrated hairwand powder to a pint of pure water. Shake the mixture and twice daily rub it into the scalp with the finger tips. For the eyebrows, use a level teaspoonful of the hairwand powder mixed with one ounce of white vaseline. Massage the eyebrows gently every night with this balm. You can soon appreciate its marvelous action. The powder is obtained in sealed vials. White vaseline is on sale at all drug stores.

Miss C. C. asks: "What sort of massage will fill out hollow cheeks? When I take a deep breath a great hollow appears in front of my neck. Can I not fill out this hollow in cheeks and neck?"

Answer: If you are not too impatient you can readily do so by feeding the tissues with an emollient skin and flesh food such as gloriol emollient, the purest and best cold cream I know of. I use it daily and have for several years, and results are certain, as with no other. Apply and slap the cheeks and neck vigorously until the skin flushes. Then rub gently for 5 or 10 minutes. Do this morning and night. Your complexion will improve marvelously.

Nell W. asks: "If I stay indoors my complexion is good, and perhaps pretty, but upon exposure my nose reddens and my chin and cheeks chap and the skin flakes, making me positively ugly. How can I overcome this?"

Answer: In cold weather I formerly had the same experience. In recent years I never go out into the weather, summer or winter, until I have massaged my face with gloriol balm, a pure, fragrant, greaseless, vanishing cream. I advise you to use it, as there is nothing so good.

Mrs. A. C. asks: "I want some massage to thoroughly cleanse the skin pores. If I rub soap on my face it becomes very red and tender. Also something to shampoo the hair?"

Answer: I recommend a "water massage," with gloriol glowans. It is better than ordinary toilet soaps" and is the best cleanser of the deep pores. It is very fine to use as a shampoo. It is a compound of saponified vegetable oils.

Bessie C. asks: "Will you kindly publish a formula for a good antiseptic tooth powder?"

Answer: Use 3 ozs. antiseptic vilane powder, 5 ozs. precipitated chalk, 1 ounce powdered soap and 3 ounces of powdered sugar. Mix thoroughly and keep in a covered jar. This is a splendid recipe, and this quantity lasts a long time. Removes all discolorations, whitens the teeth and prevents decay.

A. G. R. writes: "I am entirely too fleshy for my height and feel very uncomfortable when in company. I would like to reduce, but am afraid to try the many 'fat cures' I see advertised."

Answer: It is not wise to purchase and use medicines of a doubtful or uncertain quality, but the treatment which I recommend is prescribed by physicians whom I know, and it is both effective and prompt in action. Obtain in a sealed tube 5-grain tablets phy-thy-rin and take as per the directions. You may safely reduce 30 pounds in a few weeks.

Miss C. B. asks: "Can you advise me of a harmless depilatory?"

Answer: If you want a harmless depilatory to remove superfluous hair from face or arms, I would advise ordinary fluvol powder, which may be had of druggists in sealed vials with full directions for use. This does not mar the skin, and, while the hair may again grow, it can be used again because of its harmless character.

Mr. D. W. asks: "Is there anything that will make my beard and mustache grow darker and thicker?"

Answer: Use a level teaspoonful of concentrated hairwand powder mixed with one ounce of white vaseline. Apply morning and night, massaging for several moments.

Mayme R. asks: "Will you please tell me what to use to cure dandruff and improve the luster of my hair?"

Answer: Obtain a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and massage it over the scalp and hair at least every two weeks. This is splendid treatment for the hair and scalp. Professional hairdressers use it in preference to any other dandruff cure.

Mrs. H. W. writes: "I would be most grateful if you can give me a formula to fill out hollows in the neck and shoulders. Also something to increase the bust."

Answer: It is possible to fill the hollows with good firm flesh and develop the bust by a regular use of medicated vaseo-ol, which is marketed in sealed tubes. This is widely used by actresses and society women. Full directions for home use are contained in each tube. I advise also, if very thin, to begin taking 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"LIES LIKE A LADY," BUT FAILS TO SAVE FIANCE

Woman Testifies She Leaped Out High Window—Court, However, Convicts Man.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The man who "lied like a gentleman" is famous, but the courts here have discovered the woman who "lied like a lady." She lived in Rue d'Epinay and the neighbors testified that they heard cries: "Jean, Jean, don't hurt me! Put down your knife or I'll throw myself out of the window!"

A few seconds later there was the sound of a window being thrown up and a woman, her hair dishevelled, half undressed, flung herself from the second floor to the court below. She was taken to the hospital, where she lay unconscious for a week. At last, little by little, she recovered, and appeared in court in the witness box.

"Well," said the presiding magistrate encouragingly, "don't be afraid, but tell us what Jean de Rallee did to you to make you throw yourself out of the window."

"Nothing," was the reply.

"And what about the stabs on your body then?" was the skeptical rejoinder; and "There were none," was the response.

"And the screams?" went on the interrogatory.

"Sheer spite on my part," was the answer.

"Why did you leap out of the window?" next asked the Judge.

"Just to spite him," said the witness stolidly.

Then the Judge gave it up. "I see," he said, "that you are determined to screen him."

"May I be struck dead," answered the lady, "if I haven't told the truth. Besides, I'm going to marry him."

Alas! the marriage must be deferred for a time, for the Court has condemned Jean, in spite of his faithfully forsworn victim, to six months' imprisonment.

Even a small hall room for the boy or young man who must practice economy while he is learning is to be found through the want columns.

Did you see the window displays of Quaker Laces last week? If you pretend to keep pace with what is newest in dress material—you can't afford to miss them.

All last week hundreds of women visited the lace departments of the leading stores in this city in order to see the exquisite Quaker Laces which are such an important part of the new dresses this season.

The garments made with Quaker Laces illustrated on this page, are published in the leading fashion journals, all of which are showing garment patterns that call for Quaker Laces.

DEBUTANTES WILL GIVE NEW DANCES AT CHARITY BALL

"Will-O'-the-Wisp" to Be Feature of Event for Benefit of Night and Day Camp.

Dances never before danced in St. Louis will be features of the second annual charity ball, which will be given at Dreamland, Nov. 11, for the benefit of the Night and Day Camp. The principal one of these dances is called will-o'the-wisp and is much like the hesitation waltz. It was created by Harry Trimp. Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins, who will be in charge of the ball, named the dance.

Will-o'-the-wisp was first danced by Herbert Cost and Miss Susan Lovett, now Mrs. Herbert Cost, who will return from their wedding journey a week earlier than they planned to act as chaperons for nine debutantes and their partners. They will give the dance during intermissions.

The debutantes are: Margaret Gale daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Gale; Elsa Zeibig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Zeibig; Nell Tracy, daughter of Mrs. Ella Sloan Tracy; Helen and Alice Maloy, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Maloy; Clemence Garneau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Garneau; Edna Delafield, daughter of Wallis D. Delafield; Katherine Floyd-Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Floyd-Jones, and Alma Simon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Simon. All were maids of honor at the last Veiled Prophet ball. Each girl will select her partner within the next few days, and the couples will practice several times before the ball.

The ball will begin at 9 o'clock and end at 1 o'clock. The University Club will open its dining room for supper afterward.

The Night and Day Camp, for the benefit of which the ball will be given, is at 9500 South Broadway in a large oak grove overlooking the Mississippi River. It was opened March 19 with a capacity of 28. It is conducted as a preventorium against tuberculosis for self-sustaining working girls and women. More than 50 girls from department stores and factories have been admitted. More than 25 have been discharged as practically cured.

The camp is maintained entirely by charity. It was founded by Mrs. Collins. Last year through her efforts the Charity Ball was revived and the proceeds devoted to the maintenance of the camp. The receipts from this year's ball will be used to operate the camp during the winter. More than 100 patronesses will serve with Mrs. Collins.

CALEB POWERS REBUKES LAW CLASS PROFESSOR

Congressman Denies in Session That He Is Example of Misplaced Sympathy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Law students at Georgetown University were telling today of a dramatic scene in a classroom last night in which Dr Holmes Conrad, professor of law, and Caleb Powers, the Kentucky Congressmen, were the actors. In a lecture to a post-graduate class Dr. Conrad was denouncing public sympathy for criminals and declared that some, through a mistaken public sentiment, were carried to places of power when released from prison.

"Who was that man in Kentucky who killed another and was sent to Congress?" asked the Professor of the class, to illustrate his point.

During the hush that immediately fell over the room, Caleb Powers, a student, sitting in the front row, arose with perfect composure and in a clear voice said:

"I am that man, Doctor; I was not guilty."

Dr. Conrad apologized, continued his lecture and afterward made a formal apology to Powers, saying he had not known the Congressman was a member of his class.

Powers spent eight years, three months and three days in Kentucky prisons fighting for his life. He was charged with complicity in the murder of Gov. Goebel.

INDIANS THREATEN REVOLT AGAINST POLYGAMY RULE

Navajos With Many Wives Refuse to Obey Order Issued by Interior Department.

AZTEC, N. M., Nov. 1.—Members of the Navajo Indian tribe of New Mexico threaten to rebel against the demands of Indian Agent Shelton that the anti-polygamy rule of the Department of the Interior be observed. That polygamy is being practiced on the Navajo reservation was discovered by the Indian Agent recently when an Indian woman reported that she was being starved. She told the agent that her husband had other wives who were favorites and that he had failed to provide her with food.

Black Horse, one of the leaders among the Indians, was called before the agent and told to see that the rule was observed. When Black Horse bore his message to the polygamous men they declared that they would not quit the practice. The agent is considering some peaceable means to carry out his orders.

About four years ago the practice of polygamy was discovered among these Indians. When orders reached them that the practice would not be countenanced they armed themselves in rebellion. A fight ensued between the Indians and the agent's men and four Indians were killed. It was believed that that incident was effective in permanently putting a stop to plural marriages.

There's a difference in home life where the wife and children feel they own their home. One of the Post-Dispatch want ad home bargains today may be your opportunity.

PREACHER OBJECTS TO SALARY FROM BAZARS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Nov. 1.—"If any of you folks think that by having bazars, dinners, banquets and needle parties, you will obliterate the salary debt you owe the preacher, you will wake up one of these days and find your work was for naught," said the Rev. W. M. P. Rippey, pastor of the M. E. Church South, on Capitol Hill. "You are pledged to pay me a salary out of your own pockets and I won't accept money from any other source."

The preacher said he had no objection to money being raised in any legitimate way for church purposes, but that he was not going to waive the standard tenets of the church creed by permitting members of his flock to "beat the devil round the stump" by avoiding their individual obligations.

Hourly Pay Rated for Mending, Laundering and Other Tasks for Self-Educators.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

WELLESLEY, Mass., Nov. 1.—The greatly increased number of Wellesley girls who want to earn their way through college has prompted the organization of what might be called the "Feminine Education Earners' Union," and the adoption of a wage scale which is to be positively the minimum.

Instead of appearing before the public under the name suggested, the organization is known as the General Aid Committee of the Young Women's Christian Association. Miss Frances H. Alden is chairman of the committee, and Miss Isadore Douglas, general secretary of the association, is business agent. The wage scale states price per hour, as most of the girls have only one or two hours at a time for work. Here are the occupations, with prices attached:

Typewriting	50c	darning	30c
Fine sewing	40c	Stitching	30c
Laundering	40c	Plain pressing	30c
Serving dinner	35c	Sweeping and dusting	30c
Washing dishes	30c	Copying	25c
Waiting on table	30c
Mending and		Reading	20c

The girls do not confine their work to the campus, but obtain much employment in the town, where fine laundry and sewing, especially, are in demand. Typewriting not only supplies the highest wage, but the most work. Next comes laundering, sewing, darning and dinner serving. A good many of the townspeople are learning they can get a very competent waitress to serve a meal already prepared by the hostess for 35 cents, the price of an hour's work, for the girl can bring her books and work for herself until the dinner party sits down.

WOMAN TELLS OF LIFE IN PREVIOUS EXISTENCES

Connecticut School Teacher Thinks There Is No Doubt as to Transmigration.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 1.—Mrs. S. S. Raymond, a school teacher of New Canaan, has astonished her friends with declarations and graphic tales of several previous existences thereby proving, she says, the truth of the transmigration of souls.

In one case she recites the details of her death, when, as a child of 4, she plunged down the cellar stairs of her home in Rowayton. In another instance she visited her parents in a prior existence and they recognized and loved her.

"The truth dawned on me," says Mrs. Raymond, "when I was driving with my husband to Bridgeport. I suddenly pointed to a house and said that I had lived there in a previous existence. He was skeptical and I recited how I and a maid in the household of the minister who then lived there was sent out at night and, being molested by some men, hid behind a fir tree in the back yard. I had never seen the place before, but Mr. Raymond himself went around back and there we found the stump of the fir tree, just as I said."

Mrs. Raymond states that she never got any ideas on the matter of transmigration from friends or books. It simply dawned on her. She now remembers that her grandmother communed with spirits, and thinks she must have inherited the peculiar faculty of mental retrospection from her.

MAN TRIED FOR RELIGIOUS MURDER FAINTS IN COURT

Medical Expert Testifies That Crime Was Not of Religious Character.

KIEV, Nov. 1.—The strain of the long trial is beginning to tell on Mendel Beiliss, the prisoner accused of the murder of Andrew Yushinsky in March, 1911. At today's hearing he fainted in court and the trial was adjourned.

One of the medical experts, Dr. Bekhtereff, asserted on the witness stand that the murder was the work of alcoholics or epileptics and that it was impossible to attribute a religious character to the crime.

ZOE AKINS WRITES PLAY AS A SATIRE ON FALSE ETHICS

Drama Entitled "Papa" Portrays Worries of a Family of Exquisites.

CRITIC COMMENDS WORK

Publication by Kennerley Is One of Series Under Name of "The Modern Drama."

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Miss Zoe Akins of St. Louis, whose book of verses first made England, and then this country, sit up and take notice when it was published a few years ago, has written a play called "Papa," described by her as "an a-morality in three acts," and, rather paradoxically as a "comedy of ethics," considering morals and ethics to be pretty much of the same meaning.

And yet, the description is accurate enough and when the comedy is produced, as it will be, both in this country and England, people won't stop to quibble over words, but will simply enjoy the droll humor of a family of exquisites to whom the only morality is "what people will think." The comedy is in effect a series of three one-act plays, each sequential to the other, yet each complete in itself. The first is called "Papa's Jewels," the second "Mr. Roderick's Magnanimity" and the third and last "Papa's Future."

The tale is a daring one, in a way, being built around the existence of a child, whose unmarried mother is one of "Papa's" daughters, but it is so delicately told that the comedy is without shock, especially according to present stage standards. The underlying inspiration that makes the play entirely satirical is the idea of treating situations usually regarded as tragic with regard only to social expediency.

The play is published by Mitchell Kennerley, and is one of a series called "The Modern Drama," edited by Edwin Biorkman. Ten volumes have been thus far announced. Six are to be translations from famous Continental dramatists, one by an Englishman and three by Americans. Miss Akins is the only woman included in the list, so it can be seen that from a literary standpoint the production is highly regarded.

Criticism of Miss Akins.

In this introducton the editor speaks of Miss Akins: "Her first volume of verse was published in 1912 and met with a great deal of approval on both sides of the Atlantic. Though all the poems in it possess undeniable charm, the volume would to me seem pretty much like any other collection of minor poetry but for certain significant passages in such poems as 'Mary Magdalen,' 'One Woman,' and 'The Sisterhood.' In these passages there is displayed an independence of attitude and expression that strongly suggests their author as one of the voices of the new womanhood.

"'Papa,' the play here given to the public, is a little masterpiece that places its creator with such typical representatives of the genre as Arthur Schnitzler the Dane, Gustav Wied, and the author of 'The Dolly Dialogues.'

"Like the work of these men, that of Miss Akins seems to be on the surface for amusement only, while to the penetrating mind it yields a social satire in spite of its good temper and its exquisite playfulness, buries its biting lash beneath the callous cuticle of our modern 'dronedom.'

"In explaining her attitude toward the drama he quotes her as saying that as a result of her study of the great European dramatists she learned to "demand a larger thing of play than the play itself."

"Papa" is an exquisite person of 65 years, whose beauty and charm speak of unending youth. He is distinguished, amiable, absolutely loveable and appealing, and his two daughters, Chloe and Doris, worship him without reservation. The girls are as lovely as behooves the children of such a rare person as "Papa" and they are too perfectly happy with him to consider marriage with favor. "Papa," however, gets into financial difficulties and his man of business tells him it is imperatively necessary to raise a large sum of money. Chloe has a rich suitor whom she loves and her only reason for not marrying Dick is a secret in her past.

Decide One Must Marry.

Doris is wooed ardently by Roderick, a man of wealth, breeding and distinction, but she has not as yet appreciated him.

So soon as the girls learn of their papa's worries they decide at once that one or the other must marry. Doris tossing a coin to decide. Whereat papa exclaims hopefully, "My noble girls!" The lot falls to Chloe and she is a bit weepy about it, declaring that it will be hard to cut herself off forever from her little Dolores and equally impossible to confess to Dick that she has been a mother, but not a wife. We then learn that five years ago, when she was a debutante, she went to supper with a famous tenor "whom all the girls were wild about." "Oh, why was I ever born?" O why did I ever go with that hateful man to supper alone?" she cries.

Her father had been beautifully forgiving and had always seen to her child's care and education, letting the people who bring it up think the child the result of an indiscretion of his own.

Chloe hates to deceive Dick, but knows he will not condone her offense, so she promises to keep silence. Dick is telephoned for and she plans to elope with him as the best way to excuse her hasty decision.

Roderick comes to renew his suit to Doris, and the latter, hoping to get rid of him, tells him the story of Chloe's past as if it were her own and declares she can marry nobody. Roderick shows such unexpected generosity and nobility in assuring her of his love in spite of this episode, that Doris falls instantly in love with him and accepts his proposal. He declares that he will adopt the little Dolores and bring her up as his own child. This double marriage under such happy circumstances delights Papa and he readily accepts the invitation of his children to accompany them abroad.

Tenor Calls to See Child.

In the second act they are all at Trouville where Roderick has a villa, and Dolores is with them, under the care of a most accomplished French governess. It happens that the great singer Zimcapanzi, father of Dolores, is at Trouville, and Papa meets him and explains the situation with great amiability and consideration for the tenor's feelings. Roderick also makes his acquaintance, is charmed with him and makes up his mind to be magnanimous. He tells Doris that it is only right to allow Zimcapanzi to see his child, and although she is startled by such generosity, she thinks it will be a thrilling thing to do. Accordingly the tenor is received and between his exceeding grace and the unrivalled charm of Papa, the interview passed beautifully and everyone but Chloe is pleased. She resents the fact that her former lover has forgotten her personality and has to be reminded that Doris is only playing the part of Dolores' mother.

Then the family visited London and here papa becomes a popular idol, his great social gifts captivating everybody.

A very distinguished widow, who has had princes at her feet, falls in love with him and even Chloe and Doris are pleased, when papa explains that he wishes to marry Mrs. Blythe. He explains that it is necessary for him to think of his future and the widow wishes him to adopt a career.

The family consider all this with great seriousness and a conference is held in which the son-in-law offers to assist in providing any sort of career when papa fancies. It is all settled finally by the arrival of Mrs. Blythe, who comes to ask about certain gossip relating about papa's past and the little girl supposed to be his. She is apparently disappointed when it is explained and in the end she insists on believing for the sake of romance that papa is Dolores' father and her mother a great opera singer then in London whom Zincapanzi has just married. This idea is fixed in her mind by the fact that Madame Tretore-Zincapanzi's bride, has written a delicate note inviting the child to spend the summer with them. Papa assents for the sake of pleasing her and the whole family go off with Mrs. Blythe to spend the day in the country.

WOMEN KILL 8 SNAKES WITH WHIP AND HEELS

Two Homesteaders Confronted by a Dozen Rattlers on Trail Near Homes.

LA SALLE, Colo., Nov. 1.—Literally fighting their way through a circle of hissing rattlesnakes and killing eight of the reptiles with no other weapon than a short piece of buggy whip, was the experience of Mrs. H. B. Powell and Mrs. Clara Shields, two women homesteaders northeast of here.

The women were walking across the prairie when they stepped aside to avoid a large rattler lying in the trail. By so doing they walked directly into a bunch of a dozen snakes. Mrs. Powell began striking the reptiles with the piece of a whip she carried in her hand and as fast as one was rendered harmless by her Mrs. Shields would jump on it with the heel of her shoe and complete the work of destruction.

Within five minutes the two women had killed eight snakes, the largest being almost four feet in length, and four escaped. They collected the rattles and will keep them as souvenirs.

Wounded and disabled in battle	350,000

IENNA, Nov. 1.—Accurate statents of casualties of the Balkan wars the last year will not be supplied by the nations engaged in the conflicts.

Austrian War Office officials who have followed the fortunes of the war carefully, place the total loss of life at more than 500,000 persons, more than one-half of whom were noncombatants, who were slain by Turks and who fled without regard to their welfare from the allies.

The wounded and disabled in battle are believed to be more than 350,000. Hundreds and thousands of men are doomed to a life of helplessness and to be burdens on others, whereas if they had not been neglected and had been sent home for proper treatment, they would have been able to care for their families.

In estimating deaths from disease for all armies at 74,000, statisticians have drawn much criticism from persons who profess to know something of camp life in and near Tchaltja, from which hundreds of soldiers were sent to the cholera camps near Constantinople. It is declared 50,000 is far below the number of lives sacrificed by the incompetent Turkish health officers and poor hospital equipment.

Diseases Killed 7000 Serbs.

The Serb loss of 7000 from disease and permanent injury to the wounded is proportionately much less than that for any other country because of that nation's superior hospital service and the better care of men. The statistics place the Servian loss in battle at 20,000 and the wounded at 45,000.

The Greeks, considering deaths and injury from all causes, fared perhaps best of all. The figures are: Killed, 12,000; wounded, 45,000; disease, 5000.

While the Greeks did their part well in carrying forward the war and their campaigns were in a section especially open to attack, the rank and file of their soldiers were more intelligent and more careful fighters. They indulged in few of the fanatical charges that rolled up the total of the death for the other allies.

The Bulgars' loss of killed in battle is placed about 50,000, the same as the Turkish dead. The Bulgars had more men in the field than the other allies and their men were ruthlessly sacrificed. Then, too, in the civil war between the allies, following the victory over Turkey, Bulgaria suffered a tremendous loss. In wounded, the Bulgars are believed to have lost the service of 120,000 men and 10,000 are said to have died from disease.

The Turkish loss is summarized as follows: killed in battle, 50,000; wounded, 130,000; dead from disease, 50,000.

Montenegrins Lost 5000 Dead.

The heaviest loss, proportionately, is that of the Montenegrins with their 5000 killed in battle, 10,000 wounded and 2000 dead from disease. The mountain kingdom sent nearly every fighting man in its population into the war and there was practically no hospital service for them. Then, too, the Montenegrins are natural fighters and they led many forlorn hopes. The high proportion of death by disease in their ranks is due to the number of old men and boys sent into the campaigns.

The extraordinary number of deaths among the non-combatants is peculiar to this war. The scene of the fighting was occupied largely by persons who admitted allegiance to none of the countries concerned in the conflict. They had been held in subjection by Turkish troops and police. When this conflict began, the Turks' first move was to terrify this mass of people with a series of massacres and to spread reports of reprisals planned by the allies.

The already terrified Albanians and other tribesmen, when the northern armies marched through their country, fled to the coast, leaving the infirm, old and young to perish alongside the road. Hundreds more perished in the crowded refugee camps, where none of the countries concerned sought to provide food or care for them.

"Both Sides of the Cup" is the title of a series of Sunday evening addresses to be given in Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union and Kensington avenues, by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. S. H. Woodrow, beginning tonight. Dr. Woodrow says the talks were "in a way" suggested by Winston Churchill's novel, "The Inside of the Cup."

The subtopics for later Sunday nights will be: Nov. 9, "The Ethics of Amusement;" Nov. 16, "George Sherwood Eddy;" Nov. 23, "The Ethics of Gambling;" Nov. 30, "The Ethics of the Liquor Traffic;" Dec. 7, "The Ethics of Suicide;" Dec. 14, "The Ethics of Divorce."

WANTED TO END HIS LIFE

Man on Way to the River Tells a Policeman.

George Howard Bear, 32 years old, 244 Spring Hill avenue, Mobile, Ala., on his way to the river, stopped at Second and Olive streets yesterday to tell Policeman Dailey about it. He showed the policeman a copy of a telegram he had sent to his wife in Mobile. It read: "Yours received. No chance for me. Good-by forever." He explained that he had been a clerk on the steamer Clyde, but had been on a spree for two weeks.

Dailey sent him to the city dispensary, where he was found to be suffering with alcoholism, and he was transferred to the city hospital.

Your Money Is Safe in Diamonds

These sparkling gems are unquestionably a most excellent and gratifying investment, when purchased at this favored store. Time has proved conclusively the absolute truth of this statement. But you must be sure to buy right, and the first essential to right buying is not to seek the largest specimen obtainable for the amount you wish to spend. A diamond's value does not lie in its size alone. Seek quality in a diamond. Aim to procure not the largest, but the finest, diamond your money can buy, because, as they advance in price, it is invariably the higher grades that advance first, and if you have a fine specimen, it becomes more valuable with each advance. The demand for diamonds has kept pace with the increase of the world's wealth—but the supply is diminishing, until today it is a most desirable and solid investment for idle funds. Our gems are carefully selected and mounted, and priced as low as good business methods will permit, and we guarantee the quality and weight in every instance.

This Is Guaranteed to Stop Your Cough

Make This Family Supply of Cough Syrup at Home and Save $2.00.

This plan makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer an ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative. A handy remedy for hoarseness, spasmodic croup, bronchitis, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy has often been imitated, though never successfully. It is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—ADV.

Woman Stops Husband From Using Tobacco

An Ohio Wife Broke Her Husband of the Tobacco Habit With a Recipe She Gave Secretly.

She Tells What She Used.

A well-known Ohio woman, whose husband has been a heavy user of tobacco for years, broke him of the habit by the use of a simple home recipe that she gave secretly. She very gladly told what she used, but requested that her name should not be made public, as her husband does not know why he quit using tobacco. She said: "The recipe is very inexpensive and can be obtained from any drug store, mixed at home, and given secretly or with the patient's knowledge, for the tobacco habit in any form. To 3 oz. of water add 20 grains of murate of ammonia, a small box of Varlex Compound and 10 grains of pepsin. Give a teaspoonful three times a day at meal time, in the food or in the coffee, tea or milk. This recipe is perfectly harmless and has no color, taste or smell."—ADVERTISEMENT.

"$50,000 PEARL" LOSES ITS LUSTRE IN ALCOHOL BATH

French Jewelers Go to Court When American Gem's Coat Is Dissolved.

HINDU APPLIED PROCESS

American Fresh Water Jewels Are Taken Abroad and Doctored, Is Charge.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Owners of valuable pearls, both in Europe and in the United States, will be deeply interested in the outcome of a law case about to be heard to determine whether the despised American fresh-water pearl can be treated so as to make it appear identical in luster and color with the genuine Oriental pearl.

A Paris syndicate of merchants of precious stones, which organization controls the methods of trading in gems in the local market has caused a stir in the jewelry world by appealing directly to the law courts to decide the difficulties of the alleged doctoring of an American pearl by the celebrated Hindu lapidary Warma, whose process enhanced the value of the gem from $14,000 to $50,000.

A raw American pearl weighing 69½ grains of extraordinary natural beauty was bought by a prominent Parisian pearl dealer named Lindenbaum from an American jewel dealer named Frankel three or four years ago for $13,200. Frankel since has died but his house still exists in New York. Six months ago Lindenbaum sold the pearl to M. Altschueler, one of the prominent Paris pearl dealers, a business man of the highest reputation, rated as being worth several million dollars, for $14,000.

Pearl Loses Covering.

A few days ago, while the pearl was being shown about by an agent, its price being quoted at $50,000, a curious observer soaked it in alcohol, with the result that the entire outer covering came off. This caused much gossip, culminating eventually in charges of fraud against Altschueler and the seizure of the pearl by the syndicate's officers, who have now appealed to the courts.

Altschueler's defense is that he intended to sell the pearl as an American product, not as an Oriental jewel, and refers the investigators to the lapidary Warma.

Warma says he did nothing fraudulent to the pearl, but merely perfected its luster through scraping and subjecting to ultra violet rays, which is frequently done by all pearl dealers. The only new thing done to the pearl was a secret electrical process.

Warma states, furthermore, that the outer coating which the alcohol dissolved was not meant to stay, but was merely a preservative for the first few months in the pearl's life. He said he had instructed Altschueler not to exhibit the pearl until after the removal of the coating at the end of a few months.

Hindu Threatens Exposures.

Other lapidaries say that the outer coating was made from the dust of Indian pearls, giving the American pearl the appearance of Indian luster, the coating coming off because it was not entirely dry. They say that if the pearl had had time to dry the coating would not have come off and the gem undoubtedly would have passed fraudulently as a magnificent specimen of an Oriental pearl, easily worth $50,000.

The jewelry trade feels that one of the greatest dangers of the situation is that the Hindu, Warma, will carry out his threat to tell in open court all the names of pearl dealers for whom he has done exactly the same work, imperiling the integrity of several great jewelry houses, even though they did not know the Hindu lapidary was applying special secret processes to the pearls. It is also feared that Warma's artificial luster may prove short lived, thus bringing back to dealers pearls that are now in famous necklaces, which were bought as absolutely the finest Indian products.

The American fresh water pearl is taken from the mussels in many of the rivers of the Middle West, notably in Arkansas, Illinois and Missouri. They are exported to the East and frequently find their way back to America, either singly or cleverly matched to complete valuable necklaces.

ENDS LIFE AS CHILD CUSTODY TRIAL STARTS

Kansas City Man Feared Court Would Award Daughters to Former Wife.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 1.—"The defendant is dead. The case of Minnie Irene Corbet vs William Corbet is now a matter for the Juvenile Court."

This announcement from the bench startled the courtroom of Circuit Judge Seehorn here today, after a deputy sheriff had whispered to the Judge that almost simultaneously with the calling of the case in which his former wife sued for the custody of their three daughters, Corbet, a clerk, had committed suicide by swallowing poison in his room. Fear he would lose his children was the cause.

Corbet left the following note, addressed to his eldest daughter, aged 17: "Dear Violet: The dishes, furniture and carpets are mine—all paid for. Say goodby to Gladys and Verna."

School Superintendent Resigns.

CLAY CENTER, Neb., Nov. 1.—Miss Edith A. Lathrop County Superintendent of Schools, has filed her resignation, to take effect Dec. 1. She has accepted the position of State Inspector of Rural Schools.

The Crow

Big Row Over the Ruling of the United States Department of Agriculture That Crows Must Be Permitted to Live Out Their Natural Lives—Are They as Black as They Are Painted?—What Is the Chance, if Any, That They Only Go Into a Fresh-Planted Cornfield to Cover Up Seed Grain Which the Planter Leaves on Top of the Ground?

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

THERE were three crows
Sat on a tree,
And they were glad
As glad could be.
Said one of them:
"Our Uncle Sam
Decides what kind Of bird I am.

"I do not steal,
As people say,
Nor cart the farmer's
Corn away;
But find sufficient
For my needs
In cuckleburrs,
And tumble weeds."

At which they all,
With nimble vim,
Danced up and down
Upon the limb,
And winked and blinked
In merry glee
For this astonishing Decree.

"I wonder," said
The second crow,
"They did not guess it
Long ago!
How many times,
For all their lies,
They must have seen us
Catching flies!"

"They have confused us,"
Said the third,
"With, possibly,
The Weather Bird,
Who knows what it
Subsists upon
Between the twilight
And the dawn?

"What fields it ravages
At night,
Or what good grains
Are its delight?
Or who can say,
If they are loosed,
The chickens
Never leave the roost?"

There were three crows
Upon a tree,
And they were glad
As glad could be.
They blest the day
That they were born,
And then got busy
In the corn.

THERE is a great row about crows. The United States Department of Agriculture, which is terribly interested in birds these days, has decided that crows in the United States, like white elephants in Siam, are to a degree sacred. It is illegal under the department's ruling to kill a crow, and the farmer, ho has been disposed to shoot one whenever he ould, is enjoined to regard it as a friend.

Some eminent bird men say this is a mistake. ur own Mr. Baskette, who knows all the birds n Missouri and has been at pains to write a ouple of books about them, says no greater obber ever lived than the crow. He has known illions of them, and has never known a good ne. Absolutely without character, amazingly unning, and unfortunately fond of pretty much he same things we like ourselves, the crow is he most destructive agent that looks into a eld.

How the crow got its bad name Mr. Baskette ery well known. He has seen it dig corn as ast as the farmer could plant it. He has seen steal anything lying around loose, kill little ickens, and outlaws itself in law-abiding communities until whole countrysides went gunning r it.

It is how the crow got its good name that others everybody out here. By what process f investigation the Department of Agriculture as discovered that the crow doesn't do any of he things everybody has seen it d[illegible], cannot be magined. If the crow prefers a fat bug to a at grain of corn no one in this part of the ountry, where there are crows, knows anything about it. Mr. Baskette has never seen a crow engaged in battle with a bug. He has never seen a crow with an expression of countenance indicating that it had just eaten a bug. Nor has he ever seen a bug going anywhere as if there was a crow after it. Upon the contrary, he has seen crows exclusively feed upon corn where bugs were abundant. He has seen crows full of corn sitting around upon dead trees with the featural complaisance of the cat which ate the canary. He has seen grains of corn terrified when there were crows about.

So much for the observations of one thoroughgoing ornithologist, who knows crows, who has caught them redhanded, whose hair bristles whenever he sees one, and who loves birds.

IT is always hard to part with illusions, especially fond ones. There has been no fonder illusion than this, that a scarecrow is essential to a good crop of corn. In all this part of the country where corn is the principal crop, scarecrows have assumed something of the architectural pretentiousness of totem poles in Alaska. A farmer out on the Illinois prairie who is without a good set of well-painted scarecrows is no farmer at all. Indeed, upon the more advanced farms the mechanical scarecrow, which waves its arms and repeats pretty faithfully the antics of Fred Stone in "The Wizard of Oz," goes hand in hand with the tractor plow. To believe that these costly and ornamental devices are not saving the corn is as difficult as to believe that the windmill is pumping wine. The army, nothing less, would have to tour the corn belt before that idea could prevail. Great roosts of folklore would have to be fired into and broken —

It is assumed that the Department of Agriculture has made some astonishing discovery about crows. What this is can only be guessed. Probably it has been ascertained that what the crow is doing in a fresh-planted cornfield is covering up grains not buried by the planter. If this is what the crow is doing, a terrible injustice has been done. Everybody who knows anything about corn planting knows that a great many grains do not get under the soil as they should. It takes courage to suggest that this is what has been going on, but the Wilson administration has never lacked courage. If it has found virtue in the crow, it will say so. Men like Mr. Wilson and Mr. Houston will stick at nothing to do justice. They are fairly desperate for the right.

We shall see.

Negro Mammy's State Pride.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.

D. C. ROPER, First Assistant Postmaster-General, was born in North Carolina, and for that reason he thinks North Carolina is a better State than South Carolina or any other old state. If he had been born in South Carolina, that State would have been the best of all states and North Carolina would be a second-rater. Roper tells a story about an old mammy that illustrates how an imaginary line may affect pride of state.

"Our State was being apportioned from the original territory that made up the Colonial Carolina," says Mr. Roper, "and aunty's log cabin was right on the line between the two states. She was much exercised over the antics of the young engineers who came down to survey the new boundary line.

"First they squinted at her cabin through one instrument and then another until she thought they were about to open bombardment. They laughed at her fears and told her they were simply trying to find out whether she lived in North or South Carolina.

" 'Y'all doan' ketch me livin' in Norf Ca'lina,' she said angrily.

"Well, one day it was decided that she lived in South Carolina, and the next day it was decided that only a part of her garden was in South Carolina and the cabin and the rest were in the old North State. At this Aunty Dinah threw up her hands and shouted:

" 'Bress de Lawd. I sho' is glad ob dat. Dat Souf Ca'lina allers wuz an onhealthy place!' "

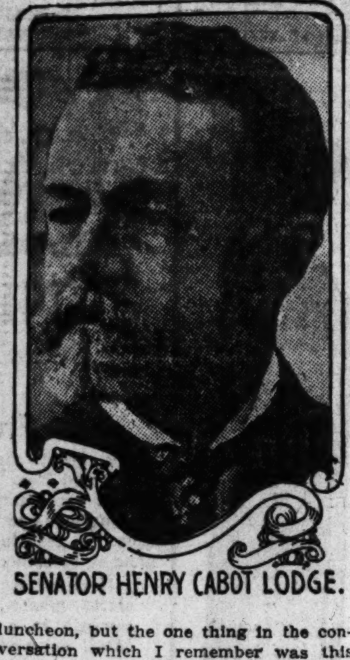
SENATOR LODGE'S STORIES OF FAMOUS MEN AND WOMEN

In His "Early Memories," He Gives Interesting Sidelights on Their Characters and Tells Many Anecdotes of Persons Who Have Figured in Great Events.



SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Massachusetts' scholarly Senator, whose good fortune it has been to know intimately nearly all the notable Americans who have lived within the last century, has written his biography, which is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, under the title, "Early Memories." Inasmuch as it does not touch on his political career, the inference is natural that there will be a second volume covering this phase of his life.

But the autobiography as it stands is a complete and highly interesting volume, abounding in good anecdotes of men whose names are known in every American household. From this abundance of good stories are culled the following especially delightful ones:

Webster as a Fisherman.

ONE of the quaintest of Senator Lodge's anecdotes is about Daniel Webster, who was a great friend of Henry Cabot, Lodge's grandfather. It is told by reproducing a letter Webster sent to Cabot, along with a present of some trout Webster had caught. It runs:

Dear Sir: I send you eight or nine brook trout which I took yesterday in that chief of all brooks, Mashpee. I made a long day of it, and with good success, for me. John was with me, full of good advice, but did not fish—nor carry a rod.

I took 26 trouts, all weighing ....17 lb 12 oz
The largest (you have him) weighed at Croker's ..... 2 lb 4 oz
The five largest .... 3 lb 5 oz
The eight largest ....11 lb 8 oz

I got these by following your advice, that is, by careful and thorough fishing of the difficult places, which others do not fish. The brook is fished nearly every day. I entered it, not so high up as we sometimes do, between 7 and 8 o'clock, and at 12 was hardly more than halfway down to the meeting house path. You see I did not hurry. The day did not hold out to fish the whole brook properly.

The largest trout I took at 3 p. m. (you see I am precise) below the meeting house, under a bush on the right bank two or three rods below the large beeches. It is singular that in the whole day I did not take two trouts out of the same hole. I found both ends or parts of the brook about equally productive. Small fish not plenty in either. So many hooks get everything which is not hid away in the manner large trouts take care of themselves. I hooked one which I suppose to be larger than any which I took, as he broke my line by fair pulling after I had pulled him out of his den and was playing him in fair open water.

Of what I send you, I pray you keep what you wish yourself, send three to Mr. Ticknor, & three to Dr. Warren; or two of the larger ones to each will perhaps be enough—& if there be any left there is Mr. Callender & Mr. Blake, & Mr. Davis, either of them not averse to fish. Pray let Mr. Davis see them, especially the large one—As he promised to come & fell back; I desire to excite his regrets. I hope you will have the large one on your own table.

The day was fine—not another hook in the brook. John steady as a Judge—and everything else exactly right. I never, on the whole, had so agreeable a day's fishing, tho' the result in pounds and numbers is not great—nor ever expect such another.

Please preserve this letter; but rehearse not these particulars to the uninitiated.

I think the Limerick not the best hook. Whether it pricks too soon, or for what other reason, I found or thought I found the fish more likely to let go his hold, from this, than from the old fashioned hook.

Yrs, D. WEBSTER.

Two Good Choate Yarns.

THE Senator also tells many anecdotes of the great lawyer, Rufus Choate, who was also an intimate of the Cabot and Lodge families. Here are two:

"After the junior counsel had thoroughly prepared the case he took the client, who wished to state his case to Mr. Choate personally, to see the senior counsel. The client began:

"'Of course, Mr. Choat, you understand the principle of the Jacquard loom?'

"'Certainly,' said Mr. Choate, who had never heard of the loom before; 'of course, of course. But assume for the moment that I do not understand the principle of the Jacquard loom and expound it to me as a preliminary.'

"There is one more story, and it shall be the last, which I am sure has never been printed, and which I heard in a curious way. When I was in Congress Gen. Butler, whom I had fought for years politically and whom I had never met, came one morning into the House. I happened to be passing near where he was standing and S. S. Cox of New York stopped me and introduced me to him.

"After a few words, Gen. Butler asked us to come over to his house, which was near the Capitol and is now the office of the Coast Survey, and lunch with him. We had a very pleasant luncheon, but the one thing in the conversation which I remember was this story of Choate. It was apropos of a certain claimant who just then had a bill before Congress to pay him for some improvement in rifles which he had made at the time of the war.

"'He was always inventing things,' said Gen. Butler. 'When he was a young man he invented some baking machinery and set up a factory equipped with it in New Hampshire. The invention wasn't worth a damn and the concern failed, and, of course (I liked Gen. Butler's "of course" at this point), it burned down. The insurance companies refused to pay and the claimant retained Mr. Choate and me to sue them.

"'I took charge of the case, but the claimant insisted on seeing Mr. Choate, and so one day I took him to Mr. Choate's office and the claimant told his story. When he had gone I said to Mr. Choate:

"'"What a liar our client is."

"'Mr. Choate looking at me with his melancholy eyes, replied:

"'"I would not say that, Mr. Butler, call him an inventor rather."'"

Napoleon the Little.

BEFORE he was 20, Lodge went to Europe and he records this impression of Napoleon III and the Empress Eugenie on seeing them for the first time:

"I remember very well the afternoon when I saw the Emperor and Empress returning from a review at Longchamps. She was then very pretty and graceful and looked like her pictures which I had stared at in the shop windows. She smiled and bowed and I thought that she seemed very pleasant and friendly.

"The Emperor, too, looked just as I had expected. He raised his hat at short intervals, but his face was expressionless and unsympathetic. I gazed at him with intense interest, for I supposed him to be a very great man, very mysterious, one whose word would affect the destinies of Europe, and I imagined that he was always revolving dark and intricate schemes, concealed by what even I could see was an ordinary, uninspiring face as rigid, in public at least as a mask. In this feeling I merely reflected the popular idea which a boy absorbs without effort from the current talk and from the atmosphere about him.

"Nevertheless when I saw the Emperor, as I did several times, although this particular occasion left the most vivid impress upon my memory, I was conscious of a strong sensation of disappointment. The actual man fell far short of what I had imagined. Yet the opinion I had formed was wrong and the instinctive feeling of disappointment was right.

"The Emperor had the talents of a conspirator in a high degree. He also had the gift, which is serviceable to so many lesser men, of holding his tongue and looking wise, the surest way in which a commonplace man can gain a great reputation not only for sagacity, but for ability and force, because nothing is more imposing than the unknown.

"As a matter of fact the third Napoleon was a man of ordinary capacity, weak, hesitating, easily influenced, and if not corrupt himself at least indifferent to corruption in others. When the mask was torn off, in 1870, all the world saw the man as he really was, but very few understood him in 1866, and even his enemies, who thought him wicked and cruel, believed him to be able, when as a matter of fact he was neither one nor the other."

When Washington Swore.

THE Senator records this very human story of Washington, as repeated by Story the sculptor-poet, from the narrative by a man who had known the "Father of His Country" intimately:

"It was at one of the most anxious periods of the war and if my memory serves me right immediately after the battle of Brandywine, when there was great doubt as to the exact position and movement of the British. Washington called a meeting of all the officers to discuss the situation and determine the best course to pursue. The consultation took place in Washington's tent.

"The night was very stormy and wild. Different views were taken by the officers and it became exceedingly important to know the exact position of the British across the river. Washington accordingly sent for an officer and directed him at once to cross the river and endeavor to discover where the British forces were and whether they were in movement and in what direction. The officer received his orders and departed, and Washington and his officers remained together in the tent awaiting his report.

"Hours passed by of impatience and anxiety. At last he returned. Washington was sitting at a little table on which were writing materials and a large heavy leaden inkstand.

"'Well,' he said as the officer returned, 'what is your report?' The officer in answer and with some hesitation replied that he regretted to say that he had found it impossible to cross the river on account of the severeness of the storm, the violence of the wind and rain and the swollen condition of the river; that he had done his best, but had found it impossible. Washington at this report glared at him an instant, and then seizing the great leaden inkstand, launched it at his head, exclaiming:

"'God damn your soul to hell! Be off with you and send me a man.'

"The officer vanished. He had had enough. In an hour or two he returned and gave his report. Washington had made it possible for him to cross the river and he was able to state the position of the enemy.

"Those, I think, were the exact words Washington used. They remain fixed and clear in my memory. They made Washington to me a more real and distinct person and accounted for his personal power and absoluteness of character more than all the dignified narratives of the buckram historians.

"I remember, too, that it was agreed by all who were present when this story was told that Washington could and did swear roundly and strongly on occasions and that when he met Lee in his retreat from Monmouth he swore at him with a vengeance and applied to him the most opprobrious epithets of unmeasured character and vehemence."

Dickens and Mrs. Kemble.

LODGE heard Mrs. Kemble read from Shakspeare and Dickens from his own works:

"Mrs. Kemble was then a stout, elderly woman and her beauty, so famous in her youth, had faded. She came upon the stage of the Music Hall in Boston plainly dressed in black. There were no theatrical adjuncts, no artificial aids of any kind. She read 'The Merchant of Venice,' and in five minutes one was conscious only of her dignity, the beauty of her voice, the marvel of her dramatic presentation. I sat entranced as the play gradually unrolled itself before my mental vision, as the characters, carefully differentiated by the voice alone, passed over the stage and as the exquisite poetry chimed and murmured in my ears.

"Dickens was a sharp contrast. I had a boyish adoration of his books, and I looked forward with intense excitement to seeing and hearing him. I heard him several times and I shall never forget the joy of listening to the trial scene from 'Pickwick.' Yet after it was all over the general effect left on my mind was a feeling of vague disappointment. I could not have explained that feeling then, but I think that I can now.

"Dickens as an actor, and he acted in his readings, was vivid, effective, full of force, energy and dramatic power; but he lacked exactly what Mrs. Kemble possessed—dignity, reserve, refinement, scholarship and high training. You never forgot for a moment that Mrs. Kemble was a lady. You were haunted by a suspicion that Dickens was not quite a gentleman; that somewhere there lurked the traces of the London cockney. I say this as a devoted lover and admirer of Dickens."

BREATHE FREELY! OPEN NOSTRILS AND STUFFED HEAD—END CATARRH

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear. —ADV.

ANNOUNCING the Inauguration ON MONDAY, NOVEMBER THIRD, of a Piano Salon which in Character, Ideals and True Progressiveness will at once maintain the traditions of St. Louis' highest musical art, and open the door of piano opportunity to the entire community of music-lovers. A most cordial invitation is extended to you to be present.

Chickering Vose Fischer Haines Bros.
Brambach Milton Vandervoort Stratford

WITH the opening of Vandervoort's tomorrow morning will occur the inauguration of a new department, so exceptional that it will take its place as supreme in its field.

Vandervoort's Piano Salon has been conceived in the spirit of music, and into this superb salon has been transported Pianos and Player-Pianos whose names are symbolic of the history of fine piano manufacture in America.

Jonas Chickering was the pioneer of modern piano construction, and from the establishment of the Chickering Piano Company in 1823, until the present day, the Chickering Piano has stood as the first and foremost in tone beauty and piano quality.

Then such other names as "Fischer," "Vose," "Haines Bros.," "Brambach," "Milton" and "Stratford"—while not all of as ancient lineage—have become famous in maintaining the high standard of American pianos.

This inauguration announcement will serve to introduce a new piano, and a new player-piano—THE VANDERVOORT. They are moderate-priced instruments, excellent indeed in their worth and reliability. The Vandervoort Piano is made especially for this store. It comes to us as a new piano without the prestige of a name known in the piano world, but with a name that is respected and honored in the Southwest as representative of straightforward reliability. The name "Vandervoort" could never have been taken for a piano of other than secure quality.

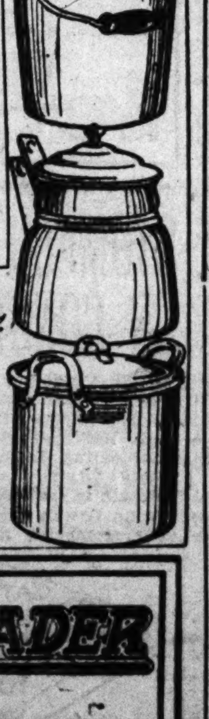
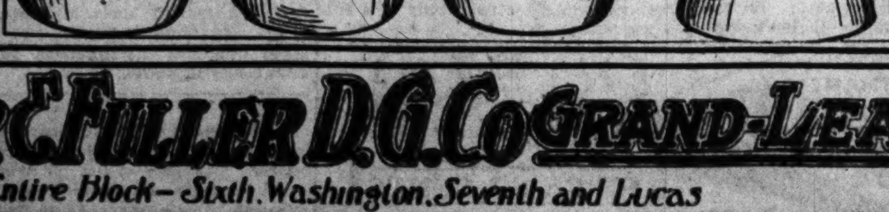
ALUM-ELITE AUSTRIA





Another Big Reduction in Pianos
To Go in Effect Tomorrow in Anticipation of the Arrival of Large Shipments of Holiday Instruments.

It is hardly necessary for us to recall how we purchased at the trustee's bankrupt sale the entire stock of the Bollman Bros.' Piano Co., for so many years in business at 1120 Olive street, this city.

It was by far the greatest piano-buying transaction the city of St. Louis has ever known. In fact, there have been few larger transactions of the kind in the entire country during the last twenty years. This wonderful purchase resulted in a tremendous sale, and our patrons have been benefiting to the fullest extent. The sale is now taking place.

Remember, that even though the prices are the lowest on record, you may still take advantage of the easiest terms of payment.

MUSEUM EXHIBIT OF AMERICAN ART ABOUT TO CLOSE

St. Louisans Are Afforded Fine Opportunity to Compare Works of Nations.

PROVINCIAL NOTE ABSENT

Purchase of Several of Best Paintings Now Loaned Is Under Consideration.

By F. E. A. CURLEY,
Curator of the City Art Museum.

This is the closing Sunday for the City Art Museum's eighth annual exhibition of selected American paintings. The exhibition is of national character, and is the standard by which the St. Louis public may compare American art with that of other nations.

Important exhibitions of art from European countries also are shown at the Art Museum from time to time, so that the opportunities for comparison are provided right here in St. Louis. An exhibition of contemporary Spanish art is to come to the museum in a few weeks. The summer loan exhibition of paintings from St. Louis homes also has shown the public fine examples of European painting, by old as well as modern masters.

comparing these exhibitions, the critic must concede at once that the stronger American painters of today are masters of their technique, and fairly to be ranked with the very best of other countries.

Brilliant Effects Achieved.

There is nothing provincial about American art, as shown in this exhibition. To a student familiar with the "influences" and "schools," this American art indeed throbs with all the "movements" known to the art of the modern world. "Impressionism" and "post-impressionism" both are represented. The thing that most is insisted upon, apparently, is that the effect shall be brilliant. In striving for this, the Ameriacn artist yields to no foreign competitor.

On the other hand, frequent criticism has been made of late that American art is cosmopolitan rather than national in character. At first some of us were inclined to accept this seemingly appreciative charge, and even take pride in it, as being an acknowledgment that American art is too big to be merely national. In it must flower the best inspiration of all the world, says patriotism. The word "cosmopolitan" sounded good. But it was not without the flavor of irony and of satire somewhat deserved. What was meant was not so much that American art combines the excellencies which the art of other countries struggles for. It was meant to convey in a word the idea that American art reflects that of Europe, and with all its brilliance lacks originality.

American Character Reflected.

There is, of course, a basis for this charge, and it is more apparent in the work of American artists who live and work in Europe, than in the pictures done by those who do most of their work on their own side of the Atlantic. However much the latter are impressed by European painting, they are bound to get into their work some of the vital American character and quality that make and stamp this nation.

These painters who work here in their own country are, after all, the most instructive and interesting artists of our day for the American public. They include men like W. M. Chase, Horatio Walker, Edmund C. Tarbell and other considerable masters whose pictures in the present exhibition would be notable additions to any country's art. These really great and highly individual painters have, however, the dash of Americanism in them, and splendid as is their work, it would be exotic and foreign-flavored in, say, the art of France.

The exhibition demonstrates again that there is such a thing as American art, and that this deserves the sincere attention of all American art lovers is obvious.

Permanent Collection Grows.

Several of the best pictures in the American exhibition probably will become the property of the City Art Museum, as their purchase from the City Art Museum Fund has been considered. The museum is building up a very fine collection of American art, and a number of the best contributors to the present exhibition already are represented.

The remarkable still life by W. M. Chase already has been obtained for the permanent collection. It is a splendid piece of technical work. None but Chase could have done such a thing. It is a fine composition in color, in light and arrangement of the objects, to start with. But its originality, its remarkable nature, is in another quality. Other masters can make bold strokes of the brush represent texture astonishingly. Chase in his wonderful portrayals of fish life not only does this, but manages to insinuate all the slimy fish character that lies beneath the magnificently suggested eyes, scales and markings. In a way it is almost an uncanny art. The picture is a splendid example for art students.

Marines by William Ritschel and Frederick J. Waugh also may remain in the permanent collections.

Sunday, under the new arrangement, following the installation of lights, the museum will remain open from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., continuously. Many who already have seen the collection repeatedly will go again tomorrow to see it under the brilliant effect of the artificial light.

Next Sunday the eighteenth annual exhibition of the Society of Western Artists will be opened, in three galleries in the west wing.

Operetta by St. Mark's Sodality.

The Young Women's Sodality of St. Mark's Church will give an operetta the evenings of Nov. 5 and 6, at the school hall, Academy avenue and Page boulevard. Twenty-five will take part in the play, which will be followed by a dance.

STOMACH SOUR, HEADACHY, BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED? TAKE CASCARETS.

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness dizziness and sick headache, means your stomach is sour—your liver is torpid—your bowels constipated. It isn't your stomach's fault—it isn't indigestion—it's biliousness and constipation. Try Cascarets; they sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, fermenting food and foul gases; take bile from the liver and carry off the waste matter from the system. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning.

Repeats Advice to Use Mentho-Laxene Medicine, Which Anyone Can Make at Home Cheaper Than Labeled Goods—Purer and Better, Too.

People who've "barrels of money" probably won't appreciate this advice.

This is for the reader who knows the value of every five-cent piece, and usually it saves from 40 to 100 five-cent pieces for those who are informed. Buying medicine in dribs costs more than making a big supply yourself. Buying ordinary patent medicines means that you pay too much for syrups, corks, bottles, labels, cartons, etc. For instance, if you buy a 25-cent bottle of cough medicine, it contains about two ounces, four-fifths of which is syrup—and for 25 cents you can make one-half gallon of syrup.

By making Mentho-Laxene medicine at home you save lots of money on syrup, alone, and besides you know it's pure and quickly effective. Let us prove then that the best and cheapest way to overcome coughs, colds, catarrh, and to prevent pneumonia, diphtheria, la grippe, is to make this fine big supply of medicine, by mixing one-half pint of boiling water with a pint of granulated sugar. Then, buy the pure concentrated essence Mentho-Laxene (a 2½-oz. bottle) empty it into a pint bottle or jar and fill it up with the syrup. Directions with each bottle tells how to make and take, while the manufacturers guarantee to refund money to any dissatisfied purchaser. You run no risk and will have on hand a medicine which has never been equaled for colds, coughs, bronchitis, catarrh, hoarseness, etc. Its tonic laxative action aids the entire system to a healthy basis, and fatal diseases are thus logically prevented from reaching a dangerous point.—ADVERTISEMENT.

AMERICAN SOPRANO FOR SYMPHONY'S FIRST PROGRAM

Mlle. Yvonne de Treville Will Sing "Rigoletto" Aria at Opening Concert.

SHE'S HER OWN MANAGER

Singer Made Booking Arrangements Over Country Without Usual Assistants.

In presenting Yvonne de Treville as the soloist in its first pair of concerts this season, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra is following a custom established six years ago—that of having an American artist as the feature of its opening program. Sometimes the orchestra has chosen a local singer or instrumentalist, sometimes not. But always, since Max Zach has been conductor, the soloist has been American either by birth or residence.

Mlle. de Treville comes for a re-engagement. She sang with the orchestra two seasons ago and so delighted her audiences that her return is in response to a popular demand. She will give in this week's programs one of her most admired songs, the "Cara Nome" aria from "Rigoletto." Her voice is of the coloratura type and is so flexible as to place her in a class almost by herself.

Is Her Own Booking Agent.

Recently this singer has been creating much interest in the musical world by acting as her own booking and publicity agent. She made a tour through the United States this last summer arranging her winter's engagements. She asserts she has obtained much better results by doing it all herself than she ever had when in the hands of a professional manager.

She spent more than a fortnight in St. Louis, visiting at the residence of Mrs. William McMillan in Portland place, and was much entertained by friends here. She again will be Mrs. McMillan's guest this week and will be the guest of honor at numerous small teas and luncheons. She is expected to arrive Tuesday and remain until the following Sunday.

The orchestral portion of the opening programs, Nov. 7-8, will be especially notable. The orchestra will for the first time follow the custom established by Eastern orchestras of playing a memorial number for a recently deceased citizen, and, by a remarkable coincidence, two of the remaining numbers on the program will be identical with the programs of the first concerts of the Borton Symphony and the Thomas Orchestra of Chicago.

Programs for Nov. 7 and 8.

Following is the complete program for the concerts of Friday afternoon, Nov. 7, and Saturday evening, Nov. 8:

Wagner—Siegfried's Death Music, from Die Gotterdammerung (In memorium, Adolphus Busch).
Beethoven—Symphony No. 7, Op. 92.
I—Poco sostenuto; Vivace.
II—Allegretto.
III—Presto: Presto meno assai.
IV—Allegro con brio.
Handel—Recitative and Aria, from L'Allegro e il Penseroso.
Sibelius—Symphonic Poem, En Saga.
Verdi—Aria, Cara Nome, from Rigoletto.
Brahms—Overture, Academic Festival, Op. 80.

GEE WHIZ! Don't miss this: Go to Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d floor, 308 N. 6th st. They will sell you a diamond on credit.

HOFMANN IN RECITAL IN ST. LOUIS NOV. 13

Liszt Sonata in B Minor, Rarely Attempted, to Be on Program 'n Odeon.

Josef Hofmann, the pianist, who will give a recital in the Odeon Thursday evening, Nov. 13, under the direction of Hattie B. Gooding, is one of the few child prodigies who "made good' in after life. Today he is considered by many to be the greatest living pianist. When only six years old he was playing the most difficult compositions in public.

His early musical education was under the direction of his father, Casimir Hoffmann, a teacher and conductor famous in his day, who accompanied him to America on his first tour. Josef was only 10 years old, and his father conducted the Boston Orchestra for the concert at which the boy made his first American appearance. Max Zach, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, was a member of the Boston Orchestra at that time.

Mr. Hofmann's program for the St. Louis recital ranges from the Liszt Sonata in B minor, which is seldom attempted by even the greatest pianists because of its tremendous difficulty, to Chopin waltzes and nocturnes, and includes the ever-welcome Beethoven Sonate Pathetique, and the Handel Variations in B minor.

New Clothing House Opens on Franklin Avenue.

Franklin avenue has a new addition to its long line of retail merchants doing business between Fourth and Twelfth streets in the firm of Driscoll & Mosley. This concern is a corporation owned by John Driscoll, who was for 20 years with a St. Louis clothing house, and C. A. Mosley, also equally prominent in the local field, having been [illegible] years with one of the largest men's [illegible] apparel houses in the city. The [illegible] occupies the entire building [illegible] Franklin avenue and deals ex[illegible]ly in ready-to-wear men's cloth[illegible] at $10 and $15, and made-to-order [illegible] and $25.

Murder Suspect Proves Alibi.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Roy Blackburne, arrested here recently and charged with murder at Grand Rapids, Mich., was given his liberty today when he produced 16 witnesses to prove that at the time of the crime in Grand Rapids he was working in a Chicago saloon.

MISS CLARK WILL BUY HOUSE'S WEDDING GIFT

Speaker's Daughter Suggested to Make Purchase for Miss Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Members of the House of Representatives are exhibiting much interest in the selection of their wedding gift for Miss Jessie Wilson, the White House bride-to-be. While no definite decision has been reached as to the character of the gift, most of the members are said to favor silver. It is thought likely, therefore, that a valuable silver service will be selected.

Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of the Speaker of the House, will play an important part in the selection of the gift. The suggestion that Miss Clark should give her advice in the matter, came from Minority Leader Mann, who also started the movement for a present for the President's daughter. Miss Clark is visiting friends in Northern New Jersey and it is understood that she will shortly visit the shops in New York City to look at the latest creations there and report later.

TRANSIT STOCKHOLDERS WOULD AMEND SUITS

Motion Asks That All Be Made Parties to Johnson Cases.

A motion was filed in Judge Hitchcock's court yesterday asking that the dismissal as to certain defendants of the suit of James Brooks Johnson, testing liability of stockholders for judgments against the old Transit Company, be set aside and that such defendants or their legal representatives be again made parties to the case.

The motion was filed by the law firm of Schnurmacher & Rassieur, representing defendants E. H. Conrades, E. C. Donk, W. C. Uhri, A. G. Nulsen, G. H. Wetterer and W. J. Hutchinson. They complain that Johnson permitted the suit to abate as to the late Joseph S. Taussig and Alanson D. Brown and has not taken action to revive the cause against their estates.

The late William P. Kennett also was a defendant in the suit, but the plaintiff has refused to make his estate a party in his place and has permitted it to abate as to him, it is set forth. Johnson also refused to revive the action against the estates of Bennett Wasserman and Charles H. Huttig, who were defendants at the time they died, and has dismissed it as to them, the motion avers. oJhnson also voluntarily relieved Charles McL. Clark and Samuel W. Adler and they no longer are defendants, it is set forth.

The complaining defendants assert the plaintiff had no right to relieve any defendant of liability without the consent of other defendants.

The Johnson case is pending before Judge Hitchcock on exceptions to the report of a referee, who recommended judgments in favor of the plaintiff for about $40,000. The defendants who filed the motion say that should the ruling be affirmed they would be liable proportionately for the part the defendants dismissed from the case of their representatives should pay.

MOUNTAIN ROAD MAY BE ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED

Arizona Officials Approve Plan to Increase Night Splendor of 100-Mile Scenic Way.

GLOBE, Ariz., Nov. 1.—An electrically lighted mountain highway, 100 miles long and costing $100,000 a year, is to be projected by J. S. Miles of Globe. The scheme, Miles says, has the approval of the Board of Supervisors of Gila County and he is seeking aid of the Water Users' Association, interested in irrigation projects along the route.

The distance between Globe and Phoenix is 100 miles. The road traverses a region unequaled in mountain scenery in the State and has become a popular pleasure drive. Automobilists particularly are interested in it. The road is impressive even in the darkness, but its splendor is exhibited best when the moon shines brightly on the mountain sides and Salt River and other streams. Great, vast voids that seem to be the ultimate realms of nowhere stretch away into the mountains.

Miles proposes lamp posts 125 feet high and scattered 28 to the mile. He estimates the cost would be 10 cents a night for each lamp.

Gives Life for a Football.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—James Lloyd of Abernant went into a disused clay pit in search of a lost football, was overcome by poisonous gas, and, although brought out alive, died afterwards.

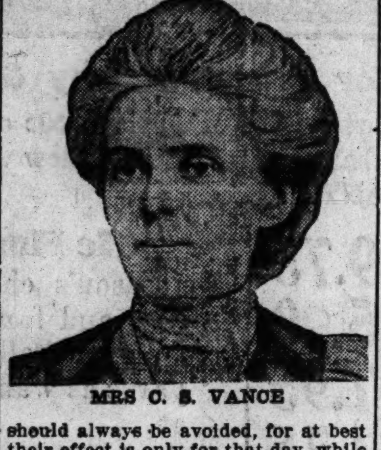
What Is a Woman's Beauty but Health

And the Basis of Her Health and Vigor Lies in the Careful Regulation of the Bowels.

If woman's beauty depended upon cosmetics, every woman would be a picture of loveliness. But beauty lies deeper than that. It lies in health. In the majority of cases the basis of health, and the cause of sickness, can be traced to the bowels.

The headaches, the lassitude, the sallow skin and the lusterless eyes are usually due to constipation. So many things that women do habitually conduce to this trouble. They do not eat carefully, they eat indigestible foods because the foods are served daintily and they do not exercise enough. But whatever the particular cause may be it is important that the condition should be corrected.

An ideal remedy for women, and one especially suited to their delicate requirements, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which thousands of women indorse highly, among them Mrs. C. S. Vance of 511 S. Ray St., New Castle, Pa. At times she had spells of indigestion so severe that she thought she would die. Syrup Pepsin regulated her stomach and bowels, and she attributes her excellent health today to this remedy.



MRS C. S. VANCE

All the family can use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, for thousands of mothers give it to babies and children. It is also admirably suited to the requirements of elderly people, in fact to all who by reason of age or infirmity cannot stand harsh salts, cathartics, pills or purgatives. These should always be avoided, for at best their effect is only for that day, while a genuine remedy like Syrup Pepsin acts mildly but permanently.

It can be conveniently obtained at any drug store at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded. You will find it gentle in action, pleasant in taste, and free from griping, and its tonic properties have a distinct value to women. It is the most widely used laxative-tonic in America today and thousands of families are now never without it.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

"Anatolian."

WELCOME to another volume in English from the inimitable Anatole France! It is "The Opinions of Jerome Coignard." (Lane.) The Abbe Coignard is a progressive priest, of a large humanity, and a gently ironic philosophy. This he expounds delightfully at the bookseller's in the Rue St. Jacques, at the sign of the Image de Sainte Catherine, or at the cookshop at the sign of the Reine Pedauque, punctuating it always with a pot of wine at the Petit Bacchus. That the result is at times boldly broad in the classic manner is rather characteristic than shocking. Hear the Abbe on the "malice of thought:"

"Thought is a great infirmity. God keep you from it, Tournebroche, my son, as He has kept his greatest saints, and the souls for whom He cherishes a singular predilection, and for whom He reserves eternal glory. Men who think little, or who think not at all, go about their business happily in this world and the next, while the meditative soul is incessantly menaced with its temporal and spiritual loss. Such malice lies in thought! Reflect and tremble, my son, at the thought that the serpent of Genesis is the oldest of philosophers and their everlasting prince."

Seeing the Pole Star.

IT happened one night that the Abbe accompanied a certain captain while he was instructing his men how to find their way by the stars. He started off by saying that the soldiers must begin by searching for the Pole star, which is fixed in relation to the other stars. Then he stopped, and said in the Abbe's ear:

"Show me this beggar of a Pole star, Abbe. The devil take me if I can distinguish it in this mess of candle-ends with which the sky is littered!"

I told him at once the way to find it, and pointed it out with my finger. "Oh, Oh!" cried he, "the silly thing is perched very high. From where we are we cannot see it without straining our necks." And he immediately gave orders to his officers to withdraw the men 50 paces so they should more easily see the Pole star. * * * It is this uncouthness that I cannot endure in the army.

Poachers' Petticoats.

IN a pleasant volume about old-fashioned country life in Dorsetshire, entitled "The Year's Mind" (Nash), by the author of "Leaves from a Life," we read that women exist who practice egg poaching as a trade—the eggs being those of pheasants and partridges—while pretending to be hunting about for broken wood:

"I know of some petticoats so hemmed and formed that about 200 eggs can be carried in their skirts, each in a snug, wadded pocket of its own. Advertisements help these female poachers to dispose of their wares; one finds the nests sometimes, but the eggs are gone; the pheasants, no doubt reared from one's own eggs, are brought and turned out, and this is sport!"

A French Comedy.

WHEN John Rudyerd was building his famous wooden Eddystone Lighthouse, he was much harassed by the depredations of French privateers. Thus, on one memorable day all his men were surprised while at work, and borne off in triumph to France as prisoners of war—the capturers thinking they had done something very smart. But Louis XIV did not approve at all and promptly ordered the men's release.

"Their work," he said, "is for the benefit of all nations. I am at war with England, not with humanity." The tale is told by Frederick A. Talbot in his enthralling book, "Lightships and Lighthouses" (Heinemann).

Wife or Wives?

PERCY was a whimsical Turkish guide at Constantinople. Pointing out the Sultan's harem one day, he said:

" 'This Sultan has seven wives and 100 assistant wives; the last one had 365,' and he added, with a touch of bitterness: 'I have only three.'

"Next he begged me to take him to England with me.

" 'But,' I said, 'you couldn't have three wives there, Percy.'

" 'All right,' he answered, cheerfully, 'I take one and sell other two.' "

The anecdote is from "Travels Without Baedeker," by Ardern Beaman (Lane).

More About Women.

WHEN visiting St. Sophia Beaman asked Percy whether he thought women had souls and could go to heaven.

"No, sir, they are all devils and go to hell," he replied promptly and with conviction.

On arriving at one of the little islands in the Sea of Marmora, Percy remarked: "Climate very clean; ladies go in water without any clothes, same as Europe." Then, fearing he had been indiscreet, he hastened to add: "Excuse me, sirs, excuse me very much, excuse me very much indeed."

A Tale of Trollope.

TROLLOPE found his defective vision very hampering when out with the hounds, but his popularity in the field generally brought him timely relief. Once, when he had been making up lost ground after a fall in the middle of a plowed field, his cry for help was answered by Sir Evelyn Wood: "For heaven's sake," exclaimed Trollope, "be careful; I'm afraid to move lest I should trample on my spectacles, which have just fallen off my nose.'

Quick as thought, the future Field Marshal alighted from his horse and retrieved the glasses. Having fitted them to his nose, Trollope rejoined the hunt with as much serene sturdiness as if the little contretemps had never occurred.—From "Anthony Trollope: His Work, Associates and Originals," by T. H. S. Escott (Lane).

Mystery of a Pseudonym.

E. SCOTT recalls that it was Dickens alone who solved the mystery about the identity of "George Eliot" which then agitated literary circles. He guessed it from the description of Hetty Sorrell doing up her back hair. Only a woman and one of first-rate genius could have written that, he said.

"Papa wishes me to say he feels sure Adam Bede is either by Bradbury or Evans, and he doesn't think it's Evans," wrote his daughter to a correspondent on the subject. B. and E. were the printers associated with Dickens; Miss Marian Evans was, of course, Mrs. G. H. Lewes.

A Swift Story.

IN his little volume, "The Errors of Bulwer Lytton's Biographers" (Lynwood), W. A. Frose recalls the following anecdote: At a dinner party given by the Bulwers, Swift came up as a conversational topic.

"Who is this Dr. Swift, Rosina," said Mrs. Wyndham Lewis to Mrs. Bulwer when the ladies had retired to the drawing room, "that they have been talking about? Can I ask him to my parties?"

"Hardly so."

"Why not?"

"Because he did a thing some years since which effectually prevented his ever appearing again in society."

"What was that?"

"Why, he only died a hundred years ago."

Equally marvelous exposure of biographical errors throughout his book is an awful warning to the slapdash person who neglects to verify his facts.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

The Brand of Cane.

FROST quotes (in two differing versions) a bon mot of Samuel Rogers. Here is Miss Devey's account:

"Mrs. Bulwer was sitting by the side of Rogers, in the drawing room after a dinner party, when Disraeli, who had been lounging in a cane-seated chair, crossed the room, with his coat-tails, as usual, over each arm, leaving his dark green velvet adorables with the marks of the chair on them, fully visible. Rogers asked, 'Who is that?' 'Oh, young Disraeli, the Jew,' answered Mrs. Bulwer. 'Rather the wandering Jew, with the brand of Cane on him,' said Rogers."

Three Would Be Carnival Queen.

The committee in charge of the Knights of Father Mathew Carnival, Nov. 18 and 19, met last night at Sarah street and Cook avenue. Miss Loyola Hogan of 3853 Botanical avenue, Miss Ida Riley and Miss Eilleen Moynihan have entered the contest for queen of the carnival.

It Touches DOWN on the Keys

MELVILLE CLARK'S

APOLLO

The Player Piano

YOU know that there is only one correct way to play a piano and that is down on the keys. This is such a self-evident fact that it would seem unnecessary to reiterate it. But we are compelled to call your attention to this fundamental in piano playing because every piano player manufacturer, except Melville Clark, is selling an instrument that does not play directly down on the keys.

The Melville Clark Piano Company owns the exclusive right to make an inside player that plays directly down on the keys. We are protected in this right by United States patents. And because of these patents Melville Clark's Apollo is the only player-piano in the world that actually has the human touch.

The greatest discovery in the world of music was the principle of the piano forte credited to Bartholomeo Christofori and applied by him in 1707 to the first piano. Through all the improvements that have been made since that time the great musicians and master builders not only have retained, but have demonstrated and emphasized the necessity of the principle that a piano must be played with a downward stroke on the keys.

Then, instead of buying an instrument that destroys the efficiency of the piano, you should buy an Apollo which plays all the 88 notes with a downward stroke and gets out of any composition all the delightful harmonies that were written into it.

With the Apollo you can, at will, instantly omit the melody, play only the accompaniment and play it in any desired key.

Come and see the Apollo, the player piano that owns exclusively the Metronome Motor, the Clark transposing device, the Clark Accentor and other things that make it a complete musician.

We are the exclusive agents in this territory for the Apollo, also Kimball and Kieselhorst Pianos and Players. We allow liberally for used pianos and player-pianos taken in exchange and arrangements can be made for convenient payments.

PARCEL POST AT ST. LOUIS SCORES CONSTANT GAINS

Average Number of Parcels Handled Daily in Early October Is 50,300.

61,000 RECORD REACHED

Postmaster Selph Says New C. O. D. and Insurance Facilities Add Impetus.

The extraordinary growth of the parcel post is shown in a report made yesterday by Postmaster Selph. Each month shows a marked increase in the number of packages dispatched by St. Louis merchants. The record number of packages was handled in one day on Oct. 22, when 61,000 pieces passed through the St. Louis office. Forty-eight thousand packages were sent from St. Louis and 13,000 were received. Postmaster Selph says the cause of this increase is that country merchants do not have to keep so much dead stock, as with the parcel post they can send to St. Louis dealers and get anything customers desire in a short time and at small cost.

The approximate number of fourth-class packages handled daily prior to Jan. 1, 1913, was as follows: Dispatched, 6000; delivered, 2500; total, 8500. The average of parcels handled since the parcel post has been in effect is as follows: January: Dispatched, 27,000; delivered, 7500; total 34,500. March: Dispatched, 0,000; delivered, 10,000; total, 40,000. May: Dispatched, 35,000; delivered, 9000; total, 4,000. October 1 to 15: Dispatched, 39,- 00; delivered, 10,500; total, 50,300.

Two Daily Business Deliveries.

"Two parcel post deliveries," said Postmaster Selph, "are made daily in the business district bounded by Chouteau avenue on the south, Jefferson avenue on the west, Biddle street on the north, and the Mississippi River on the east. One parcel post delivery is made daily in the remaining territory, including the suburbs.

"Parcels may be insured against oss in any amount equivalent to heir actual value, but not to exceed 25 in one case, on payment of a fee f 5 cents or not to exceed $50 on ayment of a fee of 10 cents in addiion to the postage, both to be preaid by stamps affixed.

"The sender of a mailable parcel of urth-class matter may have the price the article and the charges thereon llected from the addressee on payent of a fee of 10 cents in postage amps affixed, provided the amount to collected does not exceed $100. Such parcel will be insured against loss, ithout additional charge, in an amount uivalent to its actual value, but not exceed $50.

"The limit of weight of a parcel post ckage is 20 pounds in the first and cond zones (150 miles) and 11 pounds any distance beyond the second zone. rishable matter is not mailable bend the second zone.

Continued Gain Expected.

n six months of the first year of the ration of the parcel post 300,000,000 rcels passed through the hands of the stoffices of the United States, and it predicted that in the second year the al will approximate 1,000,000,000 pars. It has won its success as a stimut to a greater business connection ween the merchant and his cuser."

he Postoffice receipts at St. Louis October, 1913, were $497,458.96, compared to $443,479.87 in Octo- 1912, an increase of $53,979.09, or 17 per cent.

MISSION IN HOUSTON, TEX., MAINTAINS OWN JAIL

Disorderly Men Kept in Confinement Till They Regain Self-Possession.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 1.—This city has the only mission that maintains its own jail.

S. J. Williams, superintendent of the Star of Hope Mission, has just built a calaboose, where he will confine men when they become disorderly and need discipline. The prisoners will be kept in the "jail" until they recover self-possession. The prison has a chair and a bed and a "warden" stays in a room adjoining.

One of the men who helped build the jail became refractory and was locked up in it. He found so many faults with the quarters that he insisted upon making changes in the structure, and worked with uncommon zeal when he was released.

LACK OF POSTMASTER ASPIRANT WORRIES CITY

Examination for Roosevelt, Ariz., Eligibles to Be Readvertised—No Applicants First Time.

ROOSEVELT, Ariz., Nov. 1.—Apparently not a man in Arizona cares to occupy the position of Postmaster of the town named after the most strenuous of Presidents. Another examination has been scheduled for Nov. 7. D. G. Burtis, Acting Postmaster, does not care to hold the job a minute longer than necessary.

The postmastership was made vacant recently by the resignation of the incumbent, who was named Assistant Postmaster at Clifton, Ariz.

PRESIDENT OF LOCAL BUSINESS FIRM GIVES OPINION ON TOPIC OF INTEREST

Mr. L. Jablowa, a Well-Known St. Louis Business Man, Has Tried Plant Juice and Gives Opinion.

There is not a better known business man in St. Louis than Mr. L. Jablowa, president of the St. Louis Ice Cream Soda Company at 517-519 South Jefferson avenue. Mr. Jablowa has been in business here for twenty years and has a host of friends who will read his statement with great interest. He says:

"I have been taking your Plant Juice as a general tonic and builder and for stomach trouble. I have been run down and my general health in poor condition for some time. Last year I took a trip to Los Angeles, Cal., for my health and I can say that Plant Juice has done me more real good than the trip to California. I have taken four bottles and am feeling better than I have for a long time."

Statements from well-known citizens appear each day in all the leading papers of the State, men of influence and standing, who have tried this great remedy and lend their names through a desire to help suffering humanity.

These letters from your own home people should at least inspire you with confidence to try Plant Juice, even if you have tried many others without result. A trial is all we ask. After that you will be just as great an enthusiast as the rest. If you suffer from stomach trouble, indigestion, with gas and bloating or a feeling of weight and coldness in the stomach, no appetite, coated tongue, sour risings in the throat, or feel run down and debilitated from overwork or worry, Plant Juice will fix you up all right. It strengthens and builds up the whole system and will make you feel like a different person. Get a bottle from the Plant Juice man at the Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. store and if it does not help you he will return your money.—ADV.

WOMAN HELPS COACH A FOOTBALL TEAM

After Watching Practice, Mrs. Burckhart Suggests She Can Teach Players.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 1.—We have women baseball magnates and women in almost every form of human endeavor, but here is a brand new field for the sex, coach of a football team. Cincinnati has produced the first woman to engage in this sport. She is Mrs. Charles Burckhart of Price Hill, a suburb. Mrs. Burckhart is an ardent advocate of outdoor life. She loves baseball, swimming, rowing and the like, but takes an even keener delight in football.

Mrs. Burckhart is an athlete in every sense of the word and in her school days performed on several Vassar teams.

Just now she is chief assistant to Coach Miller of the Price Hill eleven. She understands football thoroughly and watched the team in practice several nights before she asked to be allowed to join the coaching squad and assist in teaching several plays used by Eastern teams. Permission was granted and she has been active in practice hours.

Mrs. Burckhart will appear on the side lines Sunday in a game between Price Hill and East Night High School.

Jewish Women Will Give Ball.

The St. Louis Women's Auxiliary of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society will give a mask ball at Westminster Hall Wednesday evening, Dec. 10. Prizes will be given for the most comical and most beautiful costumes.

LETTER SIGNED BY "MAN SHE KILLED" PUZZLES A WOMAN

Mrs. Belle Hotchkiss Thinks Perhaps She Shot Brother-in-law's Brother.

GREAT BEND, Kan., Nov. 1.—After 12 years doubt has been raised as to the identity of the man Mrs. Belle Hotchkiss killed in Ellinwood, Kan., for which offense she served 30 months in prison. She was convicted on the theory that the man was James A. Duffy, divorced husband of her sister.

Doubt as to the identity of the dead man was raised by a letter printed in a recent issue of a Kansas City newspaper in which James A. Duffy asks information of the whereabouts of his four children. The ages and other information concerning the children are correctly stated and Mrs. Hotchkiss is inclined to believe the father she believed that she had killed wrote the letter.

The story as Mrs. Hotchkiss tells it is that her sister and Duffy lived in Ohio and when William, the youngest of their four children, was four months old, Duffy was convicted of theft and his wife obtained a divorce, while he was in prison, removed to Wichita, remarried and went to Mexico, leaving her four children to drift except for what care Mrs. Hotchkiss could give to them. The aunt placed the three older children in good homes and took William into her home.

Father Takes Baby.

The next year Duffy came to Great Bend and took William from Mrs. Hotchkiss and removed to Ellinwood, where he opened a shoe shop. In 1901, when William was five years old, he was shot in the knee, by accident the father reported. Mrs. Hotchkiss renewed her efforts to get custody of him and eventually did so through investigation of a children's home officer who charged that the child was ill-treated while wounded.

A few days later Mrs. Hotchkiss heard that Duffy had said that he would be $4000 better off if Mrs. Hotchkiss was dead. She thought this referred to insurance she had taken for $1000 in favor of each of her sister's children. She learned then that her policy and other papers were missing. She caused a search warrant to be issued and accompanied the officers to Duffy's shop to identify her papers if they were found.

While she was in the shop, she says, Duffy cursed her, but, under order of the Sheriff, she did not answer. While the officer's back was turned, she says, Duffy threw a shoe last at her and she became so enraged that she shot all of the bullets in a revolver that she carried into him.

She was arrested at once and was informed that Duffy died that night. She was tried for his murder and convicted and served her term. Now she is plainly puzzled and the only explanation she can make is that she killed Duffy's brother.

"Duffy had a brother, George," she says, "who was so much like him that his wife, my sister, said if they were dressed alike she could only tell the difference in that George had a crooked little finger. I remember now that after Duffy came to this town sometimes when I would mention things that James ought to know he would say he didn't remember that and change the subject. The man who died might have been George, who used the boy to excite sympathy. This letter in the newspaper is a fake or Jim Duffy did not die and was spirited away. I don't know what to think."

Mrs. Hotchkiss has mailed a copy of the newspaper containing the letter to each of her sister's children, with whom she has kept in touch. She says they are in good homes, but she declines to state where. She says they all know the family history.

GERMAN MISSION WILL TRAIN TURKISH ARMY

Arrangement Is Completed Giving Commanders Greater Power Than Heretofore.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 1.—The Turkish Government today completed arrangements for the employment of a German military mission, headed by one of the younger German Generals, for the reorganization of the Ottoman army.

Greater powers are to be given to the instructors than were given to Field Marshal Kolmar von der Goltz, who had charge of the training of the Turkish army for some years. Some Turks hope that this will result in the elimination of politics from the army and contribute to the stability of the Government.

GAME LEAGUE TO MEET

The Missouri Fish and Game League will meet at the Marquette Hotel at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, Nov. 6, to consider ways and means of assisting the State and the Government to enforce the game laws in Missouri and on the Mississippi river. Jesse B. Jones, Chief Game and Fish Commissioner of Missouri, is expected to be present. All sportsmen will be welcome.

The Federal Government is deputizing six of the representatives of Mr. Jones' office to enforce the new regulations of the Department of Agriculture until the department can get its own men in the field. Many complaints that the Government laws are being violated along the Mississippi River have reached Washington, and the Secretary of Agriculture has authorized these deputations for present purposes.

It is illegal to shoot any migratory bird on or from the banks of the Mississippi River between Memphis and Minneapolis at any season of the year, the maximum fine for each offense under the Federal law being $100 and 90 days in jail.

MISSOURI HENS TO BE 3500 STRONG AT SHOW IN COLISEUM

Unusual Advances in Poultry Business to Be Exhibited in Moving Pictures.

Missouri's $50,000,000 hen is coming to the Coliseum Thanksgiving week to cackle over her achievement in retaining her place as the "Poultry Queen of the Union." Statistics issued by the State Labor Commissioner show Missouri still leads all the states in the production of poultry. The industry now has grown to a point where it is called the "Billion-Dollar Industry."

The finest fowls in Missouri, the United States and England have been entered in the Coliseum Poultry Show, for which $5000 in prizes are offered. Henry Steinmesch, secretary of the Mississippi Valley Poultry Association, says the number of entries received so far indicates there will be more than 3500 birds at the Coliseum show.

A departure in poultry shows has been made by St. Louisans. Many persons want to hear the practical side of keeping chickens. The Locust street annex of the Coliseum, seating 500 persons, has been reserved for this work. Prof. Rice of Cornell University, the highest authority on poultry culture in the United States, will be the principal lecturer.

R. C. Lawry of the Yesterlaid Egg Farm, George Beuoy, a specialist on caponizing, and T. E. Quisenberry of Mountain Grove, Mo., secretary of the Missouri State Poultry Board, also will lecture to St. Louisans.

Quisenberry will show moving picture scenes on the experimental farm conducted by the State at Mountain Grove. He also will show views of poultry plants in California, Oregon and Washington.

The educational process in poultrydom is making a hen lay two eggs where one was laid before. Recent statistics compiled by the Federal Government show that 10 years ago a hen laid 41 eggs, while today she is made to lay not less than 61. In Utah a hen has just layed 285 eggs in 366 days.

Secretary Steinmesch yesterday mailed invitations to Gov. Major, members of the State Board of Agriculture and the Missouri State Poultry Board.

He announced he had 2000 premium lists printed and that more than 1860 had been mailed out at the request of exhibitors. He offers 5 cents for each premium list returned to his office at 220 Market street by those who have no further use for them.

The Poultry Show, which has become the annual Thanksgiving event at the Coliseum, will begin Nov. 25 and close Dec. 1. Entries close Nov. 15.

BENEFIT TO HELP GIRLS GAIN HIGHER EDUCATION

College Club of St. Louis Has Arranged to Produce Play, "The Governor's Lady."

The College Club of St. Louis has arranged for a benefit performance of "The Governor's Lady," to be given Dec. 1. It will be the first presentation of the play here. William K. Harcourt and Miss Emma Dunn will appear in the title roles. The proceeds are to go to the procurement of higher education for high school girls.

"The Governor's Lady" concerns itself with the efforts of a man suddenly grown rich to obtain for himself political honor and social prestige. Interesting situations develop through the unaffected sincerity of his wife and her total lack of social ambition. The whole has its happy ending in a famous restaurant scene.

The boxes have been taken by college graduates who wish to have their alma mater represented at the brilliant function. Among the boxholders are Dr. Virgil Loeb, University of Missouri; Capt. Robert McCulloch, Virginia Military Institute; Dr. Rudolph Schmits, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Frederick Hall, Washington University; Oreon S. Scott, University of Michigan, and Mrs. Lon O. Hocker, University of Kansas.

MISSING BOY IS SOUGHT

Father Says Ellis Baker Disagreed With Stepmother.

George Baker of 4462 Easton avenue has asked the police to try to find his son, Ellis Baker, 16 years old, who has been missing from his home since Oct. 23. The youth left home to go to the John Marshall School, where he was a pupil, and has not been heard from since.

The young man had threatened to leave home, according to his father, because he disagreed with his stepmother and thought her too exacting with him. When he left home the youth wore a brown suit, knee trousers, a brown hat and lowcut shoes. He has light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, is 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighs about 115 pounds.

EATING MEAT REGULARLY CLOGS THE KIDNEYS, CAUSING PAINS IN THE BACK

Don't fail to flush your Kidneys occasionally with a tablespoonful of harmless fruit Salts to avoid danger.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—ADV.

HAVECOLOR IN YOUR CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets.

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after-effects. They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box.

Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, O.

George S. Scally of No. 75 Nassau st., New York, says: "For years I have been troubled with rheumatism and dyspepsia, and I came to the conclusion to try Radway's Pills. I immediately found great relief from their use. I feel like a new man since I commenced taking them, and would not now be without them. The drowsy, sleepy feeling I used to have has entirely disappeared, the dyspepsia has left me, and my rheumatism has gone entirely.

Catching Cold on the Street Car

Pe-ru-na Prevents Catching Cold.
One Dose in Time, Saves Nine.

Many people persist in riding on the street cars, insufficiently protected by clothing.

They start out perhaps in the heat of the day and do not feel the need of wraps.

The rapid moving of the car cools the body unduly. When they board the car perhaps they are slightly perspiring. When the body is in this condition it is easily chilled. This is especially true when a person is sitting.

Beginning a street car ride in the middle of the day and ending it in the evening almost invariably requires extra wraps, but people do not observe these precautions, hence they catch cold.

Colds are very frequent in the autumn on this account, and as the autumn advances they do not decrease. During the autumn months no one should think of riding on the car without being provided with a wrap.

ALWAYS TAKE WRAPS WITH YOU

A cold caught in the autumn is liable to last through the entire winter. Great caution should be observed at this season against exposure to cold. During the pleasant days of autumn, the liability of catching cold is great.

No wonder so many people acquire muscular rheumatism and catarrhal diseases during this season.

However, in spite of the greatest precautions, colds will be caught.

At the appearance of the first symptom, Peruna should be taken according to directions on the bottle and continued until every symptom disappears.

Do not put it off. Do not waste time by talking it over. Begin at once to take Peruna, and continue taking it until you are positive that the cold has entirely disappeared. This may save you a long and perhaps serious illness later on.

Cold Caused Deafness.

Mr. Turner Sampson, R. F. D. 5, Manchester, N. H., writes: "I have been troubled with catarrh in my head by spells for a number of years. Last July I took a hard cold and was deaf in one ear. I got discouraged and thought it would never be any better.

"I was advised to try Peruna. I took one bottle and was cured. I would advise any one who is afflicted to give Peruna a trial, believing that they will experience the relief that I have."

She Took Cold Easily.

Mrs. C. E. Long writes from Box 495, Lindsay, Cal., as follows: "My little girl had a cough that had been troubling her for four months. She took cold easily, and would wheeze and have spells of coughing that would sometimes last for a half hour.

"Before she began taking your Peruna she suffered everything in the way of cough, colds and croup, but now she is well and strong as she has ever been in her life."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.—ADV.

SENATOR HOLLIS AND WIFE AGREE TO LIVE APART

Father of Husband Declares There Will Be No Divorce, but Places No Blame.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 1.—Maj. Abijah Hollis, father of United States Senator Henry French Hollis, has issued a statement which he hopes will clear the field of gossip regarding the matrimonial affairs of his son. Since Senator and Mrs. Hollis separated a year ago, there have been many reports concerning their disagreement and rumors of divorce. Maj. Hollis says:

"About a year ago I learned that there was trouble between Henry and his wife, Grace. They both came to me and wanted to tell me their stories. I shooed them away and refused to listen to them. Far be it from me to take sides between a man and his wife.

"The truth of the matter is that they just couldn't live together without a continual clashing of temperaments. When you bring flint and steel together you are bound to get some sparks. Not more than a quarter of the marriages today are really happy, anyway. Generally one or the other wants to be the boss, and, in the case of two refined, high-principled people such as my son and Grace, they simply couldn't pull together with their decidedly different points of view.

"Henry always was headstrong and wanted his own way in everything, from a boy. He was never a lad that would take advice from anyone. He was a born leader, and that is probably the reason for this unfortunate separation.

"You can't get anybody, not even his enemies, to say a word against either Henry or his wife. They have the respect of everybody. I don't believe that there will ever be any divorce. They are both too sensible for that. I don't know the exact question upon which they split."

Mrs. Hollis is a daughter of F. E. Fisher of Springfield, Mass., and she was a school teacher when she met Hollis, then a Harvard student. They were married 20 years ago. When they parted Mrs. Hollis took the two children and went to Munich, Germany, where the children attended school last winter.

During the summer friends arranged a family conference at Lake Sunapee in hope of a reconciliation, but the Hollises agreed to a separation, and agreed to live in different New Hampshire towns. Mrs. Hollis receives $4000 a year. Henry Jr., aged 19, is in Cornell University, and Anne, aged 17, is attending a finishing school at Thompson, Conn.

BROTHERS SEPARATED 30 YEARS MEET BY CHANCE

Former Jerseyville Man Finds Relative Running Oklahoma Hotel.

ALVA, Ok., Nov. 1.—Thirty years ago B. C. Rhoads, proprietor of a hotel in this city, departed from the scenes of his childhood round about Jerseyville, Ill., and went West to grow up with the country. After a few moves and varying vicissitudes he settled permanently in Oklahoma. For a number of years his whereabouts had not been known to some of his relatives, among them C. H. Rhoads of Chicago.

C. N. Rhoads of Chicago, in Oklahoma on business, registered at the Rhoads hotel in Alva the other day. The name on the book, however, was not noticed by the proprietor before the two men became engaged in a conversation. They talked of Illinois and particular sections of the State and it finally developed that the stranger knew a great deal about Jerseyville and Jerseyville people.

"What's your name?" asked the proprietor of the hotel.

"Rhoads," replied the stranger.

"That's my name," said the hotel man.

They looked at each other in silence for a minute. Gradually, a family resemblance dawned upon each of them. They were brothers and they had not met in 30 years.

NEW YORK Y. W. C. A. TO BUILD FIVE NEW HOMES

Total of $4,000,000 to Be Expended According to Present Program.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. directors in this city have decided upon a $4,000,000 building program for this winter and spring. Of the total, $3,000,000 will be for five new buildings for the women and for repairs on others.

After this program was decided upon, 100 men interested in Association work met C. S. Ward, secretary of the International Committee, at dinner to talk over raising the money. As dessert was served it was decided to devote 14 days to the money-raising campaign, beginning Nov. 10. Ward, who has conducted more than 80 money-raising campaigns in all parts of the world, said this was ample time.

George W. Perkins, Henry P. Davison, Mr. and Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan and Mrs. James Cushman are some of the notable persons interested in this campaign.

NO "LONG" TREATMENT

One dose positively convinces. Many find that only one dose is necessary.

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy
ONE DOSE WILL CONVINCE
MAYR'S WONDERFUL STOMACH REMEDY

Save Expense and Surgeon's Knife

Whatever you've tried, give my Safe Remedy this one chance before you go on WASTING MONEY needlessly for no USE OR GOOD. Don't for a moment consider allowing a surgeon or doctor to cut into your body to try to cure you before you have at least tried ONE DOSE of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy.

"Sorry She Did Not Take It Sooner."

George H. Mayr—Received your letter yesterday. I wrote you about two weeks ago and told you I had taken the free $1 bottle of your remedy. The dose looked so large I kept putting off taking it, but finally decided I would try it and it helped me wonderfully. I am sorry I did not take it sooner. I will be glad to recommend it to anybody suffering from stomach trouble.
MRS. MINNIE WHITELEY,
Route 1, Springfield, Mo.

"Has Done Him More Good Than All Medicines He Ever Took."

George H. Mayr—You will find inclosed a $1 bill for another treatment of your wonderful Stomach Remedy, the same as you sent me a few days ago. Will say it has done me more good than all the medicine I have taken in four months. Will send for treatment each week until I have taken the complete treatment. I will surely recommend your medicine to all my folks and friends. I remain, as ever,
D. D. GALBRAITH,

Read What a Few of Them Say—

"Enjoyed Best Christmas After Taking Trial Bottle."

George H. Mayr: Well, to begin with, I can assure you I certainly did enjoy this Christmas. I have taken your trial bottle and have taken two bottles and a bottle of your System Regulator, and I already have another dose of your stomach remedy in the house which I am going to take this coming week, and then am going to get me another bottle of the Regulator. The first dose I took made me so sick I called my husband at 3 o'clock in the morning. I just thought I was going to die and was sorry I had taken the medicine, but now I have to laugh at myself. My mother has the same trouble, and I am going to get her to take it, too, for I know it will do her good. Mrs. H. Oehler, 2211 Osage st., St. Louis, Mo.
Jan. 18, 1913.

"Feel a Great Deal Better Now."

George H. Mayr: Inclosed find $3 for the rest of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy. I have taken three treatments and must say I feel a great deal better. I am 45 years old and the doctor said I have change of life, but I know it is only my digestive organs. My family, as well as myself, praise your treatment. It seems like a Godsend to me. The remedy is surely wonderful. Mrs. L. Bange, 4801 Le Duc, St. Louis, Mo.

"Your Remedy Would Save Many a Doctor Bill."

George H. Mayr: Enclosed find $2, for which please send me two bottles of your Tonic and Regulator. I will take the last treatment of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy today, that is the fifth bottle, and must say it has helped me a great deal. The two bottles of Tonic and Regulator that I am sending for I think will finish the good work. After taking the first treatment I passed about 500 green lumps, the second treatment about the same, the third treatment about 200 and the fourth about 100, so I think the fifth will make a clean sweep, and I will just need the tonic, which I am sending for, but I always intend to take several bottles of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy every spring and fall to keep my system in order. I think if everyone would do the same thing they would save many a doctor bill. Please send the two bottles of Tonic as soon as possible, as I will be out of the Tonic b Tuesday. I remain, as ever, yours f success. Robert L. Voitlein, 6035 Ha cock av., St. Louis, Mo.

SCORES OF PARKS IN PLAN FOR A BEAUTIFUL PARIS

Hospitals, Fortifications and Barracks to Go to Suburbs to Make Open Space.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The authorities have awakened to the fact that something must be done if Paris is to retain her reputation for attractiveness. Prefect of the Seine Delanney announces that he has made plans for a new and greater Paris, to be worked out by a special commission.

It is proposed to extend the city limits to include all the suburbs and make the city more than six times its present size. The chief features of the scheme are: The immediate removal of the inner belt of fortifications, which was agreed upon last year, but which promises long delay; second, the establishing of new boundaries at an average distance of four miles and a half beyond the other fortifications; third, the removal of barracks, hospitals, markets and other public buildings to the new outskirts of the city, leaving all the spaces now so occupied for small parks.

Large sections of the fortifications are the resort of the lowest characters of the city and the tumbledown houses are an eyesore. These will be laid out as parks.

The new building law will permit no house to be higher than the width of the street on which it is to stand, nor than the width of the courtyard behind. The widening of 225 miles of existing streets outside the fortifications is planned and the making of 50 miles of new streets.

The plan creates an outer park plan that virtually will surround the city. Paris is less endowed with parks than any city in Europe and its inhabitants number 148 to the acre, as against London's 64 per acre. Prefect Delanney says the whole program can be carried out at small expense if the Government will let the municipality have the land, which is useless from a military point of view.

WOMAN CANDIDATE LOSES SUIT TO ENJOIN RIVAL

Mrs. Nannie Faulconer Wanted to Run Against Mere Man, but Teacher Also Is in Race.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 1.—Mrs. Nannie C. Faulconer's effort to force the retirement of her suffragette opponent in the race for County Superintendent of Schools has failed. Next Tuesday the voters will have their choice of women, as Miss Mary E. Fidler will be the candidate on the Fusion ticket.

Mrs. Faulconer much prefers to run against a mere man. Miss Fidler is a teacher in the city schools here, and Mrs. Faulconer sought an injunction on the grounds that a city teacher was not eligible for county office.

Chief Justice Hobson said the question of eligibility should be raised after the election, as there was no assurance that Miss Fidler would demand the office.

WINTER CRUISES OF HAMBURG-AMERICAN

The Hamburg-American Steamship line in announcing its winter cruises this year varies them from 15 days to three months, and the company declares that present indications point to heavier bookings this season than ever before. Each year, it is said, there is a decided increase in the number of tourists over the previous season.

One reason given by the Hamburg-American line for this increase is the fine fleet of ships it puts into the winter service, combined with all modern luxuries that may be had at comparatively small cost.

It is expected that the most popular cruises of the Hamburg-American line this year will be from New York to the West Indies and thence to the Panama Canal, varying from 15 to 29 days. Two of these cruises will be made by the S. S. Amerika, one of the most famous of transatlantic steamers, equipped with Ritz-Carlton restaurant, gymnasium and electric elevators. The S. S. Victoria Luise, another one of the company's finest ships, will also be used in these cruises.

An entirely new cruise will be made this season of about three months through the Mediterranean visiting the Orient and India. The cruise will be made by the big S. S. Cleveland.

GAME WARDEN DECLARES WAR ON STEELHEAD FISH

Hardy Trout Is Said to Be Destroying Others in Michigan Lakes.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Nov. 1.—County Game Warden George Wellhamer wants to declare war on the steelhead trout, which, he declares, are killing the brook trout in Lake Michigan and tributary streams. The steelhead trout are excellent food fish, but cannot be caught with a hook and line.

Wellhamer says that within five years the new fish will be a worse pest than the carp, and unless the State is willing to give up the brook trout, the war of extermination must come sooner or later.

The steelheads were brought here from the Pacific Coast by the United States Bureau of Fisheries. They are closely related to the salt water salmon, which they closely resemble. From 1895 to 1904 the United States agents released 200,000 steelhead fry in Lake Superior as an experiment. This year commercial fishermen have caught about 25,000 pounds of the new fish in nets.

LAKE NEARLY EMPTIED BY CITY SUPPLY PUMP

Battle Creek Drains Goguac of 1,000,000,000 Gallons and Autos Replace Boats.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 1.—Early in the summer, folk went to Lake Goguac to ride over it in excursion steamers and private launches and owners of the 500 cottages on the banks of the lake hurried out to escape the heat and dust.

Nowadays these same folk are going to the lake to ride around in its bed in automobiles or to walk across it dry shod, so as to be able to tell their children of the feat in later years. Lake Goguac has gone almost dry, and there is a path as wide as a city street to Ward's Island, around which the steamers run ordinarily in deep water.

It has been the dryest summer on record in Battle Creek. The city water supply comes from Lake Goguac. The intake is in the lowest place and there still is a lot of water there. But it has got down to where it tastes of weeds and other surface articles. Supt. Brigden says the city has pumped 1,000,000,000 gallons from the lake since it rained and the city may have to depend on its wells.

BIG TEXAS STEEL PLANT WILL COST $10,000,000

Mills to Be Erected at Gulf City Will Utilize Nearby Deposits.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 1.—A steel plant, the largest in the West, is to be erected at Texas City at a cost of $10,000,000. It will employ 7500 men in its rolling mills, smelters, coking plant and yards. Construction will begin within the next two months.

This project has just been announced by H. B. Moore, vice-president and general manager of the Texas City Co. The Southwestern Steel Development Co., with headquarters in Houston, and the bond house of Peabody, Houghtaling & Co. of Chicago are back of the enterprise and have formed a company capitalized at $30,000,000, to manufacture steel products.

Large iron ore deposits in Marion and Cass counties have been purchased. Two hundred acres have been obtained for the site of the plant.

Sleep Disturbing Bladder Weaknesses; Backache, Stiff Joints, Rheumatic Pains Disappear After Few Doses Are Taken

While people along in years are naturally more subject to weak kidneys, they can easily avoid the tortures of backache, rheumatism, and disagreeable bladder disorders.

Croxone relieves these conditions by promptly reaching the cause and making the kidneys filter the blood and sift out the poisonous acids and waste matter that cause these troubles.

It soaks right in and cleans out the stopped up, inactive kidneys, dissolves and drives out the uric acid and other poisonous impurities that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause rheumatism. It helps the kidneys and bladder regain health and strength.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what else you have used. It is practically impossible to take Croxone without results. It starts to work the minute you take it—the first time you use it. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 781 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Clean, cozy rooms in private families or in rooming houses with congenial people are readily found through Post-Dispatch wants—which prints more of such wants than two and often more than three of its competitors combined.

FOREIGN ENVOYS IN MEXICO CONFER WITH JOHN LIND

German, Norwegian and Russian Ministers Go to Vera Cruz to See President Wilson's Representative, and the Kaiser's Minister Has Long Talk.

WILSON TO ENFORCE A STERN PROGRAM

Army and Navy Activity Indicate He Is Prepared to Back Demand for Elimination of Huerta With Display of Fotce.

By Associated Press.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Nov. 1.—John Lind, President Wilson's representative in Mexico, received visits today from the Russian, Norwegian and German Ministers, who arrived from the capital last night. He conferred for a long time with the German Minister. Lind said the interview was extremely cordial in character, but maintained absolute reserve regarding the subjects under discussion.

Other conferences will be held before the Ministers return to the capital tomorrow or Monday.

CARRANZA WILL ASK RECOGNITION

Rebel Leader Arrives in Nogales With Officer of Peace Forum.

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico, Nov. 1.—Gen. Carranza, leader of the Constitutionalists, announced here tonight that he would make a formal appeal to Washington, probably tomorrow or Monday, for recognition of the belligerency of the Mexican revolutionists.

It was declared in revolutionary circles that Carranza's mission here was to confer with an agent of President Wilson, expected tomorrow.

Henry Allen Tupper, officer of the International Peace Forum, who has been at Hermosillo several days, came to Nogales with Gen. Carranza. He denied that he had visited the constitutionalists' capital as a personal representative of President Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Representatives in Washington of the constitutionalists of Mexico denied tonight any knowledge of a meeting planned between Gen. Carranza and an agent of President Wilson at Nogales. In official circles it was said the President had sent no messenger to meet with the constitutionalist leaders.

U. S. TO ENFORCE A STERN POLICY

Army Activity Indicates Wilson Will Back Demands With Show of Force.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—President Wilson is ready to take final action in the Mexican problem. His signal for putting his plan in operation will be an announcement from Mexico City regarding the intentions of Gen. Huerta, dictater of Mexico. The President and his advisers are guarding carefully the nature of the policy of the American Government in Mexico. All attaches of the White House and State Department have been enjoined not to discuss the situation. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan refuse to discuss it outside the President's office.

That the President is prepared to demand, and will demand, the elimination of Huerta and his followers, under penalty of intervention in Mexico by the United States, is the general belief here. Activities in army and navy circles seem to indicate this.

Activity in Army and Navy.

Despite efforts at secrecy, it became known today that in both the army and navy there has been a general tightening up of the reins for the last week. Tonight the regular troops in the United States stand ready to entrain at once for the Mexican border. Transportation of the troops has been arranged for with railroad and steamship companies.

These arrangements were completed some time ago, but in the last three days orders have gone forth from the office of the Chief Quartermaster's corps to railroad and steamship lines to have trains, engines and vessels ready. The officers in command of the army transports at [illegible]lveston have been ordered to stock up [illegible] provisions and coal.

$1500 BANKED IN BOOKS MISSED BY $6.25 BURGLAR

Woman Who Used Volumes to Keep Surplus Money, Foils Thief Who Invades Home.

Mrs. Barbara Gogo of 1035 Julia street banks her surplus money between the leaves of books in her library, which occupies a wardrobe, though the burglar who broke into her house yesterday appears not to have been aware of the extent of her deposits.

When Mrs. Gogo got home from a call she discovered the wrenched lock and followed the trail to the library wardrobe. A number of the books had been tossed about.

"The robber stole $6.25," she reported to the police, "but he missed $1500 which I had left distributed through the books for safekeeping."

LARGE TURNIP FOLLOWS MARSHALL BY MAIL

Vegetable Sent by Indiana Man Travels About Country in Parcel Post.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—A huge Indiana turnip is following Vice-President Marshall around the country via parcel post. The turnip weighs 5 pounds and is traveling in mail pouches in its natural state, just as it was dug from the ground back in Indiana, except for an identification tag tied on the turnip top.

The turnip reached the Vice-President's office in the Capitol today. It was sent by William H. Bush from R. F. D. No. 5, Columbus, Ind. The Vice-President's office force redirected the tag and sent the turnip hurrying out to Arizona where the Vice President and his wife will visit.

EXTRA COWS BOUGHT TO DECEIVE DEER HUNTERS

New York Farmers Expect Rich Harvest From Inexperienced Sportsmen.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 1.—The deer hunting season in Sullivan County opened today and will continue for 15 days. There are probably nearly 1000 hunters in the forests.

The farmers in the deer country expect to reap a harvest from New York and Brooklyn sportsmen, who are unable to distinguish between a cow and a deer. Last year a number of cows were shot and the owners received fancy prices for them.

This season they have purchased extra cows and turned them loose, each with the name of the owner on a metal tag tied around the animal's neck.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 1.—William Topping of Ashland, O., a minor, obtained a verdict of $20,000 today against the Great Northern Railway Co. because his father, Edward Topping, was killed in the Wellington, Wash., snowslide disaster of March 1, 1910, when 93 persons perished. The father was a passenger on one of the wrecked trains.

A woman was foreman of the jury that tried the case in Superior Judge Hughes' court.

REJECTED SUITOR KILLS GIRL AND HER BROTHER-IN-LAW

Jesse Ray Escapes After Shooting Jessie Clark and William Donnelly.

FIRES AT MRS. DONNELLY

Repulsed as He Renews Courtship, Man Attacks Woman and Then Her Protector.

Jesse Ray, a sleeping car inspector, an unsuccessful suitor for Miss Jessie Clark of 710 South Eighteenth street, last night shot her with a revolver and then killed her brother-in-law, William A. Donnelly, a carpenter, who had attempted to protect her. The tragedy occurred at the Donnelly home. Donnelly fell dead with a bullet through the heart. Miss Clark was shot behind the left ear and died on the operating table at the city hospital.

Ray, one of whose legs is artificial, vanished among the cars in a nearby switching yard.

Mrs. Carrie Donnelly, Miss Clark's sister, was a witness of the double murder and was herself the target of two bullets, both of which missed. She flung herself upon Ray and wrested the pistol from him. A struggle followed in which another shot was fired and Ray repossessed himself of the weapon.

Asked Girl to Elope.

Mrs. Donnelly told the police that Ray for several weeks had attempted to force his attentions upon her sister, who repulsed him. Once he sought to persuade her to elope with him to Kansas City. He was a Pullman car inspector out of work, and recently, having a key which unlocked the sleepers, had spent the nights in the cars, she told.

At 8 o'clock last night, said Mrs. Donnelly, Ray appeared at the house and attempted to renew his courtship. Miss Clark angrily rebuffed him. Then he commanded her to cook him some supper. She refused.

Suddenly Ray took a revolver from his pocket and shot her. Donnelly sprang toward the murderer, but fell before a second shot. The next shot was fired at Mrs. Donnelly, who seized the revolver before Ray could shoot again. The fourth bullet was discharged as they were fighting for possession of the pistol.

Three Drank Together.

Donnelly, who was 40 years old, was a cabinetmaker employed by the Merrell Drug Co. Miss Clark was 30 years old and Ray is 32.

According to Arthur F. Payton, a bartender at 1706 Gratiot street, Donnelly, his sister-in-law and Ray were drinking together in his saloon from 6:30 o'clock until nearly 8.

They departed one at a time, Ray being the last to go. A few minutes later Payton and others in the saloon heard the shots. They ran to the house, but Ray already had fled.

ASQUITH IS WHIPPED BY SCOTCH MILITANTS

Women Ply Dog Whips When Premier Invades Their Ambush.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Nov. 1.—Premier Asquith was attacked today by militant suffragettes armed with dog whips while he was driving near Stirling in an automobile, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Violet Asquith, and Sir John Graham, a Scottish Justice of the Peace.

The automobile was passing through the village of Plean, five miles from Falkirk, when it ran into a suffragette ambush. The "Wild Women," as they are called here, under cover of a shower of papers, rushed at the car and belabored the Premier and his companions.

They then as suddenly disappeared before the police car, following that of the Premier, reached the scene.

The party were more frightened than hurt.

Four women well known in Edinburgh and Glasgow as militant suffragettes were arrested tonight as principals in the attack.

HEIRESS WITH DIAMONDS AND MONEY IS MISSING

Hundreds of Brookline Citizens Turn Out to Help Father Hunt for Daughter.

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—A pathetic call for help in his hunt for his daughter came this afternoon from Arthur L. Walker of Brookline, father of Miss Elizabeth Walker, an heiress who has been mysteriously missing since last Wednesday.

So keen was the interest in the case that hundreds made preparations to take part in the search. In the number were 100 Boy Scouts and employes of Brookline. Walker offered $500 reward for the discovery of his daughter's whereabouts.

When last seen Miss Walker wore diamonds and rubies of great value and had with her considerable money.

Actual Work of Abolishing Deadly Tower Grove Grade Crossing Begun

MAYOR HENRY KIEL...

THE CITY'S RAILROAD PROBLEMS.

Judge James A. Seddon unqualifiedly supports the Post-Dispatch in his declaration that the municipal authorities of this city have the power to compel the railroads to abolish grade crossings and otherwise adjust their tracks within the city limits to the demands of public safety and the city's best interests. Judge Seddon's assertion of the city's pow-so that [illegible] looking to public safety. And when the scheme is evolved it should provide for immediate work on the Tower Grove, Sarah street and other crossings where life is constantly imperiled, without waiting for the execution of the entire plan. It ought to be quite feasible to attack these crossings first and make their depression or elevation fit in with the elevation or depression of the rest of the tracks. Not a day's delay should be permitted. This life-saving work is one of the most important in the development of modern St. Louis.

The settlement of the problems now pressing with regard to the abolition of grade crossings, the location of railroad yards and switches and the track nuisances at Forest Park and the residence district adjacent to it is up to the Municipal Government. No unnecessary hardship should be imposed upon the railroads, but they should be required to conform with plans designed to protect life, limb and property; to conserve the public health and comfort, and to harmonize with the proper development of the city.

It would be good for both the railroads and the public if the railroads would see the point and co-operate with the city. If the railroads do not see the point, the city must force it. If the present municipal administration fails to do its duty in this matter, we must have one that will.

GRADE CROSSINGS.

There is no question of the legal power of the city to compel the railroads to conserve public safety by abolishing grade crossings. Nor is there room for question of the justice of the policy of compelling the roads to elevate or depress their tracks where they cross thoroughfares at their own cost. The railroad is the beneficiary of the franchise by which it is enabled

The grade crossing record in this city is shameful. It involves a disgraceful neglect of the rights and powers of the city at a great cost of human life and limb. It must be stopped. The Council should delay no longer on the pending grade crossing bill. The whole program for the abolition of grade crossings should be put through as soon as possible.

Mayor Kiel, who spoke at ceremony marking the elimination of the Tower Grove Grade Crossing, and School Girl who took part in the celebration; excerpts from Post-Dispatch editorials which demanded abolition of the grade crossing many years ago.

Railroad and City Officials Pledge Mutual Aid in Doing Away With Dangerous Crossing Points.

A campaign of 20 years, waged by civic forces for the elimination of grade crossings, bore its first fruit when work was begun yesterday afternoon on the new Tower Grove viaduct, which will substitute a span over the Missouri Pacific and Frisco tracks for what has long been considered the most dangerous crossing in St. Louis.

For the neighborhood, and for all Southwest St. Louis, the occasion was a festal one. Former Mayor Kreismann who signed the legislation for the viaduct, stood by Mayor Kiel as he turned the first spadeful of earth. The Tower Grove Heights Improvement Association conducted the festivities, Herman W. Fay presiding, and the 1000 persons attending were entertained by speeches by railroad and city officials, and by songs from a chorus of school children.

Many of these children have to be piloted across the network of tracks twice a day, or oftener, by parents or policemen, and the new viaduct will mean, for them, safety for life and limb equal to that which children in other parts of the city enjoy.

Speakers asserted that the occasion marked the beginning of the end of grade crossings in this city. Mayor Kiel said the railroads now appear to agree with the city on a practical basis for the separation of grades at all crossings.

The elimination of this grade crossing has been the aim of civic forces for a long period and for more than a dozen years the Post-Dispatch has waged a campaign to abolish this and other dangerous grades in the interest of public safety.

A former ordinance was passed by the Municipal Assembly directing the railroads to abolish this crossing, but it was declared void by the higher courts after four years of litigation. The present plan results from an agreement between the city and the railroads, by which the city is to pay the consequential damage to adjoining property, the minor expense. The cost of the viaduct is to be paid by the railroads.

Former Mayor Kreismann, in the course of an address, presented to Fay, on behalf of the organization, the pen with which he signed the ordinance passed in March by the Municipal Assembly authorizing the construction of the viaduct. At the time the ordinance was signed the pen was given to President Nixon of the Frisco, at his request. Nixon requested former Mayor Kreismann to present the pen to the improvement association.

Mayor Kiel, in his address, said that the Kriesmann administration should be credited with reaching the agreement with the railroads by which the work on the new viaduct was made possible. He said he favored further conference with the railroads in trying to reach agreements for the elimination of other crossings.

Results Wanted, Says Kiel.

"I am not in favor of exacting things from the railroads which they are not able to pay for," the Mayor said. "I do not believe in two or three engineers failing to agree on the width of a viaduct, or some minor detail which had no material bearing on the question. The people want results.

"The citizens of St. Louis are not as much interested in the beauty of the viaducts over these crossings as they are to know that they provide a safe passage over dangerous tracks. I want the bridges safe, regardless of their beauty of construction."

Martin L. Clardy, general solicitor for the Missouri Pacific, asserted that the

CODY CITIZENS THINK A DRUG KILLED GATES

Doctor Said to Have Given It After Millionaire Collapsed at Bar.

CODY, Wyo., Nov. 1.—That Charles G. Gates did not die from heart disease, but from an overdose of a quieting drug administered to him, is the belief of people here, and citizens are demanding an investigation.

Persons who were in the barroom of the Irma Hotel Monday evening when Gates collapsed, say that the millionaire had not been drinking heavily, but that just after taking a glass of wine he suddenly stopped speaking, clutched at his left side and collapsed. Friends standing near by sprang to him, and the physician who accompanied the party from New York sent hurriedly for a local doctor. In the meantime, it is said, a drug was administered in the hope of reviving the stricken man.

Gates was carried to his private car and received every possible attention. His death was declared to have been due to natural causes and a public demand for an inquest into the death was overruled.

The Cody Enterprise, in an editorial today says:

"We are not in favor of whitewashing anybody, and if Gates' death was due to the administering of poison we should have the facts and the guilty person should be punished. The fact that every effort was made to keep from having a Coroner's inquest, which efforts eventually were successful, and other things, give ground for the report that if Mr. Gates had not been tampered with—in fact, given an overdose of some drug—he would now be alive."

COLLECTOR LURED TO VACANT HOUSE, SHOT BY ROBBER

Frederick L. Tiemann Called to 3106 Lucas Avenue by Telephone Message and Seriously Wounded by Man Who Lay in Wait for Him.

ASSAILANT PREPARED DAYS IN ADVANCE

Doors at House Had Been Arranged So That Tiemann, Once in the Vestibule, Could Not Make Escape.

Frederick L. Tiemann of 4810A St. Louis avenue, a collector for the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., was lured by a telephone message to a vacant house at 3106 Lucas avenue yesterday afternoon, was trapped by an ingenious snare in a vestibule between a storm door and an inner door, and was shot twice by a man who presumably intended to rob him.

One bullet entered the head behind the left eye, passed downwards, destroying the eyeball, and emerged at the base of the nose. Another ball cut a furrow across the top of the head, inflicting a scalp wound. Physicians at the city hospital said his condition was serious, but that he would recover unless infection of the wound set in. He is 47 years old and married.

In Tiemann's pocket was $75 in cash, part of the day's collections, which his assailant did not take. The police theory is that he became frightened after shooting his victim and fled without carrying out the robbery he had planned.

In the house the police found a bag of fresh fig cakes, a pie and a roll, partly eaten. Further search last night disclosed a bottle of chloroform, another of liniment, four pairs of pliers, a stick of solder, a gimlet and a revolver, four chambers of which had been discharged.

The police discovered that by means of a new pulley and a new rope a trap had been set so that the outer door could be pulled shut and secured by tying the rope to the balustrade. It was between this door and an inner one, which was locked, that Tiemann, unable to advance or retreat, was held at the mercy of his assailant.

Tiemann Tells His Story.

In an interval of consciousness, Tiemann told reporters this story: On Friday a telephone message came at his office, asking that Tieman be sent to the Lucas avenue address to arrange for renting the house, for which the real estate company is agent. Tiemann was out at the time, but yesterday morning found a memorandum on his desk file notifying him that an appointment had been made for him at 3 o'clock.

At that hour Tiemann opened the storm door of the house, which had been vacant for several months, and entered the narrow vestibule. He was shaking at the lock of the inner door when he heard the outer door slam behind him. Suddenly, through a panel of the second door from which the glass had been broken, a revolver was thrust in his face and a man's voice commanded:

"Throw up your hands!"

Too startled to obey, Tiemann instinctively clutched for the pi[illegible] with his left hand, the right one [illegible]ing been cut off at the wrist [illegible] planing mill accident when he was [illegible] boy. A shot was fired, but the bu[illegible] missed. The collector turned to flee through the storm door, but found escape cut off. The second and third shot fired through the broken panel, struck him. A fourth went wild.

Tiemann did not remember, he said, how he got inside the house, b[illegible] thought he might have fallen throu[illegible] the open panel. He had a confu[illegible] recollection of a hand-to-hand struggle.

"I remember the man was choking me," he said.

Assailant Flees Through Window.

Then he found himself alone. His assailant, the police discovered, escaped through a window in the rear of the house, climbed a fence and ran down the alley towards Compton avenue. The revolver was left in the house.

Tiemann opened a hall window and let himself drop to the ground. He staggered to Henry Stillman's grocery store at 3033 Lucas avenue, [illegible] into a chair and gasped:

"A man shot me!"

Stillman informed the police and an ambulance was sent.

In a statement made at the city hospital, Tiemann said he had never seen his assailant before and could not conceive the motive of the attack. The stranger, he said, as far as he [illegible] recall, was about 5 feet 4 inches [illegible] weighed perhaps 1[illegible] pounds, was [illegible] dark complexion, had a small black mustache, wore dark clothes and a gray cap, and was between 35 and 40 years old.

This description tallies with that given by John Allen Meroney, [illegible] years old, of [illegible] Washington avenue, of a man [illegible] cas avenue, run west through the alley and turn into Compton avenue, a few minutes after 3 o'clock.

The police at first thought that a pair of spectacles and a set of false teeth, found in the house, might be clews. But these proved to be Tiemann's property.

Man Got Key Oct. 22.

Isadore P. Mulconry, bookkeeper for the real estate company, told the police last night that on Oct. 22 a man giving his name as "E. W. Wilson" applied at the office for the key to the Lucas avenue house, stating that he wished to examine the premises and that, if they proved suitable, he would rent the property. He deposited $1 as surety for the return of the key, and told Mulconry he could be reached by telephone at Central 4115.

"If I like the house," the bookkeeper said the visitor promised, "I'll call up in a day or so and you can send one of your agents and we'll close the deal.

Friday afternoon there was a telephone call at the office and a man's voice, according to Mulconry, said:

"I'm the man who got the key to 2106 Lucas avenue. If you'll send your Mr. Tiemann out, I'll rent the place." As Tiemann was not in, Mulconry arranged for a meeting yesterday afternoon.

Night Chief Gillaspy said he believed the name given was fictitious and that the telephone number was given at random. Central 4115 is a party line, one party being the Butterick Pattern Co. at 1016 Pine street, and the other the Schweits Tailoring Co., 1017 Chesnut street.

Thinks Robbery Was Motive.

Gillaspy said that he believed the motive of the attack was robbery, and that the thief, surprised by Tiemann's resistance and alarmed at having been compelled to shoot, fled without the booty he had planned. This was also the opinion expressed by Mrs. Tiemann, after she had spent several hours at her husband's bedside last night.

"Before going to the house," said Gillaspy, "Tiemann turned over to the cashier of his firm about $2000 in rents which he had collected during the day.

"The robber perhaps realized it was the first of the month, when rent collections are made, and calculated that his victim might have a considerable sum of money in his possession."

"My husband's assailant had familiarized himself with the office," said Mrs. Tiemann, "to the extent that he was able to call for Mr. Tiemann by name.

"My husband has no enemies, and no troubles. No threats have been made against him. He assured me he had never seen the man who shot him before. I am convinced it was a robbery plot, and that the thief was frightened away by the thought he had shot a man."

RARE STAMPS STOLEN AT NEW YORK EXHIBIT

Five of U. S. Issue of 1869, Valued at $2500, Taken From Case.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Five rare United States stamps of the issue of 1869, valued by their owner, Clarence E. Chapman of New York, at $2500, were stolen late today from the International Philatelic Exhibition which closed tonight.

The stamps were on display in a case in the main exhibition room and the thief, to remove the card on which they were mounted, had to force an opening in the rear of the case. That he was a stamp collector, or conversant with the value of stamps, exhibition officials said, is shown by his having cast aside another card of stamps of less value.

The stamps taken included two of the 15-cent value, two of the 24-cent value and one of the 30-cent denomination.

U. S. MARSHALS TOLD NOT TO ABUSE PRIVILEGES

Attorney-General Says Appointments of Deputies Must Not Be for Personal Gain.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Attorney-General McReynolds today directed United States Marshals to be cautious in interpreting the recent action of Congress in removing deputy marshals from the protection of the civil service.

"Under no conditions," said McReynolds in a circular letter to all marshals, "must marshals attempt to use these appointments merely for personal rewards or partisan ends."

Approval by the department will be necessary before permanent appointments to deputy marshalships are made.

MAN, 75, WEDS HIS NEW HOUSEKEEPER, WHO IS 77

Jerseyite Marries Woman Who Was Next Door Neighbor, Despite Children's Protest.

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 1.—In spite of the efforts of his children to prevent it, John Hanson, 75 years old, was married tonight to his housekeeper, Mrs. Annie Sherman, at the parsonage of the First German Presbyterian Church. The bride is 77. Until recently, when she became his housekeeper, Mrs. Sherman lived next door to Hanson in West Orange.

Hanson's first wife died three years ago. He tried housekeeping alone for a while, but soon had to appeal to his next-door neighbor, Mrs. Sherman.

CAROLINE WHITE KISSED

Opera Singer Hits Admirer on His Bald Head.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—Smack, smack.

That's just the way it happened. An osculatory smack right on the rosy cheek of fair Caroline White, grand opera star, was followed by the whack of Miss White's dainty parasol on the perfectly bald head of her amorous but indiscreet admirer.

And it happened in Chestnut street. As promenaders were tripping lightly along the thoroughfare this afternoon, the individual with a waiting-to-be-bestowed kiss took his courage in both hands, readjusted his corpact tie, gave the waxed ends of his hopeful mustache a finishing twist and it was all over in a second. A crowd gathered and the man just [illegible] into the crowd.

Wilson Prepared to Enforce His Mexican Demands

reports received at the Navy Department.

With the arrival of the second division of the Atlantic fleet in Vera Cruz, Tuesday, the United States will have seven battleships and two gunboats there. On the west coast there are three warships, all armored cruisers. Each of the warships at Vera Cruz has 800 men and 100 marines aboard. About three-fourths of the crews of the vessels are available for landing and shore duty.

President Wilson received a dispatch today from John Lind, his personal representative in Mexico, who is at Vera Cruz. The substance of that dispatch was kept secret. Secretary Bryan carried it to the White House and neither he nor the President would divulge its contents. It is believed it described the conduct of the Mexican elections and the general situation in Mexico. Later a dispatch was received stating that John Lind had had a conference with the German Minister to Mexioc, Herr von Heintze. The latter went from Mexico City to Vera Cruz to confer with the commanders of the two German cruisers off Vera Cruz.

Meeting of Foreign Envoys.

Another report which reached the capital stated there would be a meeting of foreign representatives in Vera Cruz tomorrow or Monday. This same dispatch added that the road from Vera Cruz to Mexico City was open and well guarded by Huerta troops. The purpose of the reported meeting of the foreign representatives was not stated.

Reports reached Washington stating that Huerta was out of funds and that many of his troops and civil employes of the Government would miss their pay unless money was obtained. Opponents of the Huerta administration hope this report is true, asserting that if it is, there will be a revolution within the ranks of the Huerta forces.

Reports were current in administration circles that President Wilson would make known his new Mexican policy in the nature of a message to Congress, following the precedent set by President Cleveland in the Venezuela-Great Britain dispute in 1895.

Some persons assert this message will describe the revolutions in Mexico for the last three years, state the failure of the President's efforts to end the war by suasion and call on Congress for support in the landing of marines and troops as a police force.

As in the case of other reports, the White House refuses to discuss the matter, saying that the country will know in full time what are the intentions of the President.

Americans, Fearing Piedras Negras Battle, Move Cattle to Texas.

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Nov. 1.—Fearing an engagement between Constitutionalists and Federals, American owners of cattle on the Mexican border today removed large herds to the Texas side of the Rio Grande. The Constitutionalist Junta here announced no military moves would be made until the property of foreigners was safe.

It is believed an extended movement is contemplated, with the object of retaking Piedras Negras, opposite Eagle Pass. Piedras Negras was the provisional capital of the rebels, but is now in the hands of the Federals.

Madero Brothers' Case Before Federal Judges.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1.—Daniel and Evaristo Madero, who are confined in San Juan prison at Vera Cruz, have been placed at the disposition of the federal Judge here for a period of 72 hours during which time evidence against them will be considered. If this evidence is inconclusive, it is probable that their release will be recommended to the federal authorities.

MRS. LIND PITIES MEXICAN WOMEN

Wife of Special Envoy Says They Suffer Much by Husbands' Drink Habits.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Mrs. John Lind, wife of President Wilson's special envoy to Mexico, departed tonight for Minneapolis. Mrs. Lind said:

"My experiences in Mexico were delightful. So many people think that we were in danger, and must have been afraid to venture out, but we went everywhere, everyone was kind to us and showed nothing but respect, and we made many friends. It was a thoroughly delightful trip in every way.

"I have the greatest pity for Mexican women. There is much to be said about the frightful conditions existing in Mexico and the suffering which the women all over the country are undergoing. American people have no idea of it at all. It is not possible for American women to realize the life of Mexican women at the present troubled time in their country.

"Boys are pressed into service for fighting at 16, and if they refuse they are killed or persecuted. Another great evil is the drug or drink, which all the men in the lower classes use. It is the pulque and is made from the maguay, a plant resembling our century plant. This drink has the same effect as opium, and women suffer chiefly from the common use of this among men.

"Although there are some very fine and cultured people among the Mexicans, there is no idea of humanitarian work. The only thing which is done of a charitable nature is the work of the Catholic homes, among individuals, especially orphans. I have much material on these subjects, but it is all in my trunk, on its way to Minneapolis, and I expect that the Minneapolis women's clubs will fall heir to it."

HELD AS PICKPOCKETS

In the crowd gathered to see Mayor Kiel turn the first spadeful of earth for the new Tower Grove viaduct over the Missouri Pacific and Frisco tracks yesterday afternoon, detectives saw three men acting suspiciously.

When the detectives approached them the men ran down Vandeventer avenue and the detectives fired pistols to halt them. The men were caught and gave their names as Dan Kelliher, 20 years old, of 121 S. Tenth street, and John Brown and John McGuire. They said they had no homes. They are under arrest on suspicion of being pickpockets.

HORSE SHOW MOST SUCCESSFUL EVER HELD IN ST. LOUIS

Managers, Who Had Expected a Loss, Say Receipts Will Pay Expenses.

MISS LONG GETS 3 FIRSTS

She Pays $1750 for Horse and Adolphus Busch III Also Buys Winning Animal.

The 1914 Horse Show, which closed at the Coliseum last night, was the greatest success financially, in attendance and in display of horses that was ever held in St. Louis, according to the managers. A few months ago the idea of giving a show was ready to be abandoned when enthusiasts offered to put up a guarantee fund to cover the expenses. President G. Lacy Crawford said last night that while the finances had not been figured, he believed the receipts from the week would pay all expenses, whereas the officials had expected to lose money. The Kansas City show the week before lost $9000, he said.

Miss Loula Long of Kansas City closed her week of phenomenal success by taking three firsts, a second and a fourth prize. Miss Long's stable was entered in nearly every event. When she appeared in the arena she was greeted enthusiastically.

Adolphus Busch Buys Horse.

Adolphus Busch III purchased Flirting Princess from O. J. Mooers of Columbia Mo., at the close of the show. The horse took the blue ribbon last night in class 27, harness horses single. Miss Long purchased Maurine Fisher from Jefferson Fisher of Holliday, Mo. She is said to have paid $1750.

Dinks L. Parrish bought Belle Beach a high school horse, from Thomas Bass of Mexico, Mo.

The awards last night were:

Class 54, saddle horses, local, ridden by owners—First, Rex King, owned by Paul Brown; second, Willson King, owned by J. G. Jackson; third, Sumroan, owned by J. Witbeck; fourth, Star McDonald, owned by F. G. Kersting.

Fourth, Princess Eugenia, owned by Mrs. Richard Tasker Lowndes Jr. of Kentucky.

The championship harness consolation was won by Miss Long with Revelation. Class 7, consolation, was captured by J. B. Clark, with Arthur Coffman. Class 27, harness horses single, was won by O. J. Mooers, with Flirting Princess.

WALKING JUNK SHOP UNLOADED AT STATION

Charles Forsythe, 53 years old, was arrested last night while standing in the road in front of 1108 Franklin avenue, where he lives, brandishing a hunting knife and giving his opinion of the neighbors in a loud voice.

When he was searched at the Carr Street Police Station, the following articles were taken from his pockets: Three newspapers, two pairs of socks, five safety pins, two neckties, a blank bank book, a Webster's dictionary, an assortment of needles of all sizes, three spools of thread, six pairs of shoe strings, a pair of socks, two shoe horns, a soiled shirt, three soiled collars, a pair of suspenders, a fish line, $1.15 in change, six lead pencils, a razor and a whetstone for the razor; a bracelet, a bead necklace, two rings, three railway folders, six hairpins, a towel, two cakes of soap, a hair brush, a box of shoe polish, a shaving brush, three brass coat checks, five corks, three button hooks, a key ring with 120 keys, a bottle of whisky, a bottle of "raz and gin" and a bottle of straight gin.

The man said he had no occupation, but the police suspect he is a collector.

SONS CUT OFF WITH $5, TRYING TO BREAK WILL

George P. and Clarence F. Breckenridge, two of the four sons of the late Mrs. Julia Clark Breckenridge of 4943 Page boulevard, filed suit in the Circuit Court yesterday to have their mother's will set aside. Mrs. Breckenridge, who died Oct. 28, left the bulk of her estate, estimated to be in excess of $30,000, to her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Breckenridge Groves of 4947 Page boulevard, and bequeathed to each of her four sons only $5.

In explaining this Mrs. Breckenridge said in her will: "I feel no inclination or obligation to make any further provision for my said sons, as none of them has given any evidence of affection for me or shown any solicitude or concern in my happiness or well-being."

The other two sons are William C. and James M. Breckenridge. They are named as defendants in the suit, the other defendants being Mrs. Groves, W. Dall Groves, her husband, and Preston B. Kava, a grandson of the testatrix, to whom $500 was left.

The two plaintiffs set forth that their mother was old and feeble, practically blind, subject to hallucination and wrongful impressions, and that their sister poisoned her mind against them and exalted herself in the mother's estimation. In the will Mrs. Breckenridge refers to her daughter's love and long and unfailing devotion.

GIRLS SHRIEK IN EFFORT TO STOP SULZER'S SPEECH

Fire Crackers Set Off and Other Noisy Means Adopted to Embarrass Deposed Governor.

M'CALL DENIES LOAN

Tammany Candidate Says He Did Not Borrow $21,000 From Police Official.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—One the eve of closing the campaign for the mayoralty election, the fusion and Tammany forces, through public oratory and written statements, tonight continued their political war of bitter denunciation and heated denials.

Among the interesting developments of the last day, save one, of the campaign was the repudiation by Edward E. McCall, Tammany's candidate, of a charge that he had borrowed $21,000 from former Police Inspector McLaughlin, presumably to meet "campaign assessments," when he was nominated for the State Supreme Court in 1902. McLaughlin himself made a similar denial.

The story touched on in campaign speeches by John A. Hennessy, Gov Sulzer's graft investigator, and brought up again by Hennessy yesterday in the "John Doe" inquiry into campaign charges of graft and irregularities became public in its latest form today through a published affidavit by McLaughlin's son, William W. McLaughlin Jr., who related that his father had had a hard time recovering the money from McCall, and that it had finally been repaid in the form of a check, of which his father had a photograph taken.

Calls Son Irresponsible.

The former Inspector, in an affidavit given out tonight at Democratic headquarters, said his son "was mentally irresponsible," and had been made the "tool" of McCall's enemies. Young McLaughlin was an attendant in the Supreme Court when McCall was on the bench.

Of the many spirited episodes of recent speech making throughout the city, William Sulzer, deposed Governor and now a candidate for the Assembly for the Sixth District on the lower East Side, met with one tonight that caused him to accuse his political enemies of adopting a new method of campaign warfare.

Sulzer went into the Second Assembly District to denounce Alfred E. Smith, Speaker of the Assembly, who is seeking re-election. Sulzer found himself in a strong Tammany territory. He took his place in an improvised balcony diagonally opposite the local Tammany headquarters.

Four wagons bearing McCall and Smith signs drove into a crowd of several hundred persons gathered in the street. Men set upon the wagons, tore off the signs and warned the drivers to go away. They had hardly gone when fire engines dashed up, someone having sent in a false alarm.

Fire Crackers Set Off.

When Sulzer was finally able to speak thirty giant fire crackers were set off in rapid order. Madison street horse cars, which run ordinarily at about 30-minute intervals, began to pass through the crowd frequently, each loaded with passengers who insisted that the conductor stop where the throng was most dense.

A bevy of girls in a doorway began a campaign of shrieking when Sulzer tried to talk. A fife and drum corps came on the scene. A hundred men carrying Tammany banners marched behind it. After a few fist fights, the police diverted the parade into a side street. Sulzer was then assailed with eggs and vegetables. He retired into a building, his auditors following. When he departed after his speech, the disorder was resumed.

Robert Adamson, Mitchel's manager, says Fusion will win Tuesday by 90,000. Joe Johnson, McCall's manager, predicts a Tammany victory by 50,000 at least.

Betting, when any is done, is 3 to 1 on Mitchel, but seldom has any campaign brought out as little betting. Tammany stopped betting 10 days ago. Conservative men who should know say $100,000 probably will cover all the bets made in the city. This fact is probably the best gauge of how things are going for, when there is a gamblers' chance, there is always plenty of Tammany money.

Everything indicates a tremendous victory for Mitchel and the entire Fusion ticket in all the boroughs. It is in the air. Even old-time Tammany warhorses admit it, but they say sagely: "Wait; remember 1896 when Bryan first came to town. Then it looked as if every person more than a foot high was going to vote for him, but they didn't."

Sulzer Is Expected to Win.

William Sulzer seems to have his election to the State Assembly "cinched." Out of a total of 6000 votes, it is fully predicted that he will receive 4500 and probably more. It will surely be a tremendous victory or an astounding defeat. There will be no half-way place.

Two phases of the campaign are left in the air, but a grand jury is expected to bring them to earth immediately after the election. The first is John Hennessy's "black book," in which are the dictagraph conversations with ex-Senator Stilwell, now in Sing Sing, in which Stilwell is shown to have negotiated for a pardon, promising in return to give up testimony that would force six or seven of the State Senators to vote against Sulzer's impeachment, and to "send Murphy to prison."

McLaughlin Affidavit.

Thus far the revelations are not of much value as evidence, being simply Stilwell's assertions of his ability and willingness to do certain things. From them, however, may grow other matters that will keep politics hopping hot for weeks to come.

The other feature of the campaign left undecided is the McLaughlin affidavit, in which a son of the former Police Inspector [illegible] McCall's candidacy for the Supreme Court, and after six years' hammering got back $21,000 of this money, in corroboration of the open charge made by ex-Gov. Sulzer that McCall bought his nomination. McCall and former Inspector McLaughlin denied this.

Now that the son has made affidavit that the subject was a family discussion for six years, members of his family are asserting he is of unsound mind. The entire McLaughlin family are to be witnesses before the grand jury, say those who have kept track of the developments in the campaign.

SULZER SOUGHT AID OF WILSON

By Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Telegrams signed "Chester G. Platt," the name of former Gov. Sulzer's private secretary of the executive chamber, the day before Sulzer was impeached, which sought to influence the votes of Assemblymen, were made public today.

Another telegram signed "William Sulzer," which urged Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, "to interview the President as soon as possible and make an appointment for him to see Annisdale, Mitchel and some other friends at an early date," was given out. There was nothing to indicate whether Roosevelt complied.

That Sulzer frequently called Judge McCall by telephone was shown by charge slips from the telephone company. Only one of these calls was made after the impeachment charges had been voted. Both the telegrams and telephone charge slips were revealed by State employes who are auditing the accounts of the executive chamber during Sulzer's incumbency.

A telegram signed "Chester C. Platt" and sent to Henry P. Burgard, at Fulton, N. Y., on Aug. 12, read:

"Will you telephone or telegraph Assemblyman Geoghan immediately? He voted for Frawley report yesterday, but I think if you can reach him you can prevent him from voting for impeachment. Answer. Can you help us with other Assemblymen? You ought to be in Albany."

Burgard is a Democratic leader in Buffalo. Geoghan is a member of the lower house from that city.

Telegrams sent to J. J. Cummings, George H. McGuire, M. Z. Havens and William H. Kelly of Syracuse read:

"Can you bring influence to bear by telegraph or telephone on (Representatives) H. J. Kelly and S. G. Daley to prevent them from voting for impeachment resolution? Quick action necessary."

The telegram sent to Roosevelt, dated July 21, said:

"Please interview the President as soon as possible and make an appointment for him to see Annisdale, Mitchel and some other friends at an early date. Am writing particulars."

FIVE NARROWLY ESCAPE

Fred F. Caley, 22 years old, of 2447 Shenandoah avenue, chauffeur for Edward Wagner Sr., of 2506 Hawthorne boulevard, drove his automobile into a victoria drawn by two horses and in which five persons were riding at Grand and Hawthorne last night. One of the horses was injured so that it will have to be shot and R. J. Gebhardt of 2746 Lami street, was slightly injured.

The police say Caley was going north on Grand avenue at a high rate of speed when he tried to turn into Hawthorne boulevard in front of the carriage which was coming south on Grand avenue. The automobile crashed into the horses.

Ceremony Marks Elimination of Grade Crossings

railroads are willing to do all in their power to separate the grades in St. Louis, if the city will not exact unreasonable terms. He said that the railroads do not desire to place anything in the way of safeguarding the public.

Clardy spoke in place of B. F. Bush, president of the Missouri Pacific, who was unable to be present. He said that railroad rates are lower in Missouri than in the surrounding states, and that the railroads had been hampered by burdensome legislation; but were willing to co-operate with the city to any reasonable extent.

Fay, in making the opening address, caused laughter when he said that one peculiar thing about the Tower Grove viaduct was that they are going to build the approaches first. Then the bridge will be sure of having landing places at both ends, he said.

Schmoll Speaks of Bridge.

The Tower Grove viaduct was made possible because the various interests got together on a common ground and made a valid agreement, John Schmoll, chairman of the Republican City Committee said, in speaking on behalf of the Tower Grove Heights Improvement Association. It will be completed, he said,—not because the approaches are built first,—but because the thing will be built in its entirety under a binding agreement.

"If you want to complete the free bridge," he said, digressing for a moment, "the residents of St. Louis will have to follow this example and get together. You must vote the bonds and place them in the hands of the Mayor. He will spend the money judiciously, and the bridge will be finished."

Schmoll said that he remembered years ago when the Tower Grove crossing was in a cornfield, and when boys used to chase rabbits and shoot quail there. The railroads did not have foresight enough then, he said, to buy the necessary land to carry on their business in later years, and they are now paying the penalty in large costs for building viaducts to separate grades.

Congressman Richard Bartholdt was introduced to the school children present as a "real, live Congressman." A hundred pupils from the Adams and Sherman schools attended the celebration and rendered several songs.

Bartholdt said that in his boyhood he had made up his mind that if the taxpayers of the city and the railroads did not get together and eliminate the Tower Grove crossing he would go to Congress and have it done himself. "Now it is done," he said, "and I will not have to trouble myself further."

A brass band played, whistles tooted, bells were rung, school children waved flags, and the crowd cheered, when Mayor Kiel stepped down from the platform, shovel in hand, and turned the first spadeful of earth. The shovel was presented to the organization in charge of the celebration as a souvenir.

Among the officials of the Missouri Pacific system present to emphasize the importance of the occasion were: Martin L. Clardy, vice-president and general solicitor; J. F. Green, general attorney; J. SPOTLIGHT FAILS TO STOP TANGO AT LIEDERKRANZ BALL Rays From Balcony Turned on Twenty Couples Who Offend Against the Rule.

MUSIC IS STOPPED, TOO

Hisses and Cheers Come From Onlokers When Young People Ignore Ban.

The younger element at the Liederkranz Club, Grand and Magnolia avenues, danced the tango last night despite the recent postal card vote which declared, 246 to 190, against the recognition of that dance by the club. It was the club's first ball of the season.

About two weeks ago a protest against the tango was issued by nearly a dozen ex-presidents of the Liederkranz Club, who signed an appeal to all the members to vote against the tango. The older members of the organization were said to be unalterably opposed to that dance and all other modern innovations which, in the opinion of the conservatives, detract from the dignity of dancing.

The result of the mail order vote was announced with satisfaction by the victors. They prepared for the opening ball with serene assurance that the wavy, swaying movements of the tango would not be in evidence.

It was to be a return to the rhythm of the two-step—no tango fandango frolics for the Liederkranz.

Ball Attended by 800.

About 800 persons were present, and up to the fourth number on the dance program all went merry as a marriage bell, like the historic event at Brussels the night before Napoleon and the Iron Duke grappled at Waterloo. Two-steps and the Boston waltz were the cues to which all hands—or more properly all feet—responded with heartiness.

About that point in the proceedings a rustling rumor was heard. It was to the effect that somebody was going to secede from the serenity, ignore the mail order verdict, kick over the traces and try out the tango. The rumor waxed into a reality when two couples moved out on the floor in the swaying motions of the inhibited dance.

The powers that be in the Liederkranz had ordained that in case such a thing should happen—though, of course, none of the powers expected that any of the minority would have the face or the feet to try to override the majority—the orchestra should stop playing. The orchestra leader had his orders, and when the secessionists' advent was brought to his notice he waved his wand and the music crashed into sudden silence.

The tango, it appears, is so irresistibly easy that it can be negotiated without music. The two pairs of tangoers tangoed away, regardless, and they were joined shortly by 15 to 20 other couples of the younger merrymakers.

Then happened a scene somewhat akin to the one at Brussels when came the startling news that the battle was about to brew. There were blanched faces, not from fear, but indignation. The anti-tangoers hissed. The adherents of the other side applauded. Out of the plaudits and the jeers was born a weird music by which the tangoers tangoed on until the orchestra again struck up for a two-step.

Orchestra Leader Falkenheimer advanced to the middle of the floor and announced loudly that the tango would not be permitted. "I must stop the music till the dancers quit the tango," he said. His announcement was received with merry laughter, and the tangoers kept up their dancing.

Refuse to Leave Floor.

Falkenheimer then said he was instructed to request that those dancing the tango leave the floor. This had no more effect than the other statement.

Twice before 11 p. m., when the orchestra went downstairs to play for dinner, the music was stopped, and the oponents of the tango once turned a huge searchlight on the tangoers, from the balcony. They were in the spotlight and seemed to enjoy it.

COLLECTION RULES FOR INCOME TAXES LIKELY TO CHANGE

Uncertainty as to "Payment at Source" Causes Trouble to Revenue Men and Alteration in Regulations Is Contemplated by Treasury Department.

M'ADOO DISCUSSES PROVISIONS OF LAW

Treasury Head Thinks Time Will Be Required to Work Out Rules—Payments Are Made in St. Louis Without Hitch.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Collection "at the source" of the income tax under the new Federal law which went into effect today, will take place only in cases where the "source" is a definite one, and where the income is received in stated amounts at fixed times.

The regulations for the collection of the tax, just promulgated by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, provide that the normal tax of one per cent shall be withheld from all incomes derived from fixed annual periodical rent of realty or personalty, interest, salaries, royalties, taxable annuities and other fixed annual periodical incomes exceeding $3000 a year ($4000 a year in the case of married men).

Incomes of individuals which are not fixed or certain, and payable at stated periods, shall not be withheld at the source, but shall be returned and the tax be paid by the individual. Included in this class are farmers, merchants, agents compensated on the compensation basis, lawyers doctors, authors, inventors and other professional persons. These persons are required to make personal return of all their income, provided their total income from all sources exceeds the exempted amount.

Bequests Not Taxed at Source.

The value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devised or descent shall ot be taxed from the source.

The compensation of the present President of the United States, of the Judges of the Supreme and inferior ourts of the United States, now in office, and the compensation of all officers and employes of a State or ny political subdivision thereof, are xempt from taxation at the source.

This exempts from the income tax ll salaries paid to an individual by state or any political subdivision hereof, including salaries of state, ounty and municipal officers, public chool teachers and special compenation paid by states or subdivisions hereof for professional services, hether in the shape of salaries or pecial fees.

An agent who pays, monthly or eriodically during the year, interst on rents, salaries, wages, etc., hall not withhold the tax until such ime as the rents, salaries, wages, tc., shall have reached an aggregate mount in excess of $3000 for the eriod.

These regulations for the collecon of the income tax which have een announced by the Treasury Deartment are not to be the last word devising a system for the collecon of this tax. These regulations ill be changed from time to time as xperience indicates a better way.

$800,000 for Collection Cost.

The field force for the collection of e income tax, as estimated by the ollectors of internal revenue, will nsist of 334 deputy collectors, 40 ents and 40 inspectors. To these ill be assigned the task of collectg the tax throughout the United tates. The sum of $800,000 was set ide by Congress to meet the exnse of such collection.

While in some quarters criticism garding the interpretation of the gulations issued by the Treasury epartment for the collection of the come tax, Secretary of the Treasy McAdoo believes that they are rfectly clear and that those affectcan easily understand them.

ST. LOUIS TAX PAID WITHOUT A HITCH

orporations Have No Difficulty in Settling With Revenue Collectors.

Collection of the Government inme tax at the source in St. Louis sterday, the first day, caused some nfusion, but no great inconvennce. Under the regulations issued the Treasury Department at Washton the trust companies and nkers, who made the principal coltions, had a thorough understandof their duties and responsibilin the handling of income-bearing rities for clients.

ey were required, in paying int or income on other securities xempt from the tax, to withhold cent of the amount due their unless the clients had previd with them statements of as collected on the divirporations, this form of exempt, because all core taxed on their incomes, again the dividends of the ders would be double taxaporations found that the Govnt had reposed in them more idence than in the individual. hile individuals liable to the income x must submit to the collection of e tax at its source, corporations re not subject to such provisions.

One St. Louis banker said that the congressmen, who had been denouncing corporations for years as soulless and dishonest, had shown by their votes on the income tax that they believed that corporations were more honest than individuals.

A corporation, for instance, having interest falling due yesterday collected the full amount, but the individual found that his interest check was short the 1 per cent required for the Government tax. One of the reasons why corporations were exempt from collection of the tax at the source, as explained by the Internal Revenue Department, was that all corporations, under the new law, being taxable on their entire income, were compelled to make returns to the Government, while only one person in each 100 or 150 in this district was subject to the income tax.

As all corporations were compelled to make the returns, it would be impossible for them to escape, the department stated, while individuals might evade the tax unless their income was withheld at the source. The severe penalties prescribed for failure to make a return, or for making a false return, are expected to have a good effect in the enforcement of the law.

The penalty is a fine of $20 to $2000 or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

An individual who owes a doctor, say $5000, for an operation, or a lawyer $6000 for a fee, is not authorized to withhold the income tax at the source. It is his duty to pay the bill, and the lawyer or doctor must himself file his return with the Internal Revenue Collector, making a full statement of his income.

The ordinary expenses of conducting a business are deductable from the gross income. Physicians, lawyers and other professional men, are authorized to deduct their office expenses, such as rent, salaries of clerks or stenographers, etc. Personal living expenses are not deductable from the gross income.

The local Internal Revenue Department held that where an individual had several different sources of income, paid to him through different channels, each paying agent was authorized to retain the tax. By this means the individual could not escape the tax, but could later claim his exemptions.

The local department was unable to make any estimate of the probable income tax in the St. Louis district from individuals, having no figures upon which to base an opinion. The income corporation tax last year aggregated $900,000 for this district, and it is expected that the 8000 corporations in the district will this year pay twice that amount.

Renters Liable for Tax.

Renters who have long complained of oppression by landlords thought they could see a chance to get even in withholding the income tax in paying their rents. Unless the regulations which are now on their way from Washington to St. Louis relative to the collection of rents and wages make some other provision, the renter would be liable to the Government for the income tax on the amount of rent paid to his landlord unless he withheld the tax, or unless the landlord filed with him a sworn statement claiming exemption.

Where the income tax is due at the source, the benefit of the $3000 or $4000 exemption shall not be allowed unless there shall be filed, not less than 30 days prior to the day on which the return is due, with the person or concern required to make such payment of tax at the source, a notice in writing claiming the benefit of such exemption, according to a recent explanation of the law made by Congressman Cordell Hull, the author.

When a person's tax is paid at the source, if he desires any deduction for losses, expenses of business, etc., he may file claim together with return of any other income upon which the tax is not withheld at the source, either with the Collector or with the person or corporation withholding the tax, as the payer may choose.

MRS. SCUDDER'S DAUGHTERS FIGHT INHERITANCE TAX

Question of Exemption of the Children of an Adopted Child Is Raised.

Whether bequests to children of an adopted child are exempt from assessment of a collateral inheritance tax is the question involved in a suit of the Missouri State University, beneficiary of the tax, against legatees of the late Samuel Cupples.

The university, through its attorney, Forrest C. Donnell, is attempting to assess the inheritances of Mrs. John H. Overall and the Misses Gladys and Maud Scudder, daughters of Mrs. Amelia Cupples Scudder, adopted daughter of Cupples.

Through their counsel, the three sisters are opposing payment of the tax. They contend that the statute, which exempts legacies to an adopted child, should be construed to give the same exemption for children of the foster child.

After payment of various bequests, the Cupples will provided that Mrs. Scudder receive six-tenths of the remainder, and her three daughters one-third each of the balance. The principal of the estate was to remain in charge of three trustees, those named in the will being R. S. Brookings, Edward Hidden and Albert N. Edwards, for eight years after the death of the testator. Meantime Mrs. Scudder and her daughters were to get the income.

Attorney Donnell estimates the share of Mrs. Scudder's daughters, including principal and income, at the end of the eight years, at about $172,353 each. On this basis, at 5 per cent, he contends the university is entitled to a total sum of about $25,836 from the legacies of the three Scudder children.

The defense is represented by Attorneys F. N. Judson and John H. Overall, husband of one of the beneficiaries. The case is set for hearing before Probate Judge Holtcamp in December.

'SEVEN OF 'EM' ON GOURLEY'S TRAIL SINCE HE 'CUT 'EM'

Whole Family Backs Up Husband When He Appeals to Police for Protection.

Three months ago M. L. Gourly, 26 years old, of 2919 Madison street, who had been "going out with the boys," promised his wife, Laura, that henceforth he would try to be a better man. One result of his efforts to please his helpmate was his appearance at the Dayton Street Police Station shortly after 8 o'clock last night, accompanied by his wife, his mother, Mrs. Malinda Gourly, who lives with them, and his 5-year-old son Barrett, all in fear and trembling.

"They're after me!" Gourly said. to the Desk Sergeant.

"Who?" asked the Sergeant.

"The whole seven of 'em! They've threatened to get me, dead or alive," declared Gourly.

"Yes, and to cut his heart out," added his wife.

"That's a fact," said his mother.

Little Barrett simply shivered and said nothing. The Sergeant insisted upon an explanation.

"Well, it's this way," said Gourly, glancing fearsomely toward the door. "You see, up to about three months ago I had been running around with a gang of fellows—seven of 'em—who are—well, they're not of as high an intellectual type as I am, anyhow. My wife didn't like for me to go with the gang, so I cut 'em."

"Yes, he did," said young Mrs. Gourly.

"And ever since then," continued Gourly, "the whole seven of 'em have been after me. Last night they came to the house when I was away"——

"Where were you?" asked Phillips.

"At—at lodge," replied Gourly. "And some of 'em rapped on the windows and others demanded admission. Finally, my wife, half scared to death, opened the door. They told her they wanted me. She told them I was at—at lodge, and they said they'd wait for me, all of 'em, and cut my heart out when they got me."

"They said just that," declared his wife, "just those words."

"And then today they came to the house," Gourly went on, his teeth chattering, "and told my wife and mother they'd be back and get me, dead or alive, by 8 o'clock tonight. I want protection."

Gourly refused to give the name of his quondam companions. A patrolman was detailed to go to the house and stand guard.

WELL-KNOWN MEN OF GRANITE CITY MAY BE INDICTED

Grand Jury at Edwardsville Has Investigated City Printing and Many Fires.

MAYOR ACCUSED BY PAPER

Kirkpatrick Alleged to Have Given Work to Office in Which He Is Interested.

The Madison County grand jury, in session at Edwardsville, Ill., is expected to make a report to Judge George A. Crow tomorrow or Tuesday carrying indictments involving well-known men of Granite City. Among the indictments expected is that of a prominent professional man of that city.

Among other things, the grand jury is said to have taken cognizance of a leading article which appeared two weeks ago in the Granite City Press-Record, in which the statement was made that Mayor Marshall E. Kirkpatrick is a stockholder in the Granite City Leader, a Socialist organ, and that he has given the city printing to that paper. The Press-Record pointed out that it is in violation of the law for a city official to confer a contract upon a concern in which he is interested financially. It is rumored the grand jury has investigated the city printing contract.

Mayor Kirkpatrick is serving his second term, having been elected each time on the Socialist ticket. He is employed in a foundry and is well known as a baseball player.

A number of fires of mysterious origin in Granite City also are said to have been subjects of grand jury inquiry. State Fire Marshal John Richard has investigated at least two fires within the year that appeared to have been incendiary.

A leading citizen of Granite City, known for his political activities, is believed to have been the subject of investigation by the grand jury in connection with about 14 fires which destroyed dwellings.

FAT BURGLAR ABANDONS ALL HIS LOOT IN FLIGHT

A 200-pound burglar discarded his coat containing loot from a previous job while he tried a porch-climbing stunt at the home of Jackson Johnson, president of the International Shoe Co., in University City, Friday night. Johnson's negro chauffeur fired four shots at the burglar and the coat is now in the hands of Marshal Willman, awaiting a claimant. Jewelry valued at $250 which had been stolen from the residence of Frank J. Cabot, also in University City, was found in the coat.

The Cabots are out of town and the burglary at their home was discovered when Mrs. William Zircher, whose husband is gardner for Johnson, saw a light burning on the second floor.

Mrs. Zircher alarmed the neighborhood. Ernest Strahm, the chauffeur, turned out. He saw the burglar scaling the side porch of the Johnson home and fired. The burglar returned the negro's fire, but neither was wounded.

Other articles of jewelry found in the burglar's coat in addition to that which belonged to the Cabots, were identified as having been stolen from the residence of A. Kamp, 7018 Washington avenue.

W. C. T. U. PLANS TO FAST FOR TEMPERANCE JAN. 1

New Years Day Set Aside for Prayer for Country-Wide Prohibition by Convention.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 1.—New year's day, 1914, was set aside by the National Women's Christian Temperance Union today in annual convention here as a day of fasting and prayer in behalf of a constitutional amendment for countrywide prohibition. The convention selected January 15 next as "National constitutional prohibition day."

Mrs. Lillian N. Stevens of Portland, Me., national President, was authorized to call a W. C. T. U. mass meeting in Washington, D. C., to bring the subject of liquor traffic evils before Congress.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Anderson, national Recording Secretary, reported a committee had been appointed to investigate statements that there is a lack of temperance education of Indians by the Government. Mrs. Anderson said the Government appropriates $100,000 annually for suppressing vice among Indians but that none of this money appears to be used in temperance work.

LANGDON-DAVIES SAYS U. S. SHOULD CONTROL MEXICO

English Lecturer in St. Louis Also Predicts Subjection Would Take 15 to 20 Years.

HITS WAR PREPARATIONS

Peace Proponent on Economical Grounds Gives Figures to Show Cost of Armaments.

Bernard Noel Langdon-Davies, a young Englishman who is fighting for peace on economic grounds, and leaving the moral phase of the question to other speakers, arrived in St. Louis last night to fill speaking engagements at Sheldon Memorial tonight and at the City Club tomorrow. He will probably also address St. Louis labor organizations, to whose officials he has been recommended by Samuel Gompers. He is at the Planters.

He represents the Garton Foundation, endowed by Sir Richard Garton, a London banker, whose officers include former Prime Minister Balfour, Viscount Esher and Norman Angell.

"The moral side of the peace-and-war question has been very fully and ably presented by other speakers," said Langdon-Davies last night. "I do not ignore the moral phase, but I place the emphasis on the idea of the cost of war, and the cost of armed peace, in relation to the returns which they bring. If this lesson can be taught to the people, there will be little need for any other argument against war.

War Not Necessarily Wrong.

"I do not say that all war is wrong, or that all soldiers are bad. I served four years in the volunteers, and I have a boy who perhaps will do the same. I believe there is a place for force in the affairs of nations, as there is for a police force in city affairs. Countries that have sunk below the standard of civilized nations must sometimes be handled by force.

"Mexico, for example, has got to be brought to a status of civilization. President Wilson has an extraordinarily hard task in the Mexican situation, which he is managing very well. I left England last July, before the Mexican situation became so acute, but I believe that Englishmen generally would like to see Mexico controlled and kept in order by the United States.

"At the same time I believe that if the United States invades Mexico it will have a 15 or 20 years' job on its hands in pacifying the country, with its mountains and its many guerilla bands.

Millions Spent in Preparation.

"England," he said, returning to the financial argument against war, "is spending $400,000,000 a year on war when it has no war. That is $1 a week for each family, and that does not include the interest on war loans, which increases the total to $500,000,000. Germany has increased its war expenditures by $200,000,000, and France by $250,000,000 in the last year. The result is that, while trade in Europe is booming, money is scarce, simply because we spend too much on unproductive things.

"If there were another panic in this country like that of 1907, America couldn't get money in Europe as she did then. At that time money collected from 17 countries was loaned in London to America at 8 per cent. Today it couldn't be had at 20 per cent. Even the rate of the Bank of England is now 5 per cent, which is abnormally high.

"A nation that goes to war to gain territory and wins, gets no benefit from the new territory. It doesn't acquire land, only sovereignty. Yet people talk about a nation acquiring territory by conquest, as if we were still in the days of feudalism, when the conquest of a country reduced its people to slavery.

Price Paid in the Balkans.

"The Balkan States have paid more than $100 an acre for all the territory they got from Turkey, and still they haven't got it. The people of Germany are not a pfennig better off for holding Alsace, or the people of England for holding South Africa, with all its gold and diamonds. Trade advantages? There are none. Our own colonies raise tariff walls against us."

Langdon-Davies terms himself a constitutional suffragist, and says English women might have the ballot today, but for the excesses of the Pankhurst following.

"The Government cannot, will not and should not yield under fire, to the suffragettes or to anyone else," he said.

He said the admission of Mrs. Pankhurst to the United States was an act of wise policy, but that he hoped she would fail to raise much money in this country.

FRANCHISE EXPIRED; CAN'T COLLECT BILLS

Chillicothe Water Company Appeals to High Court in Claim for $40,000 Due.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Whether a private water company is justified in shutting off the water supply to a city the moment its franchise expires, or can get compensation if it continues its service, was a question today presented in the Supreme Court of the United States for review.

The city water company of Chillicothe, Mo., whose franchise expired in 1906, is seeking to collect some $40,000 from the city for water service since that date on the ground that it would not have been justified for humanitarian reasons, in shutting off the service. The lower Federal courts held that the company could collect nothing. The water company wants the Supreme Court to review these decisions.

Scout Younger in Town Arranging Bandit Dramas.

With the arrival in St. Louis yesterday of Scout Younger, once a member of the notorious Younger brothers outlaw band, but now an honest citizen, came the announcement that beginning today the New Gem Theater will depict the life of the bandit and his followers in moving pictures. Manager Starr of the New Gem announced that the Younger pictures would be shown for eight days.

Younger owns the rights for several big film dramas of which he is the author and in each of which he plays the leading parts, depicting every scene, incident and character mentioned in the newspaper stories of the doings of the Younger band.

He is arranging to produce "Quantrell and His Men" in St. Louis, and within a few days. This drama will show the exciting scenes, holdups, raids, cavalry charges and bombardments that the gang indulged in. As many of the characters who followed old Quantrell as are alive will take part in the show. Younger says his picture story of the last fight of his band, which began in Indian Territory and ended up in Wyoming, when he, the only surviving member of the outlaw band, was shot and imprisoned, was taken on the spots where the true happenings occurred.

J. C. R., MYSTERY MAN OF FORGOTTEN IDENTITY, MISSING

He Disappears From Rochester (Minn.) Asylum, Where He Had Freedom of Place.

UNABLE TO GET ON TRAIN

Citizens Pay No Attention to Him as He Has Run Away Before and Returned.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ROCHESTER, Minn., Nov. 1.—"J. C. R.," the mysterious patient at the Rochester State Hospital, whose strange case of lost identity has attracted nation-wide attention, is missing and tonight authorities at the State institution are at a loss to know where he has gone. His sudden disappearance has added another mystery to the case which has been shrouded in mystery from the beginning.

His departure has revealed that before leave the State Hospital J. C. R. took a number of old coins belonging to an inmate of the asylum who has a mania for the collection of rare coins and who had gathered together quite a number of pieces of money.

Had Freedom of Asylum.

J. C. R. was seen last at the hospital Friday afternoon. He has had the freedom of the institution, and no attention has been given to the thought that the man would run away, as he appeared perfectly satisfied with the treatment of him and took a great interest in the efforts of officials to learn his identity.

Friday afternoon he was noticed in Rochester, a few familiar with the case recognizing him by his articulation of Hi-do-he, as he with cane in hand limped down the street. In the evening he attempted to board a Northwestern train, pointing in an easterly direction when quizzed by the brakeman as to his destination. Being unable to obtain passage, he then sought to buy a ticket with the coins in his possession, but the transportation was not furnished, on the advice of a Rochester citizen.

No more attention was paid to the matter, as those who knew the case believed he would return to the hospital when he found he could not buy a ticket. Since he failed to return to the hospital, efforts to find him have been unavailing.

Has Run Away Before.

J. C. R. has run away before, but always has returned. When first taken to the State Hospital it was customary for him quite often to disappear and not to return for a number of days, but eventually he would return and manifest great sorrow that he attempted to leave.

Hospital officials tonight believe he will return, as his inability to talk and his lack of funds will not allow him to stray far. Notices have been sent to nearby towns.

It is believed that the man, discouraged by the failure to find a relative or friend to reveal his identity, decided when he discovered the coins to go East.

COUPLE FEAR BAD LUCK IF MARRIED BY JUSTICE

Belleville Man and Woman, on Third Event for Each, Decide to Try Priest.

Ferdinand Funke, 53 years old, who got a license to marry Mrs. Lena Bauer, 52 years old, at Belleville yesterday, was not backward about expressing his distrust in the marriages performed by justices of the peace and told Justice Ward that he had tried the Justice route twice and both times had been disappointed.

"We are going to a priest this time," said Funke to Justice Ward when the latter solicited the work of performing the marriage ceremony while Funke and his prospective bride were waiting for the license clerk.

"This is the third trip for both of us and both of us have had bad luck being married by a Justice of the Peace," Funke explained. He told the license clerk his first wife died and the second one secured a divorce from him. Mrs. Bauer had the same experience with her first two husbands.

COMMITTEE GETS INTO SNARL OVER CURRENCY BILL

Adjournment Taken to Wednesday Without Affirmative Action on Capitalization or Control Feature of the Regional Bank Plan Agreed To.

SOME TO INSIST ON FEDERAL CONTROL

O'Gorman Proposes Capitalization Be 10 Per Cent of National Bank Stock in District, but Scheme Is Not Disposed Of.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—A snarl was reached today in the running discussion of the administration currency bill by the Senate banking committee when the committee spent hours in debating the capitalization and control of the four regional banks tentatively proposed to administer the new system. The debate at times waxed vociferous and the committee adjourned tonight until Wednesday without affirmative action.

Several members took the position that hope for a unanimous report from the committee hinged upon the question of the control of the regional banks which may lie either in the Government or in the member banks. The supporters of the strict governmental control theory declared that they would combat any bank control of the banks even to a fight on the floor of the Senate.

Divided Control in House Plan.

Administration supporters in the committee adhered to the plan in the administration bill as it came from the house, by which the banks would elect six directors of each regional bank and the Federal reserve board would appoint three. The board, however, would have the power to remove three of the bank directors.

The committee rejected a proposition advanced by Senator Hitchcock by which the entire system would be capitalized at $100,000,000, to be subscribed by the banks underwriting the stock and selling it to the public. This $100,000,000 would be under the absolute control of the Federal board, which would distribute it among the regional Federal board banks as conditions warranted. The committee voted this down, 7 to 4.

O'Gorman Has New Plan.

Senator O'Gorman proposed that each regional bank be capitalized at 10 per cent of the national bank capital in the district which it served and that each bank controls its own capital. He suggested two means of obtaining the capital. The first would require the banks to underwrite the stock and offer it to the public. The second would require the banks to subscribe the amount of 5 per cent of their capital stock and would leave the remainder open to public subscription. Senator O'Gorman's plan was not disposed of today.

The committee deferred further meetings until Wednesday, owing to the absence of several members who left Washington for the elections.

HOPE OF PAY ONLY IN 10 MONTHS FOR WORKHOUSE MEN

Employes at Institution at Belleville to Take a Chance on Remuneration.

Employes of the workhouse at Belleville will have to work the next 10 months without pay. They hope the County Board may be induced to allow their pay for that period in the next appropriation bill.

Some of the County Supervisors want to abolish the workhouse, and when the annual appropriation was made last September they had it cut from $7500 to $750.

Sheriff Mulconnery, who has charge of the workhouse, announced that he would keep his men—two guards and an engineer—at work and that the men would take a chance on getting their pay next September.

After County Clerk H. F. Winkler had informed the Supervisors at Belleville that he would not sign a voucher for the payment of clerk hire in the office of the Clerk of the East St. Louis City Court, the County Board refused to allow the claim of Frank Veach, the Clerk of that court, for $750 for clerk hire for a period of 10 months.

Last spring Judge Vandeventer of the East St. Louis City Court asked the board to allow the Clerk of the City Court of East St. Louis $75 a month for clerk hire to take care of the extra work imposed by the convening of a grand jury for the City Court.

Supervisor Zerweck, a member of the Judiciary Committee of the board, told Judge Vandeventer that the law would not authorize the payment. He said the city courts must be maintained by the city.

Supervisor Lewis of East St. Louis wanted to pay the bill. The motion was voted down by 23 to 9.

MITCHELL LEADS UNION DANCE WITH MRS. PANKHURST

English Militant in Chicago Tells Women of Illinois to Vote Carefully.

LAUDS ASQUITH ATTACK

Predicts Fall of English Ministry; First Suffrage Commonwealth She Has Visited.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British militant suffragette, and her business manager, Miss Joan Wickham, visited an equal suffrage State for the first time today. They were met at Danville Ill., by a committee of Chicago women, and came to Chicago this morning.

"I never felt so much like dancing in my life," said Mrs. Pankhurst as she alighted from the train, where she was met by Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout and other suffragists. "But I never dance."

Despite this statement Mrs. Pankhurst did dance tonight. With John Mitchell, the labor leader, as her partner as she led the grand march at the Women's Trade Union League ball.

"They'll have to give us the vote or kill us," Mrs. Pankhurst said in answer to a question as to how long she was to keep up her militant methods. "They can't starve us, nor imprison us, nor scare us out of the vote."

Mrs. Pankhurst smiled when she saw the policewomen, who have been assigned as her bodyguard:

"Quite different from London," she remarked.

Must Do Duty at Polls.

Mrs. Pankhurst told several hundred members of the Political Equality League that if the women of Illinois failed in their duty at the polls the fight for votes for women "would receive a setback all over the world."

The English leader warned her hearers against party affiliation, telling them to vote for the "best man or woman and in the interests of humanity." She also advised them against militancy, saying that American women do not have to resort to violence to obtain the vote.

She thought the attack upon Premier Asquith today by women with dog whips "perfectly proper and another step in the cause for which we are fighting."

"The men of Ulster and the Unionists party in general are doing more for the suffrage cause than the South of Ireland," she told members of the Irish Fellowship Club.

Taxicabs decorated with the colors of the Illinois State suffrage organization, purple and yellow, with the inscription "Votes for Women," conveyed the party to the Hotel La Salle. Mrs. Pankhurst frequently leaned forward and nodded at the windows of the cab.

First Suffrage State She Visited.

"Just think," she said, "when I was here before, several years ago, the petition of the women to vote had just been voted down by the State Legislature. Now I come and you have the vote and are in the midst of an important fight. This is the first suffrage State I have visited.

"I am convinced we shall have suffrage in England in a few years. The women of the United States with their tremendous moral power will help us to get it. We shall have to get rid of the present Government in power, but that will not take long. It is even now tottering to its fall. When the Government goes out we shall get the vote.

"The London papers and the police have a new policy. They are not printing the news of militant acts in the papers and arrests are not being reported. One of the worst enemies of the women in England is Lord Northcliffe. His paper, the Daily Mail, is a bird of evil omen. But it cannot do much more harm."

Mrs. Pankhurst attended the ball of the Woman's Trade Union League tonight. She will remain here for several days. Among the meetings arranged for her is one at the Institutional African Methodist Episcopal Church before a negro congregation on Tuesday evening.

PRODUCE MARKET TO COST $500,000 PLANNED FOR CITY

Buildings to Be Constructed Near Grand and Olive; Work Soon to Be Started.

FARMERS TO RENT STALLS

Leases Totaling $25,000 Already Applied For; Scheme May Reduce Living Cost.

Should the new tariff fail to lower the high cost of living, there is still an optimistic outlook for St. Louis housewives, if the predictions of the promoters of the proposed central produce and provision market are substantiated.

The plans for the proposed market call for seven acres of buildings, sheds and stalls, an investment of $500,000.

The market is to be located near Grand avenue and Olive street, and several sites along Grand avenue have been under consideration. Until the lease is closed, the projectors will not announce the chosen site.

The incorporation of the market company and the purchase of the real estate, which alone will call for an investment of $250,000, are projected in a few days by the promoters. Construction on the sheds will be begun within six weeks, it is stated.

The principle behind the new market, as explained by Beverley M. Nevins, president of the Nevins Realty and Investment Co. and one of the chief promoters, is co-operation of farmer, merchant and produce man.

Leases for $25,000 a Year.

Five hundred and fifty St. Louis County farmers have signed rental leases aggregating $25,000 a year, and many of them will be shareholders in the proposed corporation, Nevins told a reporter last night. He explains the project thus:

The farmers will daily bring their produce to the central market and sell direct to the consumer from stalls, 8x25 feet in dimension. Or they may sell their goods to the grocers, who also will have space, or to the commission men. They will be permitted to find the best market the demand will stand.

The produce men also will have an important part to play. They are expected to maintain the balance of price between the merchant and the farmer. They will be in touch with the outside market, when importing is to their advantage, and if the surplus of local products warrants it, then exporting will be profitable.

Advantages to Merchant.

The merchant's advantages will lie in cheap rental and in a co-operative system of delivery. The economical saving on rental alone, both to him and to the customer, is estimated at 33 1-3 per cent. The saving on delivery is estimated at 10 to 15 per cent.

There is to be a common shipping room, where all purchases will be assembled and routed, and then delivered by automobile trucks.

Economically the new market is expected to eliminate a portion of the enormous annual waste of produce, estimated by the Government at several hundred millions of dollars for the whole country. This waste arises from the usual clumsy and inadequate methods of marketing produce in this country.

For instance, during the last tomato season there was such an overstocked market in St. Louis that tomatoes were sold by Third street produce men at 10 cents a bushel. St. Louis County farmers let their tomatoes rot on the vines.

Apples Rotting in Barrels.

Today, it is pointed out, thousands of barrels of apples are rotting in Calhoun County, because the farmers cannot find a proper market for them. Apples that the Calhoun County farmers sell at $1.50 a barrel, by reason of refrigeration, freight rates and incidental expenses, by the time they have reached the middlemen are selling at $3 a barrel. When they reach the consumer they are so high that he demands only the best grade of fruit.

The new market expects to take care of this condition by introducing modern methods, such as are done by the large department stores. The over-production or the abundant production are to be advertised as leaders. By the introduction of the whole chain of economical methods, everybody gets a fair price, and the consumer gets his product at a bargain. The waste is eliminated.

The main building of the market will be constructed of white tiling. In time it is expected to house such features as an up-to-date creamery, where butter will be made while you wait; a culinary department, where recipes and directions and general information on subjects of domestic science will be disseminated; a tea and coffee department, where roasters, blenders and grinders will be on display; and there will be exhibits by the large manufacturers of food products.

Auction House Planned.

A wholesale auction house, modeled on the lines of a grain exchange, also will be one of the advantages, it is planned. This market will have to do with the transfer of carload lots. It has been said that if wheat were sold by the methods of handling produce, a loaf of bread would cost 45 cents.

The market is the growth of a co-operative movement on the part of St. Louis County farmers of two decades. The St. Louis Conuty Farm and Market Bureau has been instrumental in planning the market, and it is expected several of its prominent members will be vice-presidents of the proposed incorporation.

Revelers Attack East Alton Girl.

Miss Arline Puetz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Puetz of East Alton, was attacked by a crowd of Halloween masqueraders on the streets of East Alton Friday night, who mistook her for a boy dressed up in woman's clothes. Her grandmother's dress which she was wearing was torn from her as she struggled to get free.

2 HERO MEDALS TO ST. LOUISANS, ONE TO ILLINOIS YOUTH

W. Ross King of Kane Saved Boy From Drowning, Men Here Saved Five Persons.

Against St. Louis' two Carnegie heroes the little town of Kane, five miles north of Jerseyville, Ill., proudly pits its one. He is W. Ross King, 19-year-old grocery clerk, who lives with his widowed mother. He will receive a bronze medal and $2000 from the Carnegie Hero Fund, according to the announcement of awards made by the commission yesterday.

King saved the life of Henry W. Beuschel, a classmate at the Kane High School, when Beuschel was drowning in Macoupin Lake on May 23, 1912. Beuschel was then 16 years old.

Several persons were bathing in the lake, and King, who had lost his right hand in an accident two years before and therefore found it difficult to swim, was watching from the bank.

Beuschel was seized with cramps and went down in eight feet of water. King sprang into the lake and, after a desperate struggle, dragged Beuschel ashore. Beuschel was unconscious an hour. Restorative measures revived him. An effort to keep the accident from Beuschel's parents resulted in making King's heroism a secret for several days.

St. Louis' heroes are Detective Sergt. Arthur McGuire of 3423 Chippewa street and Louis O. Mott of 825 Tesson street. They received gold medals and $1000 each for rescuing five negroes from drowning last spring during a freshet of the River des Peres.

FARMER CONVICTED OF KILLING HIS NEIGHBOR

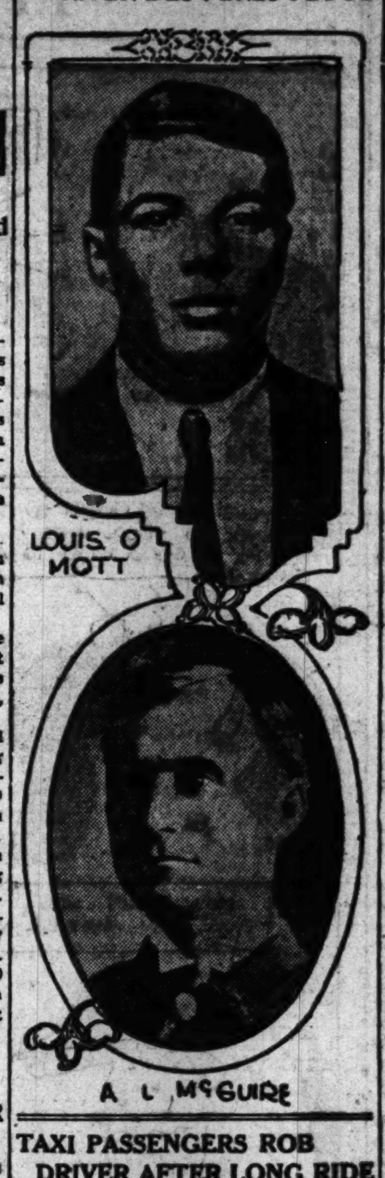
Both Had Carried Shotguns in Anticipation of an Encounter Before Final Meeting.

BUTLER, Mo., Nov. 1.—Frank Shuster, a farmer residing south of here, was found guilty in the Circuit Court today of killing George Booth last April, and sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary.

Shuster and Booth had been enemies for many months. Shuster carried a shotgun in the field while at work for several days before the killing. When Booth passed the field, Shuster went to the roadside and killed Booth in his wagon. Booth had a shotgun in the wagon at the time.

Shuster's wife turned on him before the trial and refused to testify in his behalf. The trial lasted a week and the jury deliberated for 48 hours. Shuster will not appeal.

CARNEGIE HEROES OF RIVER DES PERES FLOOD



TAXI PASSENGERS ROB DRIVER AFTER LONG RIDE

Obtain $22, Pawn Ticket for Diamond Ring, Then Break Car to Prevent Pursuit.

When Henry Rischencor of 3409 Pine street, chauffeur for the Columbia Taxicab Co., requested fare from two well-dressed men he had driven from Channing avenue and Olive streets to Marcus avenue and Lewis place early yesterday morning, they reached into their overcoat pockets and drew revolvers.

Fischencor obeyed their command to throw up his hands. The men then robbed him of $22 and a pawn ticket for a $90 diamond ring.

Before permitting their victim to lower his hands the robbers shut off the power and broke some part of the machinery, so that he could not pursue them. Then they fled.

100 HURT WHEN STAND COLLAPSES AT FOOTBALL GAME

Players Desert Field and Aid in Rescue Work at DePauw University.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., Nov. 1.—One hundred persons or more, most of whom were women, were hurt, eight seriously, when the bleachers on De Pauw University athletic field collapsed just before the De Pauw-Rose Polytechnic football game this afternoon. It was estimated that more than 700 men and women were on the bleachers when they went down.

Members of both football squads did good work in disentangling the spectators from the collapsed stands. The eight believed to have been most seriously injured are:

Chester Dallripple, Terre Haute; legs injured.

Mrs. S. Foster, Greencastle; injured from shock.

Miss Eugenia Pickett, Greencastle; back wrenched.

Mrs. R. A. Foster, Indianapolis; left leg crushed.

Ray Wade, Indianapolis; neck lacerated.

W. J. Wheeler, Evansville; internally injured.

Miss Gladys Light, Terre Haute; ankle dislocated.

Miss Florence Dillman, Connersville; leg broken.

The swaying of the crowd in cheering the De Pauw team as it came on the field is believed to have been the immediate cause of the collapse.

"Old Gold day" was being observed at the university, and a large number of alumni from out of town were here for the game.

De Pauw won, by the score of 16 to 4.

STUDENTS TAKE TEACHER AND BRIDE ON DRAY RIDE

Effort to Keep Ceremony at Poplar Bluff a Secret Failed.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Nov. 1.—Alvin H. Fillers, a high school instructor, and Miss Lelle Duncan, a teacher in the West End School, were married here Thursday evening and tried to keep the wedding a secret.

Fillers went to a football game at Sikeston yesterday. His bride was awaiting him at the depot last night and there was a crowd of students and teachers there also. Fillers and his bride were placed on a dray wagon and were then driven through the business section of the city, while students made much ado.

INDIANAPOLIS CARS TIED UP; GOVERNOR WON'T INTERVENE

Mayor Asks That State Take Action in Strike of Street Railway Employes, but Executive Refuses to Take Any Hand in Matter.

MOB RIOTS FOR HOUR IN DOWNTOWN STREET

Head of Municipality Admits That Police Cannot Control Situation—400 Strikebreakers Brought In From Chicago.

By Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 1.—Gov. Samuel M. Ralston emphatically refused early tonight to take any action in the street car strike, which completely tied up the service here at noon today.

He told Mayor Shank, who admitted that the situation was beyond control by the city authorities, that the police were not doing their full duty and that if they should continue not to do their duty the Mayor should appeal to Sheriff Porteous of Marion County for aid.

The Mayor tonight conferred with the Sheriff, but no decision was reached. No attempt had been made to move a car tonight, although about 400 strikebreakers were brought into the city this afternoon on a special train from Chicago.

President Robert I. Todd of the street railway company said tonight that he was prepared to start the cars at any time that he was offered adequate police protection.

Mob Riots in Street.

For more than an hour late today a mob, estimated at 5000 persons, fought in the odwntown business section before it could be broken up by the mounted police. The trouble started when Joe Hinchman, an inspector for the car company, tried to repair a broken trolley pole on a car standing at Meridian and Washington streets.

The mob pulled Hinchman from the car and started to drag him to the union headquarters, when he was rescued at Illinois and Washington street by the police.

The crowd started to take the inspector away from the police and the officers had to shoot into the air to drive the crowd back. The crowd continued rioting and fighting until the mounted reserves arrived.

At a meeting of business men with Mayor Shank and his advisers the advisability of closing the saloons until the strike is settled was considered, but no action was taken.

Thousands of men and women walked the streets tonight wearing placards which read "We walk; did you?" Women took a prominet part in the disorder. They stood in the crowd, defying the police and strikebreakers.

Citizens Walk Home.

Although vehicles of every description were pressed into service, the great majority of the Indianapolis citizens who did not join the mob that surrounds the Louisiana street car barns where the strikebreakers are quartered, walked home tonight.

That the Federal Government may take a hand in the strike was intimated in a statement by Postoffice Inspector William T. Fletcher. The car company has a contract with the Government to collect the mail from a number of sub-stations.

Inspector Fletcher declared that the mails must be collected on schedule and if they were not that the Government would start an investigation and make arrests if necessary.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 1.—Local option elections will be held next Tuesday in 10 counties of Southern Illinois, though in the majority of cases only a few precincts will vote on the issue.

In Perry County the liquor question will be voted on at Duquoin, Pinckneyville and Willisville.

Several small towns in Randolph County will vote on the matter—Coulterville, which is now "dry," and Baldwin, Percy, Rockwood and Steeleville, all of which are "wet."

Petersburg, Menard County, also will witness a contest between the saloon and anti-saloon forces, as will Mound City, Mounds, Ullin and Grand Chain, in Pulaski County.

Thebes is the only point in Alexander County where the matter will be before the voters, but in Cass County it will be voted on in one precinct of Beardstown, now "wet," and two precincts in Virginia, now "dry."

In Hardin County the issue will be before the voters in Battery Rock, Cave-in-Rock and Roelclare; and six precincts, covering the principal villages of Calhoun County, also will vote on the saloon question.

The saloon question also will be an issue in Menard County.

Ousler, head of the Department of Supplies of Pittsburg, and Harry McKelvy, a policeman, were arrested today charged with conspiracy in connection with alleged registration frauds. They were released on bail for a hearing next Monday.

This was the latest move in the most bitterly contested municipal case in the history of the city and was followed by the announcement that the head of a detective agency of national reputation had arrived here to consult with the Committee of 100, a citizens' organization for a clean election next Tuesday. It was also stated that the conduct of the campaign had been closely followed for months by men in the employ of the agency, and their detailed report had been made to the committee.

The principal offices to be filled at the election will be those of Mayor and five seats of the nine in the City Council.

"LEFTY" FLYNN'S CHORUS GIRL WIFE GETS A DIVORCE

Alimony of $20 a Month Goes With Interlocutory Decree Against Football Star.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Mrs. Maurice B. Flynn, the chorus girl wife of the famous Yale football player, has obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce in the court of Justice Devondorf, who confirmed the report of Attorney E. W. Gregg of this city, the referee.

A peculiar feature of the order signed by Justice Devondorf is that virtually no alimony is granted to Mrs. Flynn.

Attorneys for the young woman say that they were unable to learn that "Lefty" Flynn had any means of support and so were content to accept the divorce with a small alimony. This will amount to about $20 a month, but the costs of the action will aggregate nearly $7000.

"Lefty" still is said to be employed in Canada. The young woman returned to New York a few days ago after a trip through Europe on which she started after leaving Syracuse, where the divorce action was heard late last summer. She and Flynn were married last January in the face of strong parental objections.

CONVICT RIDICULES MAN WHO SERVED VOLUNTARY TERM

Writer in Prison Paper Thinks Osborne's Efforts at Reform Will Be Futile.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 2.—The effort of Thomas M. Osborne, who served a self-imposed sentence at Auburn prison to learn at first hand the psychological effect of penitentiary life, among the prisoners today were characterized as well meant but futile in an article in Good Words, the paper printed at the Atlanta Federal prison.

This article, under the caption, "An Amateur Convict," said that "Mr. Osborne's trip to Topset with a string tied to himself" was both estimable and entertaining and he deserves credit for directing attention to prison problems.

The article adds, however, "that although in this penitentiary Osborne really may have gained some ideas about physical existence in jail, he actually got no deeper than the surface of the infernos in which all bona fide convicts must live.

Situation of the Prisoner.

The article calls attention to the fact that the prisoner, who at the end of his term slinks out into the world with a $5 bill in the pocket of his prison-made clothes, has no applauding world waiting to "crown him with wreaths of reform and humanitarism."

"The only companions of the real prisoners are solitude," the article continues, "and vain regrets for the past, with shame and humiliation at the treatment to which he is subjected in prison and dread of the prospect of disgrace and persecution which will await him when he goes back to the world."

"Mr. Osborne," says the article, "never will know anything of prison life which he might not just as well have learned as an observant visitor." The secret of seeing prisons through a prisoner's eyes, it is pointed out, cannot be handed from one person to another at will.

"It will take root only in prepared soil and Mr. Osborne's mind is a kind of loam that will take a great deal of fertilizing before becoming available."

Hope is expressed that good will come of Osborne's experiment and it is suggestaed that if Judges and Prosecutors were obliged to qualify by spending a term in prison no longer than that of Osborne, "justice and decency in administration of criminal law would be greatly advanced."

Good Words is published by the prisoners and, as is stated in an editorial in the current issue, articles appearing therein present the views and ideas of the prisoners and not those of the officials.

Little Mother Is a Cinderella

Busch Employes Make Donations

Gifts Follow Child's Visit to Funeral

Family of Girl, Who Took Baby Sister to See Brewer's Obsequies, Receives Many Gifts Which Make Home Comfortable.

JOSEPHINE RAUCH
ADELINE RAUCH

A transformation that has taken place in the home of the Rauch family at 2515 South Seventh street since Josephine Rauch, the 8-year-old "little mother" to six other Rauch children, attended the funeral of Adolphus Busch a week ago, is the wonder of the neighborhood.

There is a carpet on the floor, which formerly was bare, and the Rauch children do not have to sleep four in a bed and some on the floor, for the reason that there now are three beds in the house instead of only two.

And, what is more, the Rauch family will be better able to combat the cold this winter, for there is a big base burner in the living room which was not there a week ago. With the cooking stove in the kitchen, the base-burner will keep the three-room flat fairly comfortable.

Carried Baby to Funeral.

Josephine went to the Busch home because she had promised her baby sister, Adeline, who is 2 years old, that she would some day show her a "grand sight," and when she heard what a great spectacle the Busch obsequies would be she carried Baby Adeline on her arm to Busch place. The ragged appearance of the little girls as they awaited their turn in the long line of visitors appealed to not only the hearts but the pocketbooks of many Busch employes.

When a big policeman refused Josephine admission to the house after she had waited over an hour to get in, her tears were noticed by Nat Klein of the brewery sales staff, and he pinned a badge on her dress which served as a passport.

Last Monday Klein called at the Rauch home and left a well-filled purse with Josephine, the contents of which represented contributions by members of the sales department.

Many Gifts for Family.

Klein noticed the conditions in the Rauch home and reported them to fellow employes. A story of Josephine's visit to the Busch mansion and the gift she received appeared in the Post-Dispatch and soon the Rauchs found themselves recipients of many favors.

Besides the carpet, bed and stove, they received promises of other things, and yesterday they were enjoying the anticipation of linoleum for the kitchen, curtains for the windows, clothes and food.

"Won't it be fine when we get all the things they are going to send us," said Josephine. "Gee, we'll be glad."

Josephine's father is a carpenter and her mother does housecleaning for private families.

Increase of Lunatics.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Between 1872 and 1913 the number of pauper lunatics in England and Wales has risen from 49,986 to 123,844, an increase of 148 per cent, says a Blue-book just issued.

ALTON MAN FAILS TO LOSE NICKNAME IN YEAR'S ABSENCE

Contractor Is Called "Frank" on His Return and at Last Appeals to Newspaper.

Charles William Eudy, well-to-do contractor of East Alton, cannot escape his nemesis, Frank, even though he exiled himself in Arkansas for a year to elude Frank.

Upon his return to East Alton last week, he met Frank at the railroad station, and when he drove home, found him at his front door. Frank was encountered next morning at the office, and Eudy was confronted by Frank several times on his way to and from his place of business.

"This is too much," Eudy declared to his wife Saturday, and hastened away to the office of an Alton newspaper. "I want you to give public notice for me in large type that my name is Charles William Eudy, and not 'Frank,'" declared Eudy.

"I have been called Frank by my school-day sweethearts, my teachers, my parents, my friends and enemies, and everyone I have dealt with for 30 years, and it has got to stop. I feel like a dual personality, having to sign checks and write letters over my real name, when the persons I address believe me to be Frank Eudy.

"I spent a whole year in Arkansas, just to give people a chance to forget that they knew me as 'Frank,' but my wife called me Frank when she greeted me on my return, and so did the station agent."

Eudy says his father's Christian name was Frank, and because of his resemblance to his father in early youth, the family and everyone else nicknamed him "Frank." He says he did not like the name at the outset, but his aversion has increased daily until it is now unbearable.

He has been embarrassed many times by having to explain to people why he signed his name as Charles William Eudy, when everyone called him Frank Eudy.

How often have you longed to sit at a piano and play it with your own hands instead of merely listening to others.

It may be one of the popular hits of the day you would like to play, a bit of ragtime or something from a comic opera, or maybe you would prefer to play one of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies, Mendelssohn's Spring Song or Rachmaninoff's Prelude.

You can play these—any of them, ALL of them—without the months and years of practice. You can do it THIS VERY DAY through the wonderful Pianola.

Why consider imitations when a genuine Pianola may be obtained for as little as $550 Terms: $3 weekly

(There are more genuine Pianolas in use in St. Louis than all other player actions combined. The word "Pianola" refers only to instruments of the Aeolian Co.'s manufacture. The genuine Pianola may be obtained in St. Louis only at Aeolian Hall.)

MARSHALL TELLS OF FUTILE EFFORT TO SAVE MADERO

Vice-President Thinks the "Mexican Question" Has Come to Stay.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 1.—Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, was in Kansas City a few minutes this afternoon en route to Arizona, where he hopes to hear next to nothing, for a while at least, about the tariff, the currency bill, the income tax or the trusts. He was willing, however, to talk about the achievements of the Wilson administration.

Mr. Marshall stood on his toes a moment when Mexico was mentioned but soon came down again.

"Well, I don't know that it would be indiscreet in me to say that the Mexican question, like the poor, bids fair to be always with us," he said. "I have a very firm conviction that this administration means business in dealing with the situation. Huerta never will be recognized by this Government.

"Why, it was no secret in Mexico that Madero was to be killed, and I may say that it was no secret in Indianapolis. Three days before Madero's death I had a telegram from a man in Mexico imploring me to do something to protect the Mexican President."

"I could do nothing. Mr. Taft was still President and Mr. Wilson had not been inaugurated. But you can understand that a revolution of such a character as these facts show was then breaking in Mexico never meant the recognition of this Government."

Mr. Marshall declared that many high Masons throughout the country got similar appeals for help.

Mr. Marshall praised the tariff law and spoke hopefully of the proposed currency legislation.

TRUSTS MAY FAIL OF OWN WEAKNESS, REDFIELD THINKS

Commerce Secretary Doubts if Vast Industries Can Find Efficient Managers.

STRIKES AT LOW WAGES

Large Dividends and Small Payroll May Not Continue to Be Respectable, He Says.

William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce in President Wilson's Cabinet, told the Commercial Club, after a dinner at the St. Louis Club last night, that "It is doubtful how long it will be respectable to have large dividends and low wages go together.

"It is uncertain," he continued, "how long public opinion will say that a wage for working women, which is insufficient to maintain them in decency, shall go on side by side with a costly home for the owner of the business, and perhaps even gifts on his part to charities and education."

Secretary Redfield's subject was "The Ideals of Commerce." He began by telling of his plan for a more thorough investigation of the trusts than has yet been made. Some of the trusts, he said, are not making money, apparently because they cannot find men able to run them. There is doubt whether the trusts are such monuments of efficiency as they were once thought to be, and whether they are anything more than a passing phase of the economic problem.

Redfield arrived yesterday morning from Omaha and went to Tom Randolph's home, 7 Kingsbury place. He called on Charles Nagel, who was Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Taft's Cabinet, and took lunch with John F. Shepley at the Country Club. He will attend St. John's Methodist Church, King's highway and Washington boulevard, this morning and will informally receive a number of callers at the Randolph home this afternoon, departing tonight for Washington.

Finds Business Is Good.

In an interview soon after his arrival he warned the people of St. Louis to "pay no attention to the prophets of evil." He said he had found business conditions good and improving. The new tariff law was already affecting prices on some commodities, he said, but no one could tell when a general lowering of the cost of living would come.

He said he had not heard of any corporation which had reduced wages since the new tariff went into effect. On the subject of disciplining corporations which might take such action, he said he did not wish to say anything, and that his views on this matter had been misrepresented.

In his Commercial Club address, Secretary Redfield said, in part:

"We propose, if Congress permits, to undertake an inquiry into the fundamental economic laws which underlie the vast masses of capital and labor with which we are becoming familiar in our industries, and which control them, and which are more powerful and certain in their action than any statutory law can be.

"Is or is not the trust form of organization industrially efficient? Are there, or are there not factors which come into play when production passes a certain point, which do not increase rather than diminish the cost? Is there, in other words, a law of maximum production at minimum cost, beyond which point of maximum production cost rises? Is the trust problem, in its economic essence, a passing phase?

"Some years ago, one of the leading lawyers of New York said to me that the trust problem carried in it the seeds of its own decay, because men could not always be found able to continuously manage such great masses of capital and labor. If we may take an analogy from the armies of war, it will be found that while subordinate officers are numerous and readily and easily obtained, great commanders are few.

Trusts Out of Business.

"Some of the trusts have ceased to exist. The wall paper trust is one, the cordage trust is another. Many of the so-caled trusts are not especially profitable, failing to earn dividends, or earning but small dividends upon their common stock. It is the few among them that have been conspicuous financial successes, not the average or the many. Leaving out of account altogether those with whom the law has dealt, it would not seem from a superficial glance at the record, that this particular type of organization had justified itself commercially.

"It is true that large capital does permit expenditures for research, apparatus and equipment, which could not otherwise be had, and that it permits the employment of experts.

"Yet it is also true that, side by side with the great aggregation of capital, have gone on smaller and independent concerns in the same lines of business, who have made, in some instances, conspicuous successes. You have only to look at the steel industry and the typewriter industry to find examples."

The speaker then told of the rapid growth of American business institutions and said that business ideals had changed with the development of business. The old rule, "let the buyer beware," he declared to be almost obsolete, as the seller must now beware that he does not cheat the buyer.

"This newcomer among the ideals says," the speaker declared, "that it does not pay any longer to let the buyer do the looking out for himself wholly, or to let the laborer shift for himself in poverty wholly, or to try to extract from human endurance the utmost that fatigue can give, or even to go about indifferently and talk angrily about the market rate of wages and normal living conditions for the uneducated.

"No; there is an ideal which says that it pays in money to so manage that the worker in the mill and in the shop shall have enough recompense to enable him or her to live in decency. This ideal, I repeat, says it pays, and men in some places are beginning to find it out in practice. This ideal says, too, that no economic law can be right which works moral wrong, that there are not two sides of truth, one good truth and one bad one, but that all truth is good and all truth is the same, and there is not one kind of truth for the employer and another kind of truth for the worker.

"This ideal would shrewdly inquire whether the losses in industry, seen and unseen, from doing what is called 'hard-headed business' at the market rate, might not have been profitably saved by a little more thought of the common facts of human life and a little less interest in the additions to the payroll.

"This same ideal some day will stand at the elbow of a man and say to him: 'You are selling goods in Europe against the competition of Europe, though your employes get more pay and live better than they do over yonder.' Why not carry it a step further. Try to see how well you can let your workmen live, and how far you can carry the idea of cultivating them.

"Perhaps you will find a responsiveness that will surprise you. They are not dull and inert material. They are not even like lathes or planers that get their power from without. They are self-animated. Perhaps, if they work themselves willingly, rather than by force of poverty or need, there might be something there that would be useful both to you and them. Why not try?"

LAST OCTOBER NOT OF SORT WHICH POETS SING

Monthly Summary of Weather Bureau Shows Month Had 13 Rainy Days.

The October which departed this life two days ago was not, particularly in its latter days, of the sort about which the poet sings, "autumn's crown, golden, soft and russet-brown." The monthly summary of the Weather Bureau for the St. Louis station shows up the late October as one of the kind that try men's souls, though the sheet does not contain record by date of two snows which everybody knows to have fallen.

The sleet of the 27th is mentioned, also the killing frost of the 21st. The snowfall for the month was three-tenths of an inch. Hail is marked with a large cipher, which would indicate that the weather plant had no receptacle for catching and measuring the rattling hail that fell one day in some parts of the city in quantities so abundant that it could be scooped up from porches with shovels.

The warmest day was Oct. 6, with a temperature of 82. This is three degrees below the maximum for the month for 40 years past. While most of the citizens imagined that Oct. 29, with a minimum of 28 degrees, was the coldest October day ever, the records show that the minimum in 40 years is 24 degrees. The greatest daily range of temperature was 24 degrees on the 12th. The mean temperature for the month, 56.2 was 2.2 below normal. Rain fell on 13 days.

De Paul Player Kicks Rival

C.B.C. Wins on Forfeit, 1-0

Locals Were Ahead, 39-7

Frequent Slugging Matches, Overlooked by Officials, Mar Annual Meeting of St. Louis and Chicago

By W. J. O'Connor.

A FORFEITED game, 1—0, was credited to C. B. C. at the expense of De Paul University of Chicago at Robison Field, yesterday afternoon, when the visitors refused to abide by the official's decision in banishing one of their men for unnecessary roughness.

At the time the forfeiture was declared, C. B. C. was leading 39—7, with approximately 10 more minutes to play in the final period. The score of 1—0, an impossible combination in football, is rendered to distinguish the game as a forfeiture. This is the first time in the history of local football that such an entry was written into the gridiron records.

Al Sihler of Washington U. was the referee who terminated the game so abruptly. In demanding the disbarment of Left Tackle Fish he was backing up the decision of Umpire Willis Johnson, who claimed that Fish had kicked Halfback Tom Shea of C. B. C. while the latter was prone on the ground. This alleged rough work was the culmination of a series of slugging matches which the officials, for reasons best known to themselves, tolerated.

De Paul Player Banished.

Once in the early part of the game Umpire Johnson had demanded the withdrawal of Tackle Wondrack of De Paul for alleged slugging. Sihler ordered Wondrack from the field, but when De Paul threatened to recall their entire team, the C. B. C. officials asked Referee Sihler to overlook Wondrack's transgression. Sihler did to his ultimate regret, he stated after the game.

Frequent wrangles, spiced with an occasional dash of Marquis of Queensbury tactics, marred the game from the start. Spectators' attention continually was diverted from the game itself by catch-as-catch-can matches between rival gladiators. The officials, two of whom seemed new to their work, were utterly unable to cope with the situation and it was not uncommon to hear one of the players addressing Umpire Johnson after the fashion that Johnny Evers uses when he tells Bill Brennan about his virtues as a baseball arbitrator.

At one stage of the battle, Mr. Fish, who was a veritable sea lion, rushed at Umpire Johnson, who weighs 140 pounds, and shouted:

"Say you blankety-blank, blank, did you see that?" at the same time exhibiting a nose from which the claret flowed freely.

Fish Threatens Official.

Umpire Johnson shook an automobile horn in Fish's face, but the massive De Paul tackle only snapped at it like a shark going after a mackerel bait. After the game Johnson stated:

"I've been closely identified with football for 15 years but this affair today was the worst I ever saw or heard of."

The De Paul players made no statement after the melee. However, Coach Kelly of C. B. C. expressed deep regret over the turn of affairs. "I begged my men between halves to avoid any passage at arms with the enemy," said Kelly, "and instructed them to take the short end of the deal rather than cause any further unpleasantness. I was opposed to the ruling which permitted a player, once banished from the game, returning, but we were forced to it. De Paul threatened to quit unless we let them have Wondrack back and by acceding to their wishes we put ourselves in the position of tolerating infractions of the rules.

"That decision also gave the visitors the impression that they had the whip hand, so they lashed us good in the final periods. I'm sorry that the whole thing happened, but I was powerless to prevent it."

Long Runs by Ratican and Shea Givè C. B. C. Big Lead Early in Game

BEFORE the game broke up, C. B. C. had demonstrated most impressively that it clearly outclassed the enemy. The Collegians also proved conclusively that they have a great machine, about the best seen in St. Louis since the halcyon days of Eddie Cochems at St. Louis U. In Ratican, Shea and White the College has a trio of backs, powerful in plunges and as elusive as eels on end runs. White is almost an Acker in rushing the ball. Ratican by all odds, is the fleetest halfback turned out here in years.

Seventy seconds after the game began, Ratican slipped a forward pass to Shea, who ran 65 yards through a broken field for the first touchdown. Only a few minutes later, Ratican absorbed a punt on his own 35-yard line and dodged through the entire De Paul team for another touchdown.

Quinn Runs 35 Yards.

A series of line rushes in which White plowed through center, toppling the heavyweights of De Paul like they were made of paper, brought the ball to De Paul's seven-yard line early in the second period. Then Ratican took a short run and dove, headfirst, across the line for the third score. Next came Willie Quinn, a 17-year-old kid weighing 142 pounds, who learned to be clever on his feet by playing soccer, and snatched a forward pass out of the ozone, running 40 yards for a touchdown.

A very tricky play netted the fifth touchdown. When C. B. C. lined up on its own 35-yard line, Ratican sneaked off to the side lines and Quarterback Murphy, without calling a signal, received a quick pass from Menges, tossed it to Ratican, who galloped to the goal.

In the course of human events, C. Ward of the enemy, in the third period intercepted a forward pass and ran 50 yards for a touchdown, Fish kicking the subsequent goal. Ratican retaliated by scoring his [illegible] end run that swept the De Paul eleven off its feet. In six tries at goal after touchdowns, Ratican missed three.

Clinnen Isn't a Chicken.

De Paul had by no means a weak team, having in Clinnen a star who learned the fine points at Notre Dame the year that Luke Kelly, the C. B. C. coach, played at tackle. Clinnen thinks he still has a few good years left in him. Fish, the fighting Finn, is one of the best kickers seen here this year. A 65-yard punt with height, is easy for Fish. Geiger, a big guard, and Hart, an end, also are above par, while the team averages up to about 172 pounds.

Against this comparatively heavy foe, C. B. C. played with a vengeance that made the enemy look tame. Walter Essman, the C. B. C. tackle, smothered many of De Paul's best plays, by breaking through before De Paul backs could get started. Then the C. B. C. ends, McGinnis and Quinn, although small, repeatedly upset the De Paul interference and tackled with a sureness that provoked applause. Not once during the game was little Quinn boxed. He turned the enemy's end runs in every time and frequently got through the interference and spilled the man with the ball. He was so alert that early in the game De Paul decided to leave his side of the line alone. From their showing yesterday, C. B. C. need have no fear of tackling Notre Dame and Haskell, be they ever so strong.

WOODWARD'S TOE ENABLES TULANE TO BEAT ST. L. U.

His Field Goals Give Southern Team 12—6 Victory Over Locals.

By Daniel Dillon.

St. Louis University allowed its best chance to win a game before the curtain on its 1913 gridiron season falls, Thanksgiving Day, to go a glimmering, when Tulane defeated it at American League Park by the score of 12—6, yesterday.

The blue and white team did show a decided improvement over its form in the Rolla game, two weeks ago, but the squad has not as yet reached that nicety of development where only sand is needed to put the finishing touches to it. In fact a supply of dainty blacksmith tools might about fill the bill. The team has virtually no offense, a straight line play, an end spurt and an old fashioned quarterback run is the repertoire of the eleven's attack.

Against Tulane the men tackled cleaner and the line men fought harder than in any previous battle. But there is no dash to their play, no speed in their actions and but little display of that intangible winning attribute, football sense.

Woodward a Real Star.

Tulane showed a poorly drilled team that seems to have possibilities. Woodward is an excellent place kicker. He is a big, husky lad along the lines of Princeton's DeWitt and appears to have some of the ex-Tiger's cunning in his toe.

Assistant Coach Elmer Smith uncovered in Thole, a mite of a boy who was subbing at quarterback in Carroll's place, the agreeable surprise of the afternoon. The little fellow tore off a spectacular run of 80 yards for the locals' only score and handled kicks in the back field in approved fashion. He played a much better game than did Carroll who went into the lineup in the last quarter. The regular was very slovenly in his work and his handling of punts was atrociously bad.

Thole makes Long Run.

From the first minute of play it was evident that the two teams were very evenly matched. Tulane at the outset carried the play into St. Louis U.'s territory, though unable to make consistent gains. Towards the close of the quarter Thole got away for his long sprint, and when Kistner missed an easy goal the period ended with the score 6—0 in the blue and white's favor.

The second quarter revealed the fact that both elevens were shy on any good ground-gaining plays and, as neither team could boast of an exceptional punter, the play seesawed evenly from one end of the field to the other, with neither team being particularly dangerous as to scoring. A sight that made the old gridiron "has-beens" recall the days of yore was Tulane's unblushing effrontery in trying to work in this day and age the good old moth-eaten criss-cross play. And the worst of it was they liked it. Time and again the Southerners tried it without so much as a prefacing apology.

Forward Pass Nets Score.

With the score 6—0 against them at the opening of the second half, Tulane got into the game with a new zest, and Henderson and George skirted the blue and white ends for substantial gains. A badly frayed forward pass that St. Louis should have easily intercepted brought a touchdown.

A blocked punt, due in great measure to a poor pass by Huchel, whose work in this respect throughout the afternoon was wretched, gave Tulane the ball on St. Louis University's 30-yard line. Woodward kicked his first goal here.

In the closing quarter St. Louis made a feeble attempt to use the forward pass, but its execution was puerile. Towards the end of the fray Killeen made a free catch on the 42-yard line and Woodward kicked a beautiful goal, making the final score 12—6.

Steve Evans to Tour World.

STEVE EVANS, the Cardinal comedian, who betimes plays a bang-up game in the outfield, departed last night for Marlin Springs, Tex., where on Monday he will join Jimmy Callahan's White Sox and proceed around the world on the globe-girdling trip with the Giants.

Several urgent telegrams from Callahan, followed by a plea from Manager McGraw of the Giants, caused Evans to make the trip. There is a shortage of help on the big junket and it is believed that in addition to the educational inducements, Callahan made Evans a monetary offer. Anyhow, Steve will serve two purposes: Entertainer and outfielder. Lee Magee and Ivey Wingo are other Cardinals who will make the trip abroad.

Soldan's Eleven Wins Its First Football Title

With Victory Over Manual Eleven Goes Prep School Championship of St. Louis.

Soldan High's 33—0 victory over the Manual Training School eleven yesterday gave the former school its first interscholastic football title. At no time during the contest was the Training School team able to cope with the Soldan boys.

Every one of the Soldan backs, Klein, Chalfont, Morrison, Swingley, Smith and Barnhart, proved a star. The Soldan ends also distinguished themselves by getting down fast on punts and hauling in a flock of forward passes.

To Archie Klein at quarterback goes considerable credit for the victory. He ran the eleven in excellent style and also proved of value to his team the few times it was on the defense.

Soldan's line, which was reputed to be the weak department of the team, showed no evidence of faltering. It held well most of the game, as is evident from the fact that Manual made first down on three times.

Although his team was beaten, Jimmy Lentz, the Manual quarterback, performed in nice style.

The lineup:

Soldan.	Positions.	Manual.
Peers	Left tackle	Kinsey
Cunliffe-Thomas	Center	Anderson
Root-Miller	Right guard	Rosenow

Referee—Sihler (Washington). Umpire—Turner (Dartmouth). Head linesman—Shaumberg (Washington).

Central High Eleven Wins From Light East St. Louis High, 24—3

Central High's football eleven showed improvement since its defeat by Manual a week ago, and defeated the light East St. Louis High School team at Francis Field yesterday, 24—3. Although beaten, the East Side boys put up a plucky fight against great odds.

Rowan and Houck, playing in the Central backfield, seemed to help Mike Walker's team considerably. Their smashing game, as well as long end runs, went a long way towards landing the victory for the Grand avenue squad. Finn helped considerably by handling forward passes well.

The lineup:

Central.	Position.	East St. Louis.
Finn	Left end	Hodson
Knight	Left guard	Byron
Kalkman	Center	Bell
Nies	Right guard	Wilhelm
Axtell	Right tackle	Kurvins

Georgetown Easy for Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Resorting in the main to straight football, but occasionally varying the attack with a forward pass of criss-cross formation, the Carlisle Indians overwhelmed Georgetown University here today, 34 to 0. The Indians battered Georgetown's line repeatedly and the local collegians were on the defensive practically throughout the game.

MINERS PILE UP EARLY SCORE, BUT LOSE TO TIGERS

Rolla Eleven Fails to Make Expected Trouble and Missouri Wins, 44—14.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 1.—The Missouri Tigers easily defeated the Rolla Miners today by the score of 44 to 14. The game began with two sensational 80-yard runs for touchdowns by each team, but the Miners never got another chance until Brewer and Schulte sent in many substitutes.

Rolla was the first to score, the tally coming 10 minutes after the game began when Bland, the Rolla halfback, skirted an end for a touchdown after an 80-yard race. This gave the Miners the lead, but on the next play, when Rolla kicked off, Shepard, Tiger back who was returning the ball, passed to Moore on the dead run and Moore raced 80 yards for a touchdown and tied the score. The period remained a draw with the Tigers keeping the Miners on the defensive.

In the second quarter, both Lake and McWilliams scored touchdowns. Lake ran 25 yards and McWilliams plunged two yards. By this time the coaches sent in substitutes against the Miners. McWilliams saw the Tiger team weaken and place kicked a field goal from the 20-yard line to keep a safe lead. Larue, substitute, was played at end for the first time in his career and Brewer sent Collins, second string quarter, to half and the little lad made many gains. Fourteen points sufficed the Tigers in this period.

Miners Make Belated Rally.

In the second half the Miners braced a few minutes and began a smashing game, but were finally held. The Tigers made a costly fumble on their own 20-yard line, which resulted in the Miners placing the ball on the one-yard line by the time the period was up.

Missouri regulars went in the final period to repel the threatened Miner attack, but Freeman went over 18 inches for the second Rolla touchdown. The Tigers began straight football and by a consistent line-plunging game sent Shepard over for two touchdowns. A short time later Moore, a Tiger back, intercepted a Rolla forward pass and raced 30 yards for a touchdown. McWilliams missed only one goal.

McCarthy Serves as Official.

Coach Brewer turned the tables on the scouts today. When two officials had been delayed in a wreck in Kansas, Brewer had Leo McCarthy of Washington U. scout, and Jay Bond, a Kansas scout, called from the bleachers to officiate. Bond begged out of duty, but McCarthy served as head linesman.

The lineup:

Missouri (44).	Positions.	Rolla (14).
Herndon	Right end	Miller
Groves	Right tackle	Houston
Clay, Drum	Right guard	Cushwa
Zimmerman	Center	J. Miller, Haney

SMITH PROVES EASY FOR M'KINLEY TEAM

The McKinley High School team trounced the Smith Academy eleven at Francis Field, Saturday, 22—0. All of McKinley's scoring was done in the first half, 13 points being totaled in the first period and 9 in the second. The McKinley back field, composed of Quarterback Monnig, French, Krenser and Blades, performed in nice style. Quarterback Strauss of Smith played best for the losers.

GIANTS HAMMER BENZ, BEAT WHITE SOX, 3—2

That Colgate would give Yale the prettiest fight of the year was conceded here, but it was far from the thoughts of players or coaches that there would be a chance for Yale to lose. After the game Capt. Ketcham gave up the ball used during the game as he had previously in the games against Maine and Washington and Jefferson, which were no-score ties.

During the game Cornish was injured. That was in the first half, and his going out demoralized the team. Thompson, who replaced him, was hurt shortly afterwards and Hamer had to run the team. Yale made few changes in the lineup, as the strong available team was on the field, Gile, Brann, Pumpelly, Pendleton and Marting all being at the infirmary.

Guernsey was put in to kick at the end of the second period. It was a long chance, but Yale wanted to be in the lead at the end of the first half. He kicked from the 42-yard line and did not come anywhere near the goal line.

Yale Team Asleep.

Hubbard, the right end for Yale, played as if he were asleep, and this seemed to be the situation of the majority of the members of the Yale team, except Ketcham and Talbott. After Colgate scored, Ketcham failed to keep his head. Talbott played a good game, but was responsible for the first Colgate score.

There were costly fumbles by Yale, as last week, though the field was in excellent condition and there was no excuse. Avery was the only Yale lineman to get down under Knowle's excellent punts.

Wheeler went in for Yale and his first two runs were encouraging. After that, however, he was no better than the other Yale player. He would start off at top speed and then slip. He generally managed to hang on to the ball, but all his runs were across the field and resulted in no gains.

Huntington played a star game for Colgate though it would be difficult to pick a man whose work showed out from all the others. The Yale players watched Huntington and as a result he did no kicking. He made some excellent forward passes which completely eluded Yale and he worked some special plays which left the home eleven all at sea. There was no department of the game in which Yale was not completely outplayed.

Colgate Might Have Scored Even Without the Aid of Yale Fumbles

THE two Colgate touchdowns were made as the result of Yale fumbles, but the way Colgate was pressing Yale they would probably have been made anyway. The first came when Yale tried a trick play on her own 15-yard line. The ball was passed to Talbott who dropped it and it was Colgate's on the 15-yard line. Robinson and Stewart each made a plunge through center and Stewart took it over, the Colgate kicker failed to send the ball across.

The second touchdown was made in the third period when after Robinson had fumbled the ball on Yale's 10-yard line, Knowles dropped back to kick. He was nervous and dropped the ball, Riley falling on it. Peterson kicked the goal. The final score for Colgate came in the fourth period, when the Yale line for once held 20 yards from the goal line. Brooks dropped back from the line and kicked a beautiful field goal.

Yale's only score was in the second quarter when, after Avery had fallen on Knowles' punt for a gain of half the length of the field and some plunges by Cornell and Wilson, Knowles went around the end for a touchdown. Ketcham didn't kick the goal.

McLaughlin of Colgate broke his shoulder during the game. Cornish and Thompson were not seriously hurt.

The lineup and summary:

De Paul's Eleven Should Play Football Under the "Clean Breaks" Rule

WISCONSIN YIELDS TO MINNESOTA IN VITAL GAME, 21-3

Badgers Are Eliminated From Conference Championship Race by Decisive Defeat.

RESULT A BIG SURPRISE

Gophers Show Surprising Strength on Attack and Game Is Roughly Played.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 1.—The University of Wisconsin's conference football championship, won last year, was lost this afternoon when the University of Minnesota eleven administered an unexpected and one-sided defeat, 21—3.

A very strong attack which Dr. Williams taught the Gophers proved entirely too strong for the Wisconsin system of defense. It took the victors some time to get started, but when they once got their stride they kept Wisconsin up close to the goal and had it not been for fumbling might have scored at least two more touchdowns. The result of the game puts Minnesota in a position to contest the conference title with the University of Chicago and their coming contest at Minneapolis will be the chief event of the 1913 season in the middle west.

Crowd Quits in Disgust.

Today's game attracted an enormous crowd to Madison on special trains from Minneapolis, Chicago and Milwaukee. The vast majority of the spectators wore the Wisconsin colors and rooted madly until after Minnesota's second touchdown. When the cardinal defense crumpled many of their adherents became discouraged and there was a constant exodus from the stands until the end of the game.

The game was one of the fiercest ever played in Madison and substitutions and injuries were numerous. Tollefson, quarterback for Minnesota, was the most seriously hurt. He was struck over the eye and knocked unconscious, but ultimately recovered, and it was thought tonight that he will experience no lasting effects from his hurt. Up to the time he was taken out he had shown excellent generalship.

Drop Kick for Badgers.

Wisconsin took the lead early in the game when Bellows scored with a drop kick. For the rest of the first half, the Cardinals' attack was well directed and only the good punting of Shaughnessy prevented further scores. Evidently Dr. Williams told his men where the Wisconsin weak points were to be found during the intermission, for in the second half the conditions were exactly reversed. Minnesota's backs and ends alternated in carrying the ball, and, although its complicated shifts were stopped at times, yet in the main Minnesota's favorite play was successful.

The gains in the main were made outside of tackle, but Mattern and McAlmon frequently varied this by swinging wide and, helped by excellent interference, they reeled off dashes of five to 10 yards past the ends.

Both teams showed considerable polish in their attack, and about equal ragged work on defense. The Minnesota men, however, possessed more fighting spirit and used it to good advantage.

No Long Runs.

The game was remarkable for the absence of long runs, except one or two kickoffs, there were not half a dozen gains of over 15 yards, and both teams were forced to punt on the fourth down with unusual frequency. In this department, Minnesota fairly outshone Wisconsin, although Bellows' kicking with the wind at his back of the first quarter was hardly effective.

The lineup:

Wisconsin.	Positions.	Minnesota.
Ofstie	Right end	Fournier
Butler	Right tackle	Barron
Keeler	Right guard	Rosenthal
Powell	Center	Robertson

MICHIGAN STUDENTS SEEK RETURN TO 'CONFERENCE'

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 1.—The attitude of the University of Michigan students, alumni faculty, relative to the advisability of Michigan's return to the Western Intercollegiate Conference, will be registered Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday by means of a popular vote taken under the auspices of the Michigan Daily, the official students' publication of the University of Michigan. The Daily has undertaken a campaign to put the Wolverines back in the Western fold. After a publicity campaign of more than a week's duration, the Daily will submit the question in the form:

"We petition the Michigan regents for an immediate return to the conference under the present conference rules. An unqualified 'yes' or 'no'. The vote will be polled among students and faculty in special ballot boxes placed throughout the University buildings. When the vote is complete, the petition will be presented to the board of regents in time to be acted upon at the meeting of Nov. 14, as it is established, in the opinion of the Michigan Daily, that the regents alone have the power to put the Wolverines back into the conference."

Wellston Defeats Principia.

Wellston A. C. defeated the Principia High School yesterday, 6 to 0. Wellston scored in the third quarter when Wellston kicked to Principia and Andrew fumbled the ball. Davis of Wellston then picked it up and scored the touchdown, but missed the subsequent goal. The game was played on the Principia campus.

Brickley Scores 21 Points, Rest of Harvard Team 2

Cornell Eleven Is Easy

New York Football Machine Crosses Harvard Line Only When Team of Substitutes Is Sent Against Ithacans' Men in Final Period.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 1.—The strength of the Crimson first line players and the weakness of the second-string men were brought out in Harvard's game today against Cornell, which the Crimson won with apparent ease, 23 to 6.

While Brickley, Harwick, Capt. Storer and others of the regular Harvard players were in the line-up, touchdowns were scored in each of the three periods and Brickley added his customary goal from the field.

Cornell was held back of the middle field and was a negligible factor for three periods.

In the last 15 minutes Coach Houghton sent his substitutes into the game and they crumbled against the Ithacan onslaught. Although they made a game stand and held Cornell for three downs, they could not prevent a score on the fourth rush.

Cornell Lucky to Score.

Cornell almost failed to make the touchdown, for Barrett, in plunging through a hole in center brought up against canvass-covered goal post There was a mass of players about him as he stood grasping the upright unable to slip around it to the other side. He was fortunate, however, in pushing the ball around and Referee Langford ruled that a touch down had been scored.

It was the first consistent march of an opposing team to the Harvard goal line this year, although Holy Cross scored on Harvard in the game two weeks ago.

The three Harvard touchdowns, all by Brickley, came on steady rushing and varied plays, although none of them was of a spectacular nature with the exception of one 15-yard forward pass.

Brickley tried two goals from the field from the 40-yard line, which failed by narrow margins. The successful goal was made from the 16-yard line. Harvard came through the game in prime condition for next Saturday's contest at Princeton. Summary:

Harvard (23)	Position.	Cornell (6).
Coolidge	Left end	Mehaffy
Gilman	Left tackle	Guayer
Cowen	Left guard	Munns
Trumbull	Center	Cool

Forward Passes Let Notre Dame Win From Cadets

Eichenlaub's Smashing Play Nets Big Gains for Westerners—Score Is 35—13.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 1.—The Army was beaten by Notre Dame today, 35 to 13. The Cadets were outclassed in every department of the game and except in the second quarter, when they scored both their touchdowns, they looked like novices beside the Westerners.

Notre Dame's long forward passing and pretty open field play was spectacular and a revelation to Eastern enthusiasts. Out of 14 attempts with the forward pass play the Westerners succeeded in making 12 good for long distance gains. Rockne, Finnegan and Pliska, on the receiving end, with Dorais throwing the ball, gained many yards for their team.

In fact all of Notre Dame's touchdowns were directly due to splendid work with the forward pass. Eichenlaub was a demon on the offense, plowing through the Army line for good gains and bowling over the interferance in slashing style. Dorais' quarterback play was gilt edged. He kicked five of the goals from touchdowns and ran his team with splendid judgment. The first half ended with the score 14 to 13 in Notre Dame's favor.

Hoge and Merrilat played best for the Cadets. The army handled the ball rather loosely today, losing it several times on fumbles. Both sides were frequently penalized.

Lineup.

Army (13)	Position.	Notre Dame (35)
McEwan	Center	Feeney
Jones	Right guard	Fitzgerald
Weyand	Right tackle	Lathrop
Merrillat	Right end	Gushurst
Prichard	Quarterback	Dorais
Hobbs	Right halfback	Finnegan

Maroons Tighten Grip on Title by Beating Illinois

Staggs' Men Continue March to Conference Championship by Winning 28—7.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Chicago furthered their chances for a championship today by defeating Illinois by an overwhelming score of 28 to 7. A crowd estimated at more than 25,000 witnessed the game. The visitors scored their only touchdown after three minutes of playing, when Quarterback Poage received a punt from Norgram and ran 50 yards for a touchdown. Capt. Rowe kicked goal.

Chicago fought hard in the first half to score, but lost the ball time after time, after bringing it within a few yards of their opponents' goal. Fumbled and incompetent forward passes were the chief causes for Chicago's failure to score. In the second half Chicago rushed Illinois off their feet. At the end of the third quarter they had scored two touchdowns. In the final quarter Chicago scored two more touchdowns by using straight football, bringing the final score, 28 to 7.

The lineup:

Chicago	Position	Illinois
Huntington	Left end	Armstrong
Harris	Left guard	Lansche
Des Jardien	Center	Watson
Scanlon	Right guard	Chapman
Goettler	Right tackle	Tupper
Baumgardner	Right end	Wilson
Russell	Quarterback	Pogue
Gray	Left halfback	Rue
Norgren	Right halfback	Schobinger
Pierce	Fullback	Rowe

Referee, Connett (Virginia). Umpire, Gordon (Yale). Head linesman Ensley (Purdue). Substitutes—For Chicago, Kennedy for Gray; Sparks for Baumgardner; Illinois, Seblen for Chapman; Wagner for Rue. Touchdowns—For Chicago, Pierce, Norgren, Russell and Kennedy. Harris kicked goal each time; for Illinois, Pogue. Rowe kicked goal.

HENDRICKS GETS $1000 FOR WINNING 3 FLAGS

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 1.—J. C. McGill, owner of the Denver team, last night presented Manager Jack Hendricks with $1000 in appreciation of his having won three Western League pennants successively. It was stated last night that in event the proposed purchase of the Indianapolis (American Association) team by Mr. McGill is consummated, Hendricks will lead that team next year. Shortstop Jack Coffey will then probably succeed Hendricks as manager of the Denver team.

Cornhuskers Get Off Poorly, but Win From Ames

After Iowans Tally Nine Points, Nebraska Plays Fiercely and Gets Eighteen.

AMES, Io., Nov. 1.—Ames outplayed Nebraska for one quarter this afternoon, scoring 9 points in the first, but the Cornhuskers came back with a terrific attack, interspersing fierce line plunges with forward passes. The final score was Nebraska 18, Ames 9. Nebraska's first touchdown came by the same forward pass which they used to defeat Minnesota at Lincoln.

Ames started with a rush, turning loose a series of line smashes that ripped the Nebraska line to pieces. Brennan, Ames' quarterback, did all the scoring for his team. Early in the first period he caught Howard's punt on his 20-yard line and raced through the whole Nebraska line for a touchdown. A little later he drop-kicked successfully, 48 yards from a difficult angle

Beck hammered the ball across the Ames line in the first play of the second quarter. In the third period Beck smashed the ball over again after it had been brought down the field on line plays. Halligan went through center in the fourth after the ball had been brought down the field by heavy onslaughts against the Ames line.

Lineup:

Ames.	Positions.	Nebraska.
Cowan	Left end	Howard
McKinley	Left guard	Ross
Johns	Center	Thompson
Holmes	Right guard	Abbott

Dartmouth Held to 21-7 Score by Amherst Eleven

Team That Conquered Princeton Has Hard Time With Light Massachusetts Squad.

AMHERST, Mass., Nov. 1.—Dartmouth won a hard-fought game from Amherst today, 21 to 7. The contest was closer than the score would indicate, Amherst holding the green for downs many times, twice within the three-yard line. The game ended with the ball in Amherst's possession on Dartmouth's 15-yard line, after a march of 50 yards down the field.

Dartmouth started with many substitutes, but scored within one minute of play when Hogsett recovered Hubbard's muffed punt and romped over the goal line 15 yards away. Amherst evened up the score shortly afterwards, when Whitten recovered Llewellyn's fumble and made a touchdown.

With the score at the end of the first half 7 to 7, Dartmouth sent in her regulars and by straight football scored touchdowns in the third and fourth periods.

The green's backfield was very fast, but the line met its match in Amherst. Neither team tried much open play.

FULTZ MAY AID FEDS IN FIGHT ON MAJORS

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—In the impending clash between the ballplayers' fraternity and the major leagues, officials of the Federal League see their opportunity to make their organization a power in the baseball world, according to a story published here today. If the reforms asked by the players are, for the most part, refused and Dave Fultz, spokesman of the fraternity, is denied recognition, the new league will attempt a raid on the stars of the National and American leagues. It is believed that the players will stand by their reported resolution to refuse to sign contracts without the numerous new conditions they demand.

History shows that players in former cases have refused to stand pat and run the risk of losing their salaries, but Federal League magnates and officials contend that conditions now are different. The Federal League has played through a season, paid its players, secured a good working association of magnates and has become fortified with ample money to carry on a war with the big leagues, they contend. Baseball men in Chicago conversant with the situation say the players have the whip hand.

WITH J. CRAIG IN GAME, YOST'S MEN CRUSH SYRACUSE

Star Halfback, in Season's Debut, Scores Four Touchdowns, Giving Michigan 43—7 Victory.

EASTERN ELEVEN WEAK

Orange Squad Never Recovers From Slump Suffered in Opening Period.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 1.—A savage offense, the product of a desperate eleven, gave the University of Michigan a 43 to 7 victory over Syracuse this afternoon. During the first two periods the orange line melted against a whirlwind attack which produced touchdown after touchdown. Syracuse braced in the third quarter and gave Michigan a battle. In the closing minutes of play, Syracuse made a game rally; Castle contributed four brilliant runs and a 25-yard dash by Travis enabled the Easterners to cross the Michigan goal.

Jimmy Craig, playing his first game of the season, was the mighty power behind Michigan's offense. Time after time, for two periods he streaked around the ends or battered between the tackles.

Castle Stars for Orange.

Castle was the most successful Syracuse ground gainer and many of his runs were made during the final period. Travis scored the visitors' only touchdown a few minutes before time was called, when he caught Mead's fumble and sprinted 25 yards.

Craig crossed the Syracuse goal soon after the game started and Hughitt made the second touchdown. Three came in the second period. Craig made them all. A moment after the second half started Seymour caught a Michigan punt and was thrown behind his own goal line, a safety resulting. Later in the period, short gains brought the ball to Syracuse's one-yard line, Hughitt took it across. Paterson's last attempt to kick goal resulted in failure. Five times previously he booted the ball between the crossbars.

Only Straight Football.

Michigan relied on straight football for consistent gains. Yost used few spectacular plays of the nature he generally discloses during the big games and as the game progressed, when victory appeared certain, he tried a number of substitutes.

Kohlenmainen in One Race Breaks 27 Old Records

Great Finnish Runner Covers 10 Miles in 50 Min. 51 3-5 Secs., Smashing Intermediate Marks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Ten miles in 50m. 51 3-5s. was the contribution of Hannes Kohlenmainen today to Father Time when he won the running championship of America at that distance, breaking the best previous performance of 52m. 34 4-5s, and incidentally breaking and creating 27 records at intermediate distances from three and a half miles up to and inclusive of the 10-mile route.

When it is known that the new American record is but 11 3-5s. to the bad of the world's best figures, at the distance, viz., 50.40, made by Alfred Shrubb at Ibrox Park, Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 5, 1904, the work of the wonderful Finn stands out.

Southfield, the quarter-mile oval of Columbia University, was the scene of the event, which was held in conjunction with the seven miles walking championship under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union. The latter race was won by Fred Kaiser of the New York A. C. in 55m. 9 1-5s., one minute two and a fifth seconds worse than the record held by Eugene E. Merrill, made in 1880.

The largest crowd which has ever witnessed similar events for titles in this country put in an appearance. Had the great Finn had any real opposition it is admitted that he would have done well under 50.30 for the route. On the contrary, he was practically running by himself after the first mile, after which his performance was only governed by what the watches told him.

Bonhag's Record Beaten.

The famous Hannes was no respector of persons when he started to mow down the records, as "past performances" by Tommy Connon, Willie Day, Louis Scott, Willie Kramer and George Bonhag fell by the wayside.

Bonhag's marks came in for special beating, as they were the ones of the most importance aside from the six-mile and six-and-a-quarter-mile records of Kramer. At five miles Hannes clipped off a second and a fifth from Bonhag's mark of 25:09m. 1-5s., which he had failed to cast into the discard last year, after which he began to bowl them over like tenpins in an alley.

Aside from a time standpoint, Kohlenmainen's running stood out throught the fact that he beat Smith, the champion, by more than five-eighths of a mile, the latter having his work cut out to lead a mite of a lad, another Finn, named Willie Kyronen, running as an unattached athlete, to the tape, this being the order of the second and third men.

Colorado Teams in Tie.

BOULDER, Colo., Nov. 1.—Colorado College and the University of Colorado battled to a tie here today, each eleven having small chance to score.

GOING UP.

(Dedicated to Judge Hugo Grimm.)

WHEN I was a lad I was told to report
And act as a juror in the Circuit Court;
So, I changed my collar and I dressed up prim
To serve on the jury under Justice Grimm.
And I served on that jury so faithfulee
That some day I'll be foreman of the grand juree.

As a peit juror I made such a hit,
On a number of cases I was made to sit;
I heard the witnesses upon the stand,
And I dealt out justice with an even hand.
I dealt out justice so carefulee,
That some day I'll be foreman of the grand juree.

From my place of business I was daily jerked,
But I did my duty and I never shirked;
I paid attention to the woeful tales
And I weighed all the evidence on justice scales.
I weighed all that evidence so carefulee,
That some day I'll be foreman of the grand juree.

I reported promptly every day at ten,
And then every hour I'd report again;
I viewed the lawyers with a sidelong glance
And I polished up the basement of my Sunday pants.
I polished up the basement so carefulee,
That some day I'll be foreman of the grand juree.

Now, all young men, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise to the top of the tree,
Don't shirk your duty—be a dead game sport,
And serve on the jury in the Circuit Court.
And serve on that jury so faithfulee,
That some day you'll be foreman of the grand juree.

Broken Jaw Bone Puts Yale Star Out for Season

Cornish, Blue's First Quarterback, Is Badly Injured in Colgate Game.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 1.—Percy G. Cornish Jr., Yale's best quarterback, will not play football again this season. His jaw was broken during the game with Colgate here this afternoon, and tonight Dr. Leonard Sanford, the university physician, stated that because of this injury Cornish would not be able to get into the game again this year.

McLaughlin, a Colgate substitute end, it was learned tonight, dislocated his shoulder during the last period, but finished the game.

WISCONSIN COMMISSION SUSPENDS E. M'GOORTY

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 1.—Eddie McGoorty has been suspended for six months by the Wisconsin Boxing Commission for refusing to live up to his contract to fight Jack Dillon in Milwaukee on Monday night, raising the demand for a cash guarantee after the papers had been signed.

This action automatically suspends him also in New York and Louisiana, which are working under an agreement with Wisconsin by which a boxer suspended in any state cannot be permitted to fight during his suspension in any state operating under the boxing commission laws. McGoorty signed for one figure and after the match was fixed, changed his demands.

FEDERAL LEAGUE DECLARES WAR ON ORGANIZED BODY

Outlaws Decide to Sign Players Now Under Reserve to Majors —Admit Buffalo and Baltimore.

LOCAL MAN ON BOARD

Ed Steininger Named as Director but President Will Not Be Elected Until Nov. 15.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 1.—The Board of Directors of the Federal League here tonight decided to declare war on the Major leagues of organized baseball, admitted Buffalo, N. Y., and Baltimore to the circuit, naming an eight-club organization and refused to have any dealings whatever with Horace Fogel, representing Philadelphia capitalists.

The directors in their decision to try to sign players of the two major leagues, voted not to ask any man in organized baseball already under contract to join their organization, but they held that any player under a reserve clause would be tendered a contract if he wished to play in the new organization. This, it was said, was done because the directors felt that the contract of any player would be upheld in the courts, but that the reserve clause was illegal and would not be sustained.

Feds Line Up With Fraternity.

The Federal League will take no further steps toward carrying on war upon organized baseball unless the major leagues attempt to retaliate, but if they do, the directors declared, the organization is well supplied with money and will fight any attempt to disrupt its ranks. If such an attempt was made, directors said, they had enough money to make tempting offers to the best players of the older leagues.

It was said that the action of the directors deciding to make offers to any player held under reserve clause would include the majority of the men in the National and American leagues. Those players, it was said, had refused to sign contracts for next season until demands they had made through the Players' Fraternity were granted. The Federal League, the directors intimated, was ready to grant these requests.

The election of officers was postponed until Nov. 15, when the newly appointed Board of Managers will confer in Chicago. This board is composed of C. E. Madison, Kansas City; E. A. Steininger, St. Louis; J. A. Gilmore, Chicago; J. Edward Krause, Indianapolis; C. X. Zimmerman, Cleveland; W. T. McCullough, Pittsburg; R. T. Carroll, Buffalo, and Harry Goldman, Baltimore.

After the meeting had ended, acting President Gilmore issued a statement in which he declared that Horace Fogel had appeared before the directors and presented the claims of Philadelphia capitalists for a place in the league. The Federal League, Mr. Gilmore said, refused to have anything to do with Mr. Fogel and Philadelphia request was rejected.

The directors resumed their meeting at 9 o'clock to consider plans for next season.

Robison Field League Refused to Affiliate With U. S. A. F. A.—Cahill

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Secretary Thomas W. Cahill of the U. S. A. F. A. says that Secretary Will Dooling of the Robison Field Soccer League of St. Louis is evidently misinformed when he states that the Robison Field League was not invited to join the U. S. A. F. A., as he is quoted as saying in a St. Louis paper.

"An invitation was sent to Dr. A. Murray, the then president," said Mr. Cahill, "and at the congress at which the U. S. A. F. A. was organized Thomas Adam of the West Hudsons, who attended but who took no part in the proceedings, stated that he had been authorized by Secretary Dooling to represent the St. Louis organization, but had preferred not to register his credentials. He said he would make a report to Mr. Dooling and let the St. Louisans decide upon their own course of action. Beyond that the Robison Field organization has never shown any desire to have anything to do with the national body."

As Other Cities See Us

Anvil Chorus Trimmings

ANYHOW, St. Louis ball clubs serve one purpose: They make the paragrapher's job easier. From the rock-bound coast of Maine to the sun-kissed shores of California, the "funny men" are daily giving recognition to the local teams. A few bouquets culled from the exchanges of one afternoon are reprinted here:

Col. Hedges says he has signed Branch Rickey to manage the Browns for 10 years. And be it said, to the shame of the U. S. A., that there is no legal way to make him expiate the crime.—Chicago Examiner.

If the Cardinals surrender Ed Konetchy the intricate mathematical problem will then be established of a ball club finishing ninth in an eight-club circuit.—New York Mail.

The Cardinals may secure Buck Herzog in a trade, but if Manager Huggins ever desires to see Herzog in action thereafter he will be forced to take a trip to a certain Maryland farm.—Washington Times.

Riverton Bisland of the Bronx was the prize shortstop of the champion Atlanta team of the Southern League. Unfortunately, he has fallen into the clutches of the St. Louis Browns. Bisland is cheerful, however, and hopes he will have another good season, so that some major league club can draft him.—New York Globe.

Jimmy Austin and Steve Evans will winter in Cleveland. Because we like both young men, we decline to incriminate them by telling the public where they played during the 1913 season.—Cleveland Leader.

If Branch Rickey has signed a Brown contract for a 10-year run, he must have wonderful faith in his constitution. Inhaling the damp air of the cellar would kill an average man in five years, much less 10.—Boston Traveler.

There is great agitation in St. Louis to do away with the world's series.—Philadelphia North American.

From this angle Branch Rickey's case is one to excite sympathy. What did he ever do to Hedges to receive a stretch of 10 years? Still, he may get time off for good behavior, may perish in the revolt of the fans, or may lose his mind after a season or two.—New York Globe.

Casey Hagerman is to be a member of the Cardinals next season. Casey has a good reputation for peace and sobriety in this community and deserves a better fate.—Denver Times.

Tigers Preparing for Yale, Wallop Holy Cross, 54-0

Rebuilt Princeton Machine Runs Over Worcester Eleven in Finished Fashion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 1.—Princeton's reconstructed football eleven defeated Holy Cross this afternoon by a score of 54 to 0. The visitors never threatened Princeton's goal line. The Tigers showed the result of the past week of regeneration by displaying a series of forward passes, netting gains from 10 to 35 yards, with Captain S. Baker, Law, Hammond and Glick doing the bulk of the work.

In addition, Princeton opened up her game with Baker flashing around the ends, Glick faking passes for quarterback runs through the line and Law faking kick formations for forward passes. Princeton also showed a punter of ability in Law, the halfback recruit, whose kicks averaged 50 yards.

On the other side, Princeton suffered frequent penalties for being off side and using the hands illegally. There were frequent fumbles by the Tigers also.

Holy Cross' game was confined to line plays, which made little headway against the Tiger forwards.

Marshall Is Penn's Star in Defeating Penn State, 17 to 0

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—The University of Pennsylvania football team, with the help of trick plays and good generalship, defeated Pennsylvania State today by the score of 17 to 0.

It was a hard-fought and fast contest, Pennsylvania State playing a stronger game than the score indicates. The up-State team suffered from frequent penalties and early in the first period lost Berryman, one of her best men, who was disqualified for rough playing and also was penalized the half distance to her goal, or 35 yards.

Pennsylvania's first score came in the first period. A forward pass was successfully executed for a 35-yard gain and two rushes placed the ball on State's seven-yard line. On a double pass, Capt. Young rushed across the line for a touchdown. In the next period after Pennsylvania had rushed the ball to within striking distance, Marshall, on a fake forward pass, again crossed the goal line Marshall later drop-kicked a field goal from State's 35-yard line.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS.

TELLS HOW PUSHING BUTTON SHIFTS LEVERS

"Electrically controlled throughout," says George H. Strout, general salesmanager of the Haynes Automobile Co. of Kokomo, Ind., who reached St. Louis Sunday and who is at the Jefferson Hotel. "That is the Haynes car in a nutshell," continued Mr. Strout. "We have abandoned forever the handshift lever. Instead, we have on the steering wheel of the Haynes car a neat little dial of push buttons which is about four and a half inches in diameter. There are seven buttons in all. Numbers one, two and three control the three speeds forward. Button 'R' is for verse, button 'S' starts the car, while pressure of button 'N' neutralizes all gears.

"The interest in this little device, particularly among women, this season, exceeds our greatest expectations. Enthusiastic motorists who have been unfortunate enough to lose a limb or become otherwise disabled are writing us from all over the country, asking if it is possible for them, with the advent of the electric gear-shifting device, to again enjoy the pleasures of automobiling."

Mr. Strout is here on business and will remain in the city for three or four days, after which he will return direct to Kokomo. His last visit to St. Louis was with the Indiana Pacific coast tourists, whom it will be recalled arrived in the city July 3. He is the guest in St. Louis of the Southern Motor Car Co., Haynes representatives.

AUTO CLUB SECURES 73 NEW MEMBERS

The Membership Committee of the Automobile Club of St. Louis are pushing their campaign for new members, with a view to increasing the activities of the organization. During the month of October 73 members were added to the club roster.

It is the aim of the Membership Committee to secure at least two-thirds of the automobile owners of St. Louis and the surrounding country as members of the club. The funds of the club are used for the improvement of conditions pertaining to automobiles. Every automobile owner and all of the users of the public highways are materially benefited by the work of the club. The demand for betterment of roads, traffic regulations and legislation increase as the traffic increases, and the club feels that it is but fair that every automobile owner in St. Louis should be willing to pay 8⅓ cents per day to assist in this work. This is what a membership in the club amounts to. For this the members are entitled to the use of the club rooms in the Planters Hotel, a Tour Book of Missouri, containing over 400 routes and maps; membership in the American Automobile Association and legal aid pertaining to the automobile.

TIRE MILEAGE INCREASED

An interesting fact in connection with placing the gasoline tank on the rear of the 1914 models of Moon cars was revealed this week by J. W. Moon, president of the Moon Motor Car Co., when he assigned as the principal reason for the change the saving in wear on the rear tires.

A series of experiments that have been conducted by Moon in conjunction with one of the prominent tire manufacturers show that the slippage of the rear wheels is decreased 65 per cent by placing the gasoline tank in the rear

"The wear on the rear tires is due largely to the slippage of the rear wheels," Moon explained. "While the front tires bear all the brunt of striking bridges and rough places in the road, they do not wear out as rapidly as do the rear tires. The real reason for this is the slippage of the rear wheels.

"In our experiments we found that from between five per cent to ten per cent of the time that the rear wheels are in motion they are not on the ground at all, but are spinning in the air. The result is that when they strike the ground the tires slip for an instant and thus grind the tire covers down.

"An additional advantage, of course, of the rear gasoline tank is greater fuel capacity, the rear tank accommodating 25 gallons of gasoline. This feature is appreciated by automobilists because of the increasing popularity of long tours."

LIGHT SIX IS POPULAR

The way the light-weight six proposition is taking around the country can best be indicated by the increase in some of the factories that are making a specialty of this type of car.

The Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis reports an increase in business of 100 per cent in August shipments, 100 per cent in September and 100 per cent in October shipments. The indications are that this gain of 100 per cent or more will be carried through the year, and it pretty clearly indicates the trend of the popular feeling regarding type of cars that are meeting the popular demand.

FOREIGNERS LIKE NEW "6"

Even in the Orient, where motoring is still in the early stages, the light American six-cylinder car is gaining a strong foothold. Studebaker cars of this type are now in use in such comparatively out-of-the-way motoring spots as Hongkong, Siam and Ceylon.

P. F. Richter, driving a Studebaker car, won the first formal automobile competition ever held in China by capturing the cup offered by the Governor-General of Kiachou. The event was an economy contest, over a 25-mile course.

ALCOHOL THE BEST NON-FREEZE MIXTURE

"The advent of November means the beginning of radiator difficulties," says H. G. Sperring, president of the Oakland Automobile Co. of St. Louis, "unless the motorist has already prepared for the winter.

"The only really effective method of safeguarding the motor is by the use of some liquid or solution with a lower freezing point than water. At the first glance this would appear to be an easy matter, but there are many things to be taken into consideration.

"The majority of the nonfreezing chemicals react chemically with metals, and if harmless solutions are used, loss of water through evaporation raises the density of the solution above the point of precipitation, thereby clogging the radiator air cells.

"The most reliable solution is alcohol and water, as alcohol does not act upon the metals of the radiator nor upon rubber.

"A 25 per cent solution of alcohol will not freeze at zero Fahrenheit. Thirty per cent should be used for negative 7 degrees, 35 per cent for negative 15 degrees and 40 per cent for negative 22 degrees.

"There is one objection to alcohol, and that is that it evaporates very readily. There are two methods of overcoming this fault. One is by the addition of glycerin—a solution of 15 per cent alcohol and 15 per cent glycerin will stand a temperature of negative 10 degrees Fahrenheit. The only function of the glycerin is to prevent the evaporation of the alcohol.

EAST ST. LOUIS' FIRST MOTOR AMBULANCE

East St. Louis has begun to be motorized. She has now the proud distinction of her first automobile ambulance. This car was purchased by Thomas Burke, livery and undertaking. It is one of the handsomest jobs ever produced in the West. The body is of colonial design in limousine effect, the windows are diamond shaped, with cut glass set in metal and a red glass medical cross is centered in one of them. The interior is built up of genuine mahogany and it carries the latest ambulance equipment, including electric dome lights, a long-wired emergency lamp with 50-foot string, thermos bottles for hot and cold water or stimulants, collapsible rubber buckets and an improved swinging spring stretcher.

The job is painted the London "smoke" color, a queer shade of brown, and the only lettering is a brass name plate. The cost was close to $4000. The body, built by McCabe Powers Co., is mounted on a Dorris 1500-pound commercial chassis, equipped with a fast motor, the contract having been filled by the Dorris Motor Car Co.

ENGLISH STYLE PECULIAR

"English writers have a peculiar style in describing the way a motor car runs," says J. H. Newmark, advertising manager of the Oakland Motor Car Co.

"In reading the trade journals published in England you find many quaint phrases. Not only is the language unique, but the claims, as a rule, are usually extravagant, much more so than they are in this country.

These extracts are taken from a number of papers from the reading columns. Here are some of the terms used:

"It is as silent as a cat on all speeds, picks up marvelously and climbs like a monoplane."

"The Rover is one of the most sprightly machines I have ever traveled in."

"It would be difficult to pick a hole in the behavior of the car on the road."

"The engine pulls to the last gasp without the least sign of laboring."

"The Rover is about the neatest, nattiest and sweetest little 350 quids' worth, all complete, in the market."

"As to the apearance of the advertisements, English and other foreign manufacturers are far behind us. Their illustrations are usually of the gloomy sort and they do not seem to have the first conception of creating 'attention getting' advertisements. The text, as a rule, is lifeless and no attention is paid to symmetry."

MOLINE MAKES CHANGES

The Moline Automobile Co., makers of Moline motor cars, has announced a new series with many new features, but the price has not been changed.

Among the added features is a full floating rear axle, new type of body with bell-shaped back, ammeter on the dash, improved cranking generator, a better grade of leather and fabrics used in upholstering and top work and other refinements.

The most important change is the installation of the full floating rear axle, which supplants the semi-floating design used on previous series. The wheels are carried on double annular ball-bearings and the wheel flange is fastened to the wheel by eight studs and nuts. The new Moline type of rear construction permits the removal of the axle shaft without the wheels.

There are two motor changes—the lightening of the pistons and a decrease in weight of the reciprocating parts, which makes for less vibration and wear. Aside from these two changes the Moline New Series will be produced as before with a four-cylinder motor of 4⅛-inch bore and 6-inch stroke.

SOLID CUSHION TIRE POPULAR FOR ELECTRICS

In perfecting an ideal tire for electrics, two fundamental qualities, resiliency and durability, must be incorporated in order to make a dependable tire. Naturally they are both dependent upon many variables such as compounds, shape of tread and method of fastening. The tire must be designed so that the minimum of energy is consumed in propelling the vehicle. Conservation of power is the one most important factor in the maintenance of an electric car.

Therefore, the resilient and the durable electric tire that covers more miles per battery charge is the only tire for electrics. Every time a solid tire strikes a road obstruction it takes added power to lift the car over, but when the tire absorbs the shock all the power is used in carrying the car in an onward instead of an upward direction.

Not only are the cushion tires far superior to solid tires in saving fuel consumption, but they are also an important factor in prolonging the life of the mechanical parts of the machines. In this comparison the pneumatic tire comes in for an equal amount of credit, but the Motz Cushion Tire goes one step farther; it is trouble-proof, says T. H. McGrehan, general manager.

When you consider that the electric pleasure vehicle is the most popular for women because of its ease of manipulation, then you can readily realize why practically 90 per cent of the electric vehicle manufacturers specified Cushion Tires for their 1913 equipment. Women cannot and should not be expected to repair a blowout or puncture any more than they should be expected to crank a motor. It was essential that the manufacturers equip their machines with self-starters. This made driving for her much more of a pleasure as it overcame a large amount of trouble.

Therefore, it was up to some one to invent a tire that had all the qualities of a pneumatic tire and with one thing more—puncture-proof. In being able to produce a cushion tire that contained the resilient qualities of a pneumatic and, moreover, the durability of a solid tire, a wonderful achievement was accomplished in the tire industry.

In connection with this it might be said that throughout the many experiments of attempting to produce an efficient pneumatic tire for electrics that would consume less power than the regular pneumatic tire for gasoline cars, many difficulties presented themselves which necessitated either the sacrifice of durability to make the tire faster or the sacrifice of resiliency to make the tire more durable. In the cushion tire for electric vehicles both of these qualities are contained without sacrificing the one to obtain the other, which affords an all-around, efficient and trouble-proof electric tire.

EXCLUSIVENESS OF THE HIGH-PRICED MOTOR CAR

At a gathering of enthusiastic motorists the other evening Perry Lewis distributer of Stevens-Duryea Motor Cars is made mention that in a number of instances that distinctiveness of design influenced the closing of a sale fully as much as the price of the car. He continued that absolute individuality or exclusiveness in anything, whether it be a jewel, tapestry, painting or an article of clothing, or an automobile, is the rarest of features. The creation of a distinctive character in any article requires so great an expenditure of brains, time and money, that most of us are content to follow the lines of least resistance and become mere imitators.

Setting a distinctive style in motor car mechanism and in contour of body lines demands so much patience and its cost is so high that pronounced similarity of mechanism and in exterior appearance is by far the easiest way to insure large productions. Wealthy people care little for the price, if the price of the article carries with it that eclat of character and uncommonness which appeals to refined sensibilities.

Said Lewis: "The genuine in everything possesses a value which the spurious imitation falls far short of in the eyes of a person of refined sensibilities. It is for this reason that a woman that demands exclusiveness in everything feels an ineffable pride in making her social calls in a car that stands out with that individuality so difficult to define and so easy to recognize in the creations of every master artist, whether it be in a piece of statuary, a tapestry or a motor car."

BUYS KISSELKAR.

It having been decided by the Legislature that the Governor of Wisconsin should have a new automobile at the State's expense, Gov. Francis E. McGovern has stated his choice and a requisition has accordingly been made. Gov. McGovern's selection is the new KisselKar "6-48," which he specified after a thorough consideration of a large number of cars of various makes. The Kissel people feel very happy over the Governor's selection, as McGovern is an experienced motorist and a discriminating buyer. The honor of closing the sale belongs to the Spooner-McConnell Motor Car Co. of Madison.

A Revision of Prices Downward

FOUR years ago we marketed a much smaller car, than our 1914 model, for $1250. And this was a bare car—with no equipment.

Today we offer you a much larger car in every respect, refined right-up-to-date and completely equipped for only $950—25% less than our price four years ago.

Four years ago the wheel base was shorter, the tires smaller, the motor smaller, in fact every essential part of the car represented less value. In addition to that you had to pay extra for all of the equipment.

Today the Overland has a longer wheel base, a larger and more powerful motor, larger tires and complete equipment. In fact every individual unit is larger than heretofore. Yet the price is 25% under the market of four years ago; is 30% under the present market and has fully 200% greater value.

All of which is accounted for by our gigantic production which has been increased each succeeding season. For 1914 we will build 50,000 cars. And a production of this size is the sole explanation, for it makes possible the numerous economies which increase values and decrease prices.

Still, you argue, other manufacturers must have reduced costs and increased values just as we have.

But they haven't.

Look around you. Think a minute of the cars you know of that have not reduced prices.

Think of the cars that are about the same in specifications and price as they were several seasons ago. Then go further and think of the manufacturers who have raised their prices.

That's probably an angle you failed to consider. That's probably a point you overlooked. But it's important.

Check our price reductions and car enlargements and refinements during the last four years. The facts will astonish you!

Then call on the nearest Overland dealer and minutely examine the 1914 Overland. It has a powerful 35 horsepower motor; it has ample five passenger capacity for family comfort; it has handsome and brilliant electric lights throughout—even under the graceful cowl dash; it has larger tires; it has a wheelbase of 114 inches.

There is a spacious body; luxurious upholstery; the finish is rich, beautiful and simple; the brakes are larger and stronger.

There are Timken bearings; the high grade Schebler carburetor; the magneto is a Splitdorf and the speedometer is a jeweled Stewart. Everything is standard—the world's best.

But the price is lower than ever.

And, most advantageous of all, it is the most economical car on tires, gasoline and oil.

There is an Overland dealer near you. 'Phone him for a demonstration today.

GERMANS WANT SPEEDWAY

Anxious to regain the laurels snatched from her by Goux, Boillot, Dawson and others, Germany is contemplating the erection of a racecourse similar to that of the Indianapolis motor speedway; at least that is what a letter, received at the local track from Adam Opel, a prominent automobile manufacturer of Ruesslesheim, would seem to indicate.

The German builder has asked for drawings showing the general plan of the speedway, as well as its construction in detail, stating that the erection of a like racing plant in his native town was being considered. That course has been selected as a model, it is thought, because of the international prominence it has received through its annual 500-mile contest, the greatest in the world.

The motive is thought to be the long-standing rivalry between the houses of Opel, Benz and Mercedes. The last mentioned firms have to date carried off the lion's share of German racing honors. It may be, therefore, that Opel, by fathering a national racecourse, calculates to take the lead.

Detroiter

The Detroiter is as noteworthy in economy of operation as it is in first cost. 20 to 25 miles on a gallon of fuel, and over 100 miles to the quart of lubricant, is its everyday record.

$850—$900

There is no 5-passenger car made that can better this record—none whatever; and there is no car within hundreds of dollars of the Detroiter price that has the same high grade features of construction — the full-floating rear axle, the platform rear spring, and the other features that make the Detroiter the most remarkable automobile value ever offered.

Get a demonstration. Let us show you the car. Let us tell you some startling facts in the way of automobile comparisons.

USE TRACTORS TO DRAW FIRE APPARATUS

"A nation-wide movement that is attracting much attention," says F. H. Sawyer, manager fire truck tire department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, O., "is the application of the motor tractor to horse-drawn fire apparatus, which brings the latter up to the modern standard and efficiency of motor-driven fire apparatus.

"Millions of dollars are invested in horse-drawn fire apparatus, which if not motorized by the means of the tractor, would be completely lost through the purchase of motor-driven equipment. In replacing the horse the one great advantage of the tractor over the specially built fire apparatus is the retention of practically the entire original equipment, with the exception of the front wheels. This leaves the remainder of the apparatus intact, and obviates the expense of an entire new machine and equipment.

"In fire department service," says Mr. Sawyer, "the most important requisite is reliability. The demands of fire apparatus in responding to a call are imperative, and the machine must get to the scene of the fire without delay. In dealing with reliability, tire equipment is essential. It must be borne in mind that the problems involved in fire department service are far different from those encountered in pleasure vehicles. Motor-driven fire apparatus weighs four or five times the average weight of a touring car, and the combination of excessive weight and high speed demands tires that contain the correct design and highest quality of workmanship and material. No tire can be a success if it fails to fully meet these requirements.

"The abandonment of horse-drawn fire apparatus is inevitable, both on account of the small expense of the tractor and of its decided advantage."

MOTORISTS FORM CLUB

In a number of towns and cities the owners of Ford cars have organized Ford societies for the purpose of establishing social relations, arranging tours and particularly for promoting Ford fellowship. The growth of a number of these little clubs has been so great that there has been talk in some quarters of forming a national organization with a club in every town. With every Ford owner eligible to such an organization it could start off with approximately 300,000 members, as there are approximately that many Fords in use in this country at the present time, with the number growing daily.

HIGH-PRICED CARS SELLING CHEAPER

An interesting discussion on price reduction due to improved manufacturing facilities has been brought on by the lowering the price of the new model Packard "38", just on the market. It has placed a Packard car of well known Packard quality within reach of the thousands of purchasers of moderate priced cars at a slight additional outlay.

Conservatively, this promises to be the greatest Packard year in history. "We have more to offer for less money than ever before," says O. L. Halsey, of the Halsey Automobile Company.

A statement by H. H. Hills, Sales Manager of the Packard Motor Car Co. is most pertinent: "A motor car of the highest type can be produced for considerably less than was possible two years ago or even one year ago.

"After years of patient investigation, designing, testing and proving out six-cylinder cars, we have developed a type which promises to remain substantially unchanged for several years. With the greatest burden of development work behind us, with better manufacturing facilities and more complete standardization of parts, in conjunction with increased output, we are now able to produce a six-cylinder '38' at a lower cost than it was possible to make our famous four-cylinder '30'. The latest model '38' is a more able car than the '30' as well as being smoother, and having even better riding qualities. The design is more extensive, the quality of the material is better and there are many added refinements promoting comfort and convenience."

REBUILT BURNED CAR IN SHOW WINDOW

"Service" is a word which has come into very general use of late in automobile circles. In fact it is used almost indiscriminately, manufacturer, distributor and dealer making use of it prominently in their advertising and sales arguments. However, it has remained for a Washington (D. C.) concern to give the automobile-buying public a really graphic and valuable illustration of what the word means in their understanding. The firm is the Overland-Washington Motor Co., dealers in the national capital in the Overland car, and the demonstration consists of rebuilding, solely from parts which are always carried in stock, an Overland car which was almost completely wrecked by fire.

The Washington concern is attracting a great deal of attention to its "stunt" by doing the work in the show window of the salesroom. An unsightly mess of rusty, twisted, charred steel, iron, rubber and wood, all that was left of the burned car, was placed in the show window and two expert mechanics from the company's repair room started to work. The old car was literally torn to pieces and the parts which could not be repaired were thrown to one side in the scrapheap. New parts, taken from the stockroom division of the agency, were substituted, and in a remarkably short time, the car, as good as new, was ready for the road.

JEFFERY THE NEWEST CAR

Two absolutely new cars, somewhat out of the ordinary in design, special features and price, have been announced for 1914 by the Thomas B. Jeffery company, Kenosha, Wis., under the new trade name of Jeffery. The new name, it is stated, has been given to the new cars in honor of the late Thomas B. Jeffery, to whose energy, ability and life work the position of this company and its product in the world at large is due.

There is a six and a four, both combining the latest ideas gathered by Jeffery engineers from the best European and American practice.

The four is a light, speedy, high-grade car, which will sell at $1550, and the six, a duplicate of the four except for size, will sell at $2250. The four will be provided in five different body styles, including touring type, roadster, two-passenger inside drive coupelette, four-passenger inside drive Sedan and five-passenger limousine.

The Jeffery line will be handled in St. Louis by the Burns-Ramsden Motor Car Co., 5033 Delmar boulevard.

A WINTER CARBURETOR

Someone has called the carburetor the lungs of the automobile. Certainly there is no more vital mechanism in a motor car than the small device which breathes in the air and vaporized gasoline and feeds it to the engine in properly mixed proportions. Consequently, a car's efficiency depends very largely on the efficiency of the carburetor.

The Cadillac company has paid especial attention to the subject of scientific carburetion and the carburetors used on their motor cars are made by the company according to their own standards. On the 1914 Cadillac will be found a new feature that adds materially to the efficiency of the carburetor. This is an electrical heating device which vaporizes the gasoline before the engine is started. This makes it possible to start on lower grades of fuel than heretofore and will prove a great boon, particularly in cold weather.

TRUCK IS REFRIGERATED

A motor truck equipped with a refrigerating plant is the latest. A closed body, insulated as carefully and scientifically as the finest refrigerator, and provided with cooling apparatus, moves through the streets of Jersey City every day delivering to meat markets. This novel body, operated by Ed Fleckenstein's Sons, sausage manufacturers, is mounted on a three-ton KisselKar truck chassis. It is a great success, both mechanically and economically, as well as a novel and effective advertisement for the firm employing it. The St. Louis KisselKar Co. is the St. Louis agent.

Jeffery

$1550 $1550

You wanted a really high-grade car at a moderate price. Jeffery has built it!

You know that four or five hundred dollars will buy an automobile, but you aren't willing to sacrifice entirely, looks and comfort. You know that twice as much money will buy an automobile with quite a little in looks, comfort, power and service under good road conditions.

You know that if you don't care how much money you spend, you can buy a good car, light enough to be economical in gasoline, oil, and tires; powerful and fast enough to do all you want done, and made of the very best materials to be had in this country and Europe; and handsome as the best designers can conceive—perfect in every way—except price.

But to build such a car to sell at a moderate price—that's another thing. It can be done only by a big, successful concern with plenty of money, long years of experience in buying materials and machinery, organized to avoid all waste, so that every cent paid for production would really go into the car; the manufacturer must make practically every part, and make these parts better and for less than he could buy them from others. In short, such a manufacturer must be a complete master of every detail, including large capital. Any other would be sure to fail in such an undertaking.

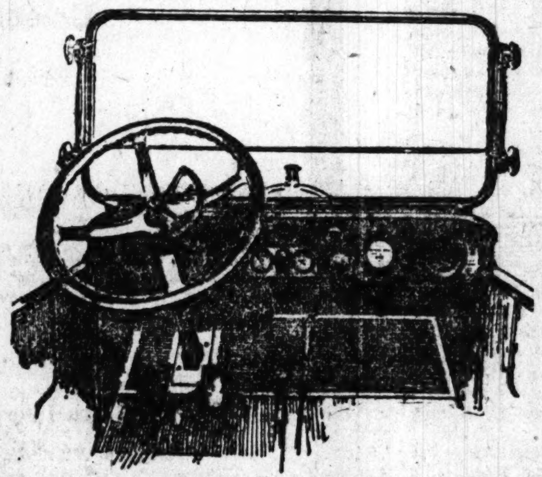
THE THOMAS B. JEFFERY COMPANY has always been recognized as representing the most solid, conservative, yet successful spirit of the automobile industry. In bicycle days the Rambler was the standard by which others were measured. Later, as the automobile took the place of the bicycle, the Rambler and the Cross Country stood in the front rank of cars in their class and were recognized even by their keenest competitors as sturdy, well designed, dependable cars.

Now, this marvelous manufacturing organization, with its $5,500,000 in assets, with the highest credit in the industry and a factory equipped with $3,000,000 worth of the latest machinery, its engineering and designing departments thoroughly familiar with the latest and best designs of this country and Europe, offers to the public a perfect motor car, and is proud to mount upon it the name-plate "Jeffery."

There are other cars on the market at about $1,500, but even hasty comparison of the specifications with the Jeffery will indicate that from now on at least, motor cars cannot be "classed" by price. There are still other cars whose specifications, material and workmanship conform closely to the Jeffery, but they sell from $2,500 to $5,000. Therein lies the remarkable and extraordinary side of this announcement.

With all the capital in the world, and with an honest desire to build a perfect motor car surpassing all existing values, you could not go into the automobile business tomorrow and give your buyers real value. Why? Because, to know how to build value into a motor car, you need to have been building motor cars as long as they have been built; to know every step, every improvement, every mistake. The men who work for you must be those who have worked, studied and experimented with you for years. Your purchasing department must have been buying the best of materials so long and in such quantities that it is invariably offered the best of materials at the lowest prices. Your organization must be so perfected and proficient that shop economies are second nature. Experiments in cost reduction must be in the past.

Then, you must build the car and its parts in your own plant and build them better and more economically than outsiders could. There can be no accessory builders' profits in your costs. Your machinery must be in your plant because you have seen machinery develop and know the best. Your ideas of design and construction must be in advance, because your experience is the longest and wisest and because you have literally torn to pieces and analyzed the best mechanical products of America and Europe. You must have capital to make these experiments and tests, to buy the best brains that your industry affords and to eliminate from your manufacturing problems entirely the necessity for quick profits and the bugaboo of possible financial distress.

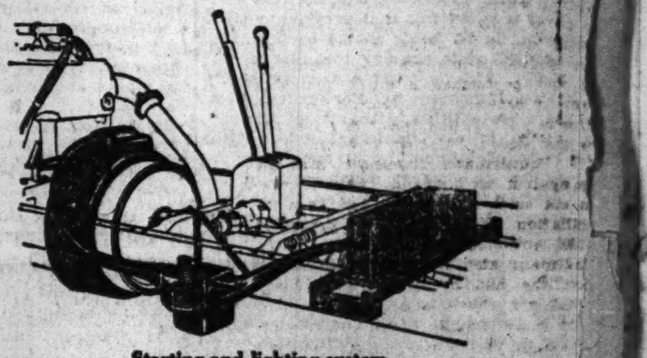


Jeffery Dash and Controls

These are the precise conditions under which the Jeffery is built, and these are the real, sound, logical reasons why the Jeffery is the most astounding value on the market today. We, ourselves, could not have priced the car at $1,550 had we not, after it was built, found ways of reducing our fixed selling expense in certain markets and credited this saving to "cost account" rather than retain it as added profit.

You will probably never appreciate the fact that the Jeffery is one of the highest grade cars on the market regardless of price, unless you consider the specifications. They are given here very briefly. You should know all the truth about this wonderful car, how little it costs to operate it, how easy it is on tires, how smoothly it operates, how quietly and how easily it handles. We have accomplished that which all motor car designers have either overlooked or striven for in vain—a light car without the sacrifice of strength, sturdiness, power or comfort.

The Jeffery high speed mono-bloc motor develops 40 H. P. at 2200 revolutions. Its flexibility is nothing short of marvelous. It drives this car 40 miles per hour on second speed. It gets away with snap—the kind you like to feel. Touch the throttle and in seven seconds you are making twenty miles an hour, in twenty seconds, forty miles, and in fifty-five seconds, fifty miles.



Starting and lighting system. No gears, belts or chains.

The electric starting and lighting system is the U. S. L. Our engineers made a most exhaustive examination of all systems before selecting this, the most expensive of them all. Another car selling for $3,250 charges $200 extra for this equipment. The Jeffery Four could be sold for $100 less if equipped in any other way. All gears, cams, chains and bearings are eliminated in this starting system. These are the things that make other starters noisy. Not a single car in America selling under $2,000, except the Jeffery Four, is equipped with the U. S. L.

The transmission shafts are of vanadium steel hung in five imported annular bearings. The use of vanadium steel and imported ball bearings must appeal to even the uninitiated as practices usually associated only with very high priced cars. Our springs and front axle are also of vanadium steel. The rear axle is of the full floating type, also on imported annular bearings. The driving shaft is many times stronger than the heaviest strain you could ever place upon it, and is made of the finest chrome nickel steel, vanadium treated.

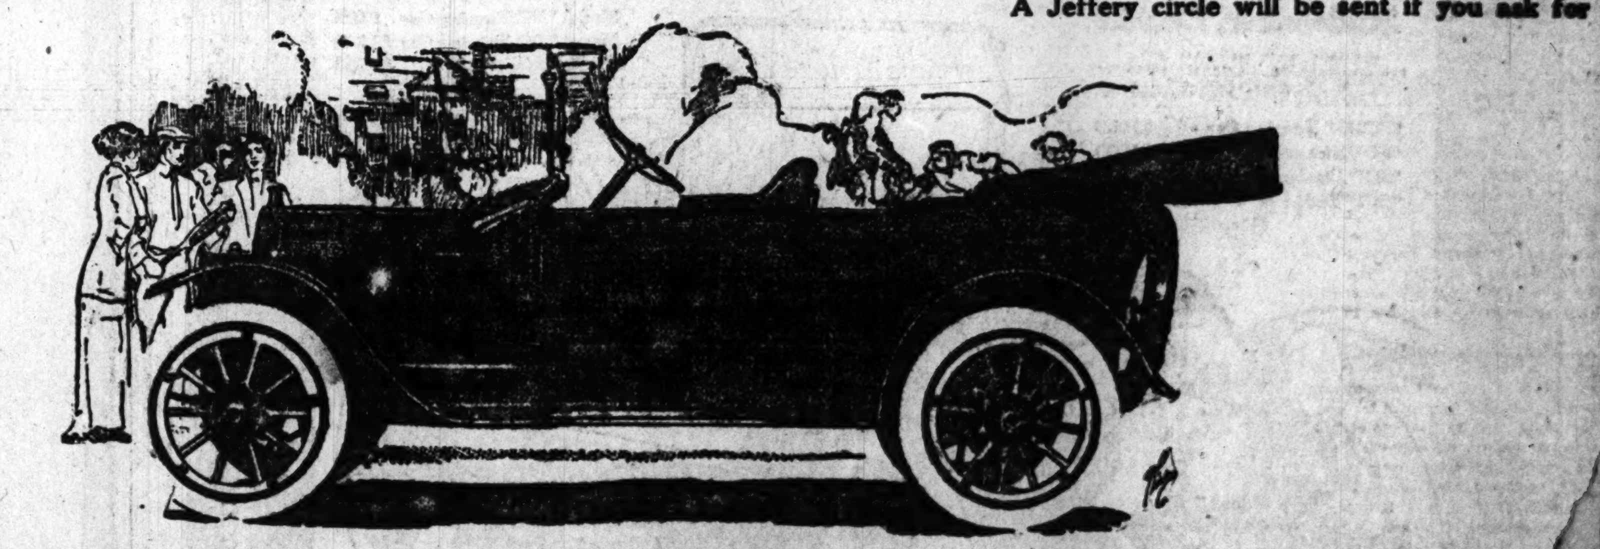
The wheel base of 116 inches gives a compact car and yet retains the comfortable lines of the body and short turning space—42 feet.

Rothschild designed the body. It's an improvement on the Lancia—that beautiful Italian car. It's Brewster green. The upholstery is of the finest leather and hair. The doors are extremely wide—23½ inches. The dash literally radiates an atmosphere of modern equipment combined with practical under-the-hand control. The headlights can be dimmed at any time for city driving.

The equipment includes top of the finest material, rain-vision windshield, Stewart-Warner speedometer, ammeter, extra demountable rim with carrier, electrically lighted dash, Klaxet horn, Solar electric lamps with dimmer, and complete tool equipment.

The car is built in five body styles: Five passenger touring, or two passenger roadster, $1,550; two passenger Coupelette, enclosed, inside drive, $1,950; four passenger Sedan, enclosed, inside drive, $2,350; five passenger limousine, $3,000.

A Jeffery circle will be sent if you ask for



Jeffery Four $1550

The Jeffery Six is a duplicate of the wonderful Jeffery Four, except for size. The cylinders are cast in pairs. This car, which sells at $2250, is in a great m as remarkable among Sixes as its smaller brother is among the Fours. We built it for those who will drive nothing but a Jeffery car, but who prefer a Six. It actual weight, 3700 pounds, with full equipment. We made it luxurious and beautiful without making it extravagant. We know that a better Six cannot be bu

The motor—3¾x5¼—develops 48 horse power. The bearings are imported annular ball throughout. The ignition is Bosch Duplex and the starting and lighting system is the U. S. L., of course. Wheel base, 128 inches, and wheels 36x4½—on enclosed cars 37x5—Rayfield carburetor, Warner auto-meter, ammeter, engine driven power tire pump, Rothschild body with extra wide doors and low, deep seats, full floating rear axle. This car is made, five passenger touring or two passenger roadster at $2250; six passenger at $2300; Sedan five passenger $3250 and limousine at $3700.

Successful dealers want to tie up with a financially strong and successful organization. Furthermore, such a high-grade car, built in such a plant and of such materials has never b been offered anywhere near this price. Big dealers in big cities all over the country are dropping other lines and organizing new companies to take on the Jeffery line. They are qui recognize in this car a wonderful opportunity.

WIFE, 15 TIMES IN LITIGATION WITH HUSBAND, DIVORCED

Mrs. Margaret A. Schuermann of Wellston Gets Second Decree in Two Years.

he fifteenth lawsuit in which Mrs. Margaret A. Schuermann and her husband, Harry G. Schuermann, have been principals in the last three years, was concluded yesterday with a divorce granted to her by Judge Wurdeman at Clayton. She lives at 6315 Catalpa street, Wellston, and he resides next door, at 6317A.

Mrs. Schuermann obtained the custody of seven minor children and $2500 gross alimony. She charged indignities and failure to support her. Schuermann was present during her testimony, but made no opposition to the suit. They were married Nov. 20, 1893, and their last separation occurred Feb. 1, this year.

The family litigation began March 18, 1911, when Schuermann sued for divorce, alleging that his wife was excessively addicted to eating coffee beans, which, he declared, made her so irritable that life with her was unendurable. Mrs. Schuermann replied with a cross-bill, in which she accused her husband of cruelty and of cursing her before the children. He compelled her, she charged, to do manual labor on their 15-acre farm on the St. Charles rock road, west of Wellston.

She Got Divorce in 1911.

DYER TELLS WHY HE PUT ORATION ON BUSCH IN RECORD

Congressman Declares His Course Was Proper and That No One Suggested It.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—When Representative Dyer of St. Louis, on Oct. 28, received a copy of a St. Louis newspaper which contained a copy of Charles Nagel's oration at the funeral of Adolphus Busch, he thought it would be a neat thing to put that speech into the Congressional Record, where almost any sort of speech can be inserted under leave to print. Its publication there has caused a good deal of comment.

"I put that speech in the Record of my own free will and accord," said Dyer today, when a Post-Dispatch reporter asked him about the matter.

"Mr. Busch was a great, big hearted man, who did many charitable things in his lifetime," he said. "He gave $100,000 for the earthquake sufferers of California, and $25,000 for the Dayton flood victims. He gave liberally to help poor people. Ministers of the gospel and other good men honored him. He was in the brewery business, it is true, but he was an honest, upright man. He conducted a clean business. I think my course was a proper one. No one suggested it."

He said further that he would have put Congressman Bartholdt's eulogy of Busch into the Record if he had had a copy of it.

NO BIBLE TO BE FOUND IN OKLAHOMA CAPITOL

Gov. Cruce of Oklahoma, Elder in Church, Surprised When He Seeks Quotation.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Nov. 1.—While Gov. Cruce was preparing an address this week he asked for a Bible to complete a scriptural quotation. A search was made of all the departments of his office and not a Bible could be found. Supt. Martin of the capitol building then started on a tour of the offices. He returned empty-handed.

"It's a shame," said Martin, "that not an office in the building has a Bible. Gov. Cruce is an elder in the Presbyterian Church, his secretary, F. S. E. Amos, is an officer in the State Sunday School Association, and the other employes of the office are church members. Here they live eight or 10 hours a day and not a Bible in sight."

FORTUNE FOUND IN SHOP OF 'POOR' JUNK DEALER

$60,000 in U. S. Bonds, Much Cash and Deeds to 33 Houses and Many Farms Discovered.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Nov. 1.—When a brother of Thomas Lahey and a lawyer searched the little junk store and pawnshop in the negro district where Lahey had lived many years, they found more than $60,000 in Government bonds and other securities and a large amount of cash hidden away.

They also discovered that Lahey owned 33 houses in various parts of the town, besides several farms. Lahey often said that he lived on $1.50 a week. He came here many years ago, and those who knew him then said he had little money.

His fortune will go to his brother, John Lahey, of Arma, Kan., another brother in California and three sisters who live in Pennsylvania.

BALLOON "GOODYEAR" WINS THE BIG RACE

"The bringing to America of the Gordon Bennett trophy cup by Pilot R. H. Upson and aid R. A. D. Preston is sure to bring about a new era in aeronautics in America," says F. A. Sieberling, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, O.

Upson and Preston have the honor of being the only two contestants who sailed their balloon outside of France. When the balloon "Goodyear" headed for the ocean, Upson was familiar enough with the prevailing air current to know that counterwinds would be met that were sure to blow him back over the continent. This proved to be the case. They crossed the English Channel and traveled miles over the Atlantic, however, before these winds were encountered.

The "Goodyear" is the same balloon that won the national championship balloon race at Kansas City July 4, 1913. It was also in the national race of 1912.

STOPPED HIS DRINKING

This Wife and Mother Saved Her Husband Over Ten Years Ago.

SHE WILL GLADLY TELL YOU HOW FREE

Write to Her Today. Send No Money. She Has Nothing To Sell.

For over 20 years James Anderson of Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over ten years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks.

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson, but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished with a simple home remedy which anyone can get and use. And she now desires to tell every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks just what it is.

It can be given secretly if desired, and every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly, in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks, however, and that is that you do not send money, for she has nothing to sell. Her address is 160 Hill Av., Hillburn, N. Y.

Note—This offer should be accepted at once by all who have dear ones who drink. In fact, every one who has to contend in any way with drunkenness should know about it. Therefore, if you do not write Mrs. Anderson yourself, CUT THIS NOTICE OUT and mail it to a friend who could use her advice. And even though you do answer it, MAIL IT TO SOMEONE ELSE who you think would like to know what Mrs. Anderson used. In other words, let this notice reach as many as possible, for Mrs. Anderson will reply to every letter, no matter how many she receives.

FIRE AUTO TRUCK SHOWS LARGE SAVING

Estimates at Watertown, N. Y., Indicate That Horses Cost Far More.

Hundreds of dollars are being saved to taxpayers of Watertown, N. Y., each year by the installation of motor-driven apparatus in the fire department. An automobile for Chief Fred Morrison was purchased three years ago and last year a motor combination chemical, hose and pumping engine was added. The latter has more than demonstrated its superiority over the old-time fire engine. Following is the cost of the horse-drawn and the motor apparatus for six months:

Horse Drawn.
Maintenance of four horses	$338.00
Wages of two drivers	273.00
Coal for heaters	6.00
Repairs, etc.	10.00
Total	$627.00

Motor Driven.
81 gallons gasoline	$11.34
15 gallons oil	5.75
Five pounds transmission grease	.60
Total	$17.69

This is a saving of practically $600 in six months, or about $1200 a year. The Chief's automobile, which has been in constant use nearly every day for three years, having been run 2500 miles up to January, has cost 19.5 cents a day for maintenance. During the past year $56.80 was spent for tubes, patches and replacements of tires; $38.13 for repairs to axle, gas lights, spark plugs, etc.; $38 for repainting.

NOT LOOKING FOR SPEED

That there is an abundance of speed in the modern motor car for the average owner, is the opinion of Mr. Harry R. Radford, vice-president and general manager of the Cartercar company, Pontiac, Mich. Mr. Radford says that most owners do not want to burn up the road, so to speak, but prefer a car that will run at a moderately high speed, and keep it up.

"When the first cars came out, all we heard was more speed, more speed," said Mr. Radford, "and one was led to believe that owners would never be satisfied, no matter what rate their cars would travel. But now the owners are satisfied, and in fact, I do not believe that one car in ten is ever let out to the highest speed that it is capable of attaining. I have never ridden with any owner on ordinary roads, when he let his car out as fast as it would go. He feels that about thirty to forty miles an hour is as fast as he cares to go, and feel safe.

"Today, when the prospective buyer goes into a salesroom and looks at a car he does not seem particular about speed, but confines his attention to reliability and efficiency. He wants to know whether the car will travel the hills and sand and mud, and whether his wife and daughters can drive it, and what his upkeep expense will be. We find that buyers are especially delighted with the gearless transmission in our car, because they realize what it has to do with upkeep, and efficiency, and seldom do our agents have any inquiries whatever in regard to the speed which the car will travel. The speed craze has left the motor car owners, and although they enjoy seeing fast speed on tracks they do not care to travel at such rate themselves."

CHASE OFFICIAL HERE

"St. Louis seems not to have awakened thoroughly to the advantage attending the use of motor trucks," said E. A. Kingsbury, general manager of the Chase Motor Vehicle Co. of Syracuse, who spent several days in St. Louis lining up their new distributors here. "Many smaller cities can boast of more motor trucks than St. Louis. This may be due to the distance from New York, which is the real starting place of the motor truck industry in the United States. We have many of our trucks operating in St. Louis and the number is much smaller than in any city of similar size.

"The business men of Eastern cities have had opportunity to ascertain easily what motor trucks will do for economy and their use has grown accordingly."

Kingsbury was accompanied to St. Louis by C. F. Batcharie, Pacific Coast manager, in whose territory St. Louis is located, and E. M. Denton, district manager for St. Louis and territory, aided them in their investigations here.

The M. W. Bond Automobile Co., the local agents, have territory which includes Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, and the establishment of agencies is now in progress.

WORLD'S BIGGEST TRUCK

What is believed to be the largest automobile truck in the world has gone into service in Troy, N. Y. With a wheel base of 17 feet and a body 7x9x18 feet, it has a capacity of 6740 loaves of bread, or six tons. Firestone hard base removable tires are used. The truck is the first of several to be installed by the Charles Freihofer Baking Co. of Troy, Albany and Schenectady.

SELL LYONS-KNIGHT CAR

The agency for St. Louis and a large slice of surrounding territory has been taken by the George C. Brinkman Motor Car Co., for the Lyons-Knight car. This car is built by the Lyons-Atlas Co. of Indianapolis and carries the Knight sleeve valve engine.

A "PAIGE" OF HISTORY

Sept. 28 marked the completion of four years of hard work and remarkable growth of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. From the small beginning, with an 800-car output, the development has been steady, necessitating a new factory with an output for 1914 of 14,500 cars.

The Paige is sold in St. Louis territory by the Lindsay Motor Car Co.

Economy in boarding expense is practiced by persons whose incomes are small and they read the room want ads in Post-Dispatch board and room columns to get the most for their money.

CAPITAL IS INCREASED

The capital stock of the Packard Motor Car Co. was increased from $10,000,000 to $16,000,000 at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the company which was held last Thursday. The plan provides for the addition of $3,000,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and an equal amount of common stock, raising the total of each to $8,000,000.

Ask Dun's, Bradstreet's Or Your Own Banker

NOW, MORE THAN EVER BEFORE, it behooves the dealer and the buyer to look carefully to the financial stability of the automobile manufacturer whose car he contemplates owning.

THERE HAVE BEEN SOME occurrences of late that should serve as a warning in this regard. On the other hand, there hasn't been a failure that wasn't scheduled. They were foreordained from the first—inevitable.

SOME WERE OVERDUE, in fact. Thanks to the splendid demand for cars, which we and other responsible concerns were unable to supply in full, some of them were accorded a longer lease of life than their product or experience or financial backing entitled them to.

THERE WAS NO EXCUSE, however, for any buyer being in ignorance of what impended. That was easily foreseen.

LET US SUGGEST that now, you who are in the market for a car look into this matter as it deserves. You owe it to yourself—and us.

ASK BRADSTREET'S OR DUN'S. Or if you are not a subscriber, ask your Banker to investigate and inform you. He will do it gladly.

ASK HIM WHICH ARE the five financially strongest automobile manufacturers.

YOU WILL FIND that the Maxwell Motor Company is one of the five—and it will not be fifth in point of stability either.

HAVE HIM ANALYZE the latest financial statements of these five strongest and tell you which have the greatest amount of assets in proportion to liabilities—including bonded indebtedness, etc., of course. We think he'll tell you the Maxwell Motor Company is one of the leaders.

PERHAPS YOU DIDN'T KNOW—there's been so much confusion in this matter—that the Maxwell Motor Company has no connection whatsoever with the late Maxwell-Briscoe Company except that this concern purchased, through the U. S. Courts, all the assets, not only of that, but of several other concerns.

WE STARTED WITH A CLEAN SLATE—with plants worth many millions, with ample cash on hand to take care of our manufacturing operations, etc.

WE HAVE NO BONDED INDEBTEDNESS—no outstanding notes or debts of any kind except current open accounts not yet due.

AND TODAY WE ARE nine months old with orders on our books for more than thirty thousand cars.

HAS THAT RECORD EVER been surpassed in this industry? We submit the account of our stewardship—ask Bradstreet's, Dun's or your Banker for further particulars regarding the operations and stability of this Company.

THEN YOU'LL FEEL SECURE on that point and, when you compare the cars as carefully, there will be only one answer, "Yours will be a Maxwell."

THERE ARE THREE MAXWELL MODELS—the "25" for $750; the "35" for $1225, with electric starter and lights; and the self-starting 7-passenger "50-6" for $1975. A handsome illustrated booklet descriptive of each model tells How and Why we can give such values. Send today for the book on the Model you are interested in.

MILITIA GETS 14 RIFLES AND POPGUN IN STRIKERS' TENT

Colorado Miners' Arsenal Yields Poor Return When Search Is Made.

GREETING FOR SOLDIERS

Union Members Welcome Them to Ludlow District as Friends.

TRINIDAD, Colo., Nov. 1.—Fourteen rifles and a popgun were the trophies captured by an armed expedition, consisting of two regiments of infantry, two troops of cavalry and a platoon or artillery, comprising the Colorado National guard, which left here early today to occupy the Ludlow district and seize the arms and ammunition of the striking miners of the Ludlow tent colony and those of the mine guards in the camps of Berwind, Tabasco, Hastings and Dalagua.

The popgun and the 14 rifles were turned over to Gen. Chase and his command at the Ludlow colony at the coal camps. The troopers learned that the guards had been discharged with three or four exceptions and that their arms and ammunition had been turned back to the operators. The soldiers, with the exception of a detachment of 125, returned to their camps at Trinidad and Walsenburg tonight. No organized search for weapons has been made. It is declared that over 1000 rifles have been carried away and hidden by the strikers.

Greeted by Strikers.

A remarkable demonstration was accorded to the State militia upon their arrival at Ludlow shortly before noon. Adjt.-Gen. John Chase and his staff rode overland from Trinidad with the two troops of cavalry and the artillery. The infantry went from Trinidad and Walsenburg on special trains.

The arrival of the three divisions at Ludlow was timed perfectly and as the cavalry and artillery slowly circled the tented villages occupied by the striking miners and their families, the trains drew up at Ludlow and the infantrymen detrained and marched to the colony. Nearly 2000 men, women and children marched forward to greet the militiamen. The men carried picks and the women carried American flags and all joined in singing national airs to the accompaniment of an impromptu band consisting of a cornet and a few harmonicas.

Arms Are Surrendered.

The strikers' parade was headed by John R. Lawson, who greeted Gen. Chase with the statement:

"We know you come in peace and as friends and we greet you as friends."

The soldiers then marched between solid lines of strikers to the Ludlow tent colony, where a brief conference was held with Lawson. Gen. Chase departed with a detachment for the camps and Maj. Williams was left in charge. A few minutes later Maj. Williams asked that all arms be turned over to the State.

"Certainly," said Lawson, and leading the way to the commissary tent he pointed out the little stack of firearms. These were turned over to the soldiers who carried them off. No tents were searched.

DOUBLE CHARGES ADDED FOR DEFICIENT POSTAGE

Postmaster-General Calls Attention to "Penalty" Prescribed by Foreign Countries.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Postmaster-General Burleson issued a warning today calling attention to the fact that a "penalty" for not ascertaining the amount of postage necessary before mailing letters between the United States and foreign countries, each country concerned in the delivery charges double the amount of deficient postage before delivery is made. The Postmaster-General was led to caution the public to this effect because of the large number of letters being mailed to Australia bearing only 2 cents in postage instead of 5 cents.

At present 2-cent letter postage agreements exist only between the United States, Canada, Cuba, Mexico, New Foundland, the Panama Canal Zone, the Republic of Panama, Germany, England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland and Shanghai, China. To all other countries, including Australia, the rate is 5 cents for the first ounce.

BULL TOSSES A HORSE OVER FENCE, THEN BACK

GREENSBURG, Ind., Nov. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ewing were driving on a country road near Ewington when a bull, led by Sherman Lane, attacked their buggy. The vehicle was upset in a ditch and Mrs. Ewing was painfully bruised, Ewing escaping injury.

The bull then hoisted the horse over a fence into a field. He then leaped over the fence and pitched the horse back. Seemingly satisfied with this demonstration of his ability, he permitted himself to be led away.

More Power for Chattanooga.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 1.—An additional 30,000-horsepower current has been turned into Chattanooga from the second dam of the Eastern Tennessee Power Co., located in the Polk County mountains near Parksville. Mayor Thompson threw the switch and "Ocoee No. 2" was blazoned from the top of the Hamilton National Bank Building.

Well-heated rooms with all the conveniences of a home are advertised in Post-Dispatch wants.

Boy Chants Three-Hour Service

Crowd Follows Him on Street

Makes Jewish Congregation Marvel

Nathan Melinek, 13, From London, Central Figure in Solemn Service at Temple B'Nai Amoona—Has Been Cantor Since He Was 6 Years Old.

MURILLO PHOTO.

NATHAN MELINEK

Nathan Melinek, 13-year-old boy cantor from London, who is considered a prodigy, is creating a mild furore among the orthodox Jews of St. Louis. He chanted for three hours yesterday morning at the Temple B'Nai Amoona, Garrison and Lucas avenues. At the conclusion of the services he was followed to the home of his uncle, Samuel Fisher, 2713 Franklin avenue, by an admiring crowd of old and young people, who showered compliments upon him and his retinue—a brother, a sister and cousins—in both English and Yiddish.

Nathan, who is a delicate looking boy, began chanting the first part of the Rosh Hodesh Shaboss, or service for the first Saturday of the month, at 8 a. m. He continued the chant with only brief interruptions in the way of responses from the congregation, until 9:30 a. m. He then had a respite of an hour during the reading of the Hapthora, or portion of the prophets. At 10:30 he took up the second part of the service of psalms and prayers, continuing the chant until noon.

Solemnity in the Service.

The chanting of the boy, who, St. Louis Jews say, is the youngest to their knowledge who holds the position of cantor, which is second in the synagogue only to the rabbi, was attended with great solemnity. All the married men who attended the service wore the Thaless or white woolen cloak with four corners and ministerial caps—round black cloth turbans.

The chanting was in Hebrew, without musical accompaniment, and as the boy sang the psalms in a sweet, steady soprano, venerable Jews, learned in Hebrew, marveled at what they said was his knowledge of the ancient language. By some his great power of vocal endurance, considered with his frail appearance, was considered remarkable.

In the first half of the service the boy occupied the pulpit in the front of the church and faced the congregation. In the second half he was in the pulpit in the center of the temple. All eyes were on him, but he betrayed no nervousness or embarrassment.

He maintained his poise when on the street after the services men and women surrounded him and lavishly complimented him. His admirers recounted that he had been kissed by the wife of Sir Rufus Isaacs, lord chief justice of England. The lad's grave demeanor caused amusement to his elders. He acknowledged the introduction of persons who were presented to him with a cool, brief nod of the head, only rarely consenting to shake hands. When questions were asked him he replied in monosyllables or looked over the heads of the questioners and did not reply at all.

Refuses to Answer Questions.

At his uncle's home he told a reporter that he thought Americans were more amiable than Englishmen. Then he retreated into his shell of reserve and declined to answer questions, not even acknowledging by any sign that he heard the question.

"That's the way he always is," said his sister, Milly, 23 years old, who with her brother Dave, 19, accompanied the boy to America to visit their uncle.

The uncle says he is going to try to have the boy take a position with a synagogue in St. Louis and remain here. He is said to receive $50 a Sabbath service for chanting in London, where his father is a Rabbi. The boy has been chanting in the synagogues since he was 6 years old. Whatever he gets from chanting in St. Louis will be from contributions.

To seat one's self at a festive board or a heavily laden table and not be able to eat is positive sorrow to most dyspeptics and stomach sufferers, and likewise pain.

"I Walk to My Meals and Eat All I Want, Then a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet Makes Good for Me."

When your system is robbed of its natural digestive juices, in their correct proportion, a little candy-like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet gives to them the qualities they lack and you thereby rest the digestive apparatus and allay irritation, pain, gas and stomach trouble.

Pepsin such as used in a Stuart's tablet is one of nature's greatest aids; and when this is combined with the other ingredients you simply bring happiness to every worn-out nerve of the stomach, liver, intestines, pancreas and other organs.

Predigested foods will not aid nature if she insists on manufacturing the wrong juices. The bowels need coarse and heavy foods, which is vitally essential to health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food in the stomach, have a tendency to stop gas formation, sour stomach, decay, etc.; then as the food passes into the lower digestive tract (the intestines) it takes the Stuart's digestive agents with it, and there is where the real work is done.

The nutritive value of food and tablet is separated from the waste matter and is assimilated and distributed into the proper parts of the body. The blood is enriched and the liver stored with the qualities the system needs.

Go to your druggist now and buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, price 50c, and then eat what you will; but take a tablet afterwards. Then will come to you the beginning of the end of all your stomach troubles and food fears.—ADV.

OSCAR WILDE NOT DEAD, DECLARES NEPHEW OF POET

Fabian Lloyd Says English Writer Visited Him in Paris Last March.

ROCKS IN COFFIN, HE SAYS

Author Supposed to Be Buried in French Cemetery Lives in India, Relative Asserts.

Copyright, 1913, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Fabian Lloyd, nephew of Oscar Wilde, his father being Otto Lloyd, a brother of Wilde's wife, an athlete of gigantic size, 23 years old, practicing the professions of poet and prize fighter, in Paris, states seriously in his review, called 'Maintenant,' that Oscar called on him in his apartment in Paris, March 23, last, that the coffin in the grave at Bagneux Cemetery, weighing 240 pounds, contains only paving stones, cotton wool and a large glass jar, and the jar holds a manuscript work in French by Wilde, called "Amen," with sub-titles, "A Comedy—A Tragedy?"

In answer to literary critics who take the statement as a joke, Lloyd offers to wager any sum up to 10,000 francs that the coffin's contents are as stated, also, that he can prove Wilde to be alive in India. He says Wilde arrived a little after 10 o'clock on a rainy evening. Lloyd was in bed. He did not recognize his uncle, who insisted upon his nephew not turning on the lights.

Wilde seated himself comfortably and announced himself as Sebastian Melmoth. Then Lloyd promptly recognized him, lighted up and saw Oscar looking pretty old, wearing a beard, his hair almost white. Wilde embraced his nephew, murmured exclamations of pain and suffering, such as "God has been terrible" and wept.

Lloyd said his uncle was much heavier than formerly. Later Wilde calmed and smiled, laughed, smoked incessantly, drank cherry brandy and informed him he was on his way from Asia to Sumatra and said he had been recognized several times in Italy, especially in trains.

When talking about his alleged death and burial, Wilde appeared a bit mad and wouldn't commit himself.

Drinking more, Wilde was intensely interested in stories told by Andre Gide about his charities to him shortly before his alleged death and said they were untrue. Gide gave him only five francs. He said he was still writing, had finished his memoirs and was just finishing a volume of verse and had written four plays, adding laughing, "for Sarah Bernhardt."

Wilde was uninterested in news of his son Vivien. He was shocked by his nephew's prize-fighting career and American accent. He departed at 3 a. m., refusing to go to Montmartre on a spree, though he admitted he would have liked to immensely.

"FRESNO DAN" TO SHARE IN A $500,000 ESTATE

Californian Declared One of the Rightful Heirs of Daniel R. Melrose.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 1.—"Fresno Dan," the California seeker for a share in the $500,000 estate of the late Daniel Russell of Melrose, is declared the rightful claimant in the report filed in the Supreme Court today by Gilbert A. Pevey, master of the case, who listened for 11 months to the testimony. "Fresno Dan," says the Master, is undoubtedly Daniel Blake Russell, long- "Dakota Dan," the rival claimant

"Dakota Dan," the rival claimant from Dickinson, N. D., is declared to be James Delbert Russell. "He has neither the mental, moral, physical nor intellectual characteristics of the Russell family," says Pevey.

The Russell will case has been before the Massachusetts courts for four years and has occasioned two unusually long hearings. In the midst of a probate hearing the claimant, now declared to be the rightful joint heir with William C. Russell, another son of the merchant, was discovered at Fresno, Cal. He was acknowledged by the Russell family.

SPEEDY WORKMEN ARE GUESTS OF KING GEORGE

Palace Artisans Find at Dinner Plates, Clay Pipes and Packets Bearing Royal Arms.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The completion of improvements to Buckingham Palace, including an entire new front of white Portland stone, at a cost of $800,000, was made the occasion last evening of a dinner at the expense of King George to the 500 workmen who had put up the new facade in record time.

King George himself was not present, but he had Sir Derek Keppel preside over the festivities in his name and sent a message of congratulation to the workmen. At each man's plate was put a new clay pipe of wonderful design, presented by the King with a packet of good, strong tobacco bearing the royal arms and inscribed: "From H. M. the King."

Following the precedent set in the Putamayo case, officials here expect Great Britain will call on the United States to investigate and in that case the facts will be examined by consular officers and a report made London.

Bathe Your Blood Get the Badness Out

Pimples, Boils, Carbuncles and all Other Evidences Quickly Go and You Feel Fine

S. S. S. Gives You Backbone, Nerve Strength with Pure, Invigorated Blood.

If you feel thick-headed, legs a-weary, tire easily and feel utterly used up, your blood needs a bath.

It is astonishing how quickly you brace up after using S. S. S.

Eczema, rash, pimples, tetter, boils and all impurities in the blood are quickly washed out by the remarkable action of S. S. S. It is in the nature of a bath for your blood. It is not a "dope," not a "physic," there is not a drop of harmful mineral drugs. It is a far better friend to your nerves than any "nervine" you can use because it is just as pure as the gruel you would feed to an invalid. The blood takes kindly to S. S. S. It doesn't bother your stomach, but it does give you strength.

Rheumatism, catarrh, malaria, bronchitis, typhoid and all such painful or dangerous maladies cannot remain in a system washed and cleansed by the remarkable action of S. S. S.

There is scarcely a drug store or general store anywhere but what keeps S. S. S. in stock. It is prepared in one of the world's best and largest laboratories, and has maintained the health of a host of people who use it every spring and fall because it gives them a feeling of renewed strength, puts the look of health in the eye and pinks the flesh with the ruddy glow of health.

The human body, like the habitation of man, becomes clogged with stagnant impurities. We see pimples, boils, carbuncles and various skin afflictions breaking out to relieve the congestion within.

The remarkable manner in which S. S. S. clears the system is a most interesting study.

It sweeps its way into the blood stream; flushes every artery, vein and capillary; awakens functional activity and causes a wonderful animation throughout.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating the myriad of cells to the healthy and judicious selection of their own essential nutriment.

And if, from the presence of some disturbing poison a condition of eruptive disease is set up, S. S. S. so directs the action of the local cells that the poison is rejected and eliminated from their presence.

Thus, when the cells break down to cause the formation of carbuncles, S. S. S. so stimulates cellular activity that new and healthy materials are rapidly supplied and eruptions cease. The same is true of mucous inflammations, of acid secretions and all those influences which cause rheumatism, catarrh, bronchitis, deafness and failing vision.

The medicinal properties of S. S. S. are relatively just as vital and essential to well-balanced health as the food components of the grains, meats, fats and sugars.

And of one thing you may be certain, there is not an atom of mercury, calomel, blue mass, iodide of potash or arsenic; nor does S. S. S. contain any other mineral. It is a pure vegetable medicine and wonderfully acceptable to even a very weak stomach.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. from any druggist and note how quickly it puts your blood in fine condition. It is just what you need, a fine, bracing, purifying medicine that is sure to do you a world of good. And if you are troubled with some form of blood disease, write to the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 270 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga., for free private advice.

Don't allow anyone to tell you they have something "just as good," for they haven't got it.

B. M. L. ATTITUDE TOWARD FREIGHT RATES CRITICISED

Business Men Complain Its Traffic Bureau Fails to Protect St. Louis Interests.

COTTON CASE IS CITED

Lumbermen and Others Inclined to Suspect Domination of Railroad Influence.

The remarkable assertion made at the recent members' conference of the Business Men's League that the league had not, through its traffic bureau, taken steps to protect the cotton industry of St. Louis from extortionate and discriminatory railroad rates which threaten its existence, has caused city-wide discussion of the league's attitude in railroad rate affairs, not all of which has been favorable to the organization.

Since the league increased its membership a few months ago, to "democratize" the organization, and to give it a wider sphere of activities in representing the business and industrial interests of the community, it has been subjected to close scrutiny by business men generally for evidences of greater efficiency in procuring fair and equitable railroad rates for St. Louis. Whether the policy of the traffic bureau has been influenced by railroad interests to the advantage of the railroads and the disadvantage of shippers generally, has been a topic of lively discussion, particularly among the recently initiated members of the league.

Object of the League.

One of the objects of the Business Men's League, according to its official declaration of principles, is: "To maintain and secure favorable railway rates through all our territorial connections." Business men, interested in rate questions, in view of this declaration, have been looking to the league for effective work in obtaining equitable rate adjustments for St. Louis, and have naturally interested themselves in knowing what the league has done to aid St. Louis in its ceaseless fight for better rates.

In a recent issue of Forward St. Louis, he official publication of the league, ere was a self-congratulatory notice members informing them of a reducon by the Interstate Commerce Comission of rates from St. Louis to Topeka, Salina, Wichita, Hutchinson and her points in Kansas. The inference be drawn from the notice was that is result had been accomplished by e league, when, as a matter of fact, vestigation shows that the initiative as taken by the Kansas Railroad Commission.

Negligence Alleged.

While the league announced this hievement in such a way as to leave e impression that it was entitled to e credit, it is pointed out by rate exrts who followed the case that it had en guilty of negligence in guarding e interests of St. Louis, especially in is important contest.

Examination of the record in the Kans rate case fails to show that the ague, through its traffic bureau or legal advisers, entered an appearance in e case, although it was quite evident m the issues in the case that the deion of the commission must have an portant bearing upon rates from St. uis to Kansas territory.

he through first-class rate from St. uis to Topeka was reduced by the mmission from 89 cents to 80 cents, corresponding reductions were de on other classes. Originally the es from St. Louis to Kansas were ade by adding the local rate from St. uis to Kansas City to the local rate m Kansas City to point of destina-

he Interstate Commerce Commission d down a new doctrine in rate making in the Burnham-Hanna-Munger e decided in 1908. That was that, in absence of extraordinary conditions ough rates should be something less n the sum of the locals. That doce has been affirmed by the Sume Court.

Principle in the Case.

he principle upon which the recent sas case was decided was the same in the Burnham-Hanna-Munger case. this decision St. Louis gets an adtage of 9 cents in rates to Kansas, ich it formerly did not have.

he Kansas Railroad Commission did attack the rates from St. Louis to peka and other points until Septemr, 1911, 15 months after the new rate ctrine had been affirmed by the Sume Court. During that time traffic resentatives of the Business Men's ague, it is pointed out by business n, should have been cognizant of the al principle thus established, and ich could have been invoked in favor St. Louis.

ow necessary it was for some such on to be taken is found in the fact the Interstate Commerce Commisin applying the Burnham-Hannaer doctrine, had reduced the rates New York to Kansas City, thus g St. Louis at great disadvantage peting with Kansas City in Kan-Western territory. The through New York to Kansas City, been made originally by add-rate of 82 cents from New Louis to the local rate f t. Louis to Kansas City, ed by the Commission h of the Kansas Railroad nd not through the initia-Business Men's League, St. Kansas decision gained an which offset the advantage y had gained earlier in the New York. But for the ache Kansas Railroad Commisdesired to obtain for Kanants fair and equitable rates andise shipped from St. Louis, rted that rates would still be which would give Kansas City advantage in territory in which for years it has been a formidable competitor of St. Louis.

Lumbermen's Statement.

The Lumbermen's Exchange, which represents the vast lumber industry of St. Louis, for several years has been fighting discriminatory railroad rates which impose a heavy arbitrary tax upon the business. In its rate fights the Lumbermen's Exchange has had occasion to study the attitude of the traffic department of the league toward the railroad rate situation in St. Louis. The result of the exchange's observations is set forth in this statement by its secretary, George McBlair:

"As regards the work of the Business Men's League in protesting advances and improper rates to St. Louis on lumber and ties, I can only say that its labors in this direction have not been as necessary in this business as possibly with other business interests of the town. The Lumbermen's Exchange has a very efficient traffic committee, of which Charles E. Thomas is chairman, and through the work of President F. H. Smith there is a publication now being issued monthly under the auspices of the Lumbermen's Exchange, known as the 'St. Louis Lumber Buyer,' which is sent to all of the lumber manufacturers in the South and is used to martial these lumbermen to our assistance when unfair freight rates are levied upon shipments destined to St. Louis. This publication also boosts the town by calling the attention of the entire South to the many advantages of St. Louis.

Passive Assistance Given.

"At those times when the assistance of the league for the sake of its prestige, has been requested, this assistance has been given, but only in a negative, passive manner, rather than positive and emphatic. Particularly does this statement apply to the arbitrary and discriminatory advance of $5 to $7.50 per car on lumber made by the Cotton Belt, Iron Mountain and Frisco Railroads on Jan. 5, 1911, from the Southwest to St. Louis. This advance was made to St. Louis alone by railroads built largely by St. Louis capital, and with headquarters in St. Louis. It affected 73 per cent of all the lumber shipped into this city, amounting to 4,062,956,520 feet (using 1911 figures) and adds an arbitrary and unfair freight tax of approximately $1,000,000 a year upon St. Louis lumber.

"It also places St. Louis at a serious disadvantage in competing with Memphis, Cairo, Chicago, etc., as no advance was made by these St. Louis roads to the other cities.

"The league entered this case as intervening petitioners some time after the Lumbermen's Exchange had instituted proceedings, and took a casual interest in the proceedings of the case.

"The Business Men's League, in my opinion, has a very competent traffic department which is aiding the city's progress. As to the dominance of the railroads in the league's affairs I am not well informed, yet I am inclined to the belief that the influence exerted by the railroad interests in the league's affairs is prejudicial to the best interests of the receivers and shippers of freight of St. Louis."

It is complained also that the league took no steps to protect the interests of St. Louis in the important rate case known as the "Mississippi Rate case," decided a few weeks ago by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The complaint in this case was brought by the State of Iowa in behalf of the upper Mississippi River crossings. Intervening petitions were filed by Keokuk, Fort Madison, Muscatine, Davenport and Dubuque, but none by St. Louis, although the attack was made directly against it, inasmuch as the upper Mississippi River towns sought to decrease the rate advantage St. Louis has had over them for years.

One of the specific allegations was that the rates were discriminatory against the upper Mississippi River crossings, on the west side of the river, because they were required to pay a bridge arbitrary on inbound traffic from the East, while the lower crossings, St. Louis, Louisiana and Hannibal, paid no such arbitrary, either on inbound traffic from the east or outbound traffic to the west, and at the same time had the advantage of the same distributing rates to the west that applied from the upper crossings.

It was alleged that St. Louis had an advantage of 9 cents over the upper crossings on first-class freight, 8 cents on second class, 7 cents on third class, 6 cents on fourth class, 5 cents on fifth class and 4 cents on sixth class.

St. Louis' Indifference.

The result of the indifference of St. Louis in this important contest was that the Interstate Commerce Commission reduced the rates to the upper Mississippi River crossings so that St. Louis was left with an advantage of but 2 cents on first and second class rates and 1 cent on all other classes.

The Interstate Commerce Commission regarded this as a most important case. It said in its opinion:

"From the statement of the issues it will be seen that these cases bring before us questions of the first importance. This is true not only because of the large traffic moving under the present rate adjustment, but because the adjustments have been in effect for many years and any change in them at this time will necessarily be followed by more or less serious disturbances in traffic and commercial conditions in that territory."

Complaint is also made that the league has taken no steps to get an adjustment of rates to the Southeastern territory—Alabama, Georgia and Florida. Rates into that territory, which naturally belongs to St. Louis, are said to be so much more favorable to Eastern cities that St. Louis is greatly handicapped in competing with them. These conditions have been known for years. No definite action has been taken by the league in this matter, other than that the traffic bureau has been authorized to file an intervening petition at Atlanta, in November, in a rate hearing instituted by Eastern cities. This action was taken at the request of the shoe manufacturers of St. Louis, who have complained that the rates to that territory discriminate against St. Louis.

Cotton Exchange Case.

The St. Louis Cotton Exchange recently filed complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission that rates on cotton from Oklahoma points to St. Louis were unreasonable and prejudicial to the interests of the city. It was alleged that the rates were so made as to send the cotton shipments through the Rock Island gateway to the East, or to Galveston to be reshipped by water to Eastern cities or to Europe.

The discriminatory rates, cotton factors say, have militated against St. Louis as a cotton market to such an extent that, while 40 years ago, when river transportation was a factor in rate making, St. Louis had forty or fifty large cotton houses, it now has less than half a dozen. It was the discussion of these rate at a league conference, that brought up the charge that the league had not taken effective steps to protect St. Louis interests in the matter of transportation charges.

The Board of Managers of the traffic bureau of the Business Men's League is said to be controlled principally by Murray Carleton, its chairman, and George W. Simmons, vice-president of the Simmons Hardware Co.

Carleton is chairman of the Board of Directors of the Carleton-Ferguson Dry Goods Co. He is also, and has been for years, a director of the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railway, which is one of the carriers charged by both the Cotton and Lumber exchanges with discriminating against St. Louis in its rates.

Carleton is also a director of the St. Louis Transfer Co., which is controlled, if not largely owned, by the Terminal Railroad Association. He is also a director in the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., fiscal agent for the Terminal, and a director in the United Railways and Laclede Gas Light companies.

Simmons has no direct connection with a railroad corporation in the capacity of director. The influence of the Simmons Hardware Co. has been on the side of the railroads in recent rate controversies, particularly in their demand for higher rates.

The stockholdings of the Simmons interests in the Missouri Pacific Railroad were of such importance that Samuel F. Pryor, a few years ago, was elected a director of that system to represent those interests. At the time of his election Pryor was one of the vice-presidents of the Simmons Hardware Co. Later he severed his connection with the Simmons company as vice-president, to become president of the St. Louis Car Wheel Co.

The members of the Board of Managers besides Carleton and Simmons, are Philip B. Fouke of Funsten Bros. Commission Co., George A. Roth, wholesale grocer, and Joseph H. Roblee, vice-president of the Brown Shoe Co. These members are said by the complaining business men to have no railroad connections, but have not, on the other hand, it is said, asserted their influence in the Board of Managers.

GEO. W. SIMMONS DEFENDS BUREAU

Member Declares It Is Most Efficient in the Country.

George W. Simmons, member of the Board of Managers of the Traffic Bureau, discussing the complaints with a reporter, said:

"The Traffic Bureau of the Business Men's League, under the efficient direction of P. W. Coyle and A. F. Versen, has been assiduous in the protection of the interests of St. Louis both in railroad rates and service. It has done more good for St. Louis than any one other agency. It is the best organized and the most efficient traffic bureau in the United States.

"The Traffic Bureau has been getting results, and doing no shouting about it. There has never been a rate case affecting the interests of St. Louis in which the bureau has not been right on the job. It is continually investigating rates to determine whether they are equitable to St. Louis. It is impossible for the bureau to discover all rates that may not be fair to this city. Shippers have a standing invitation, when they find any rates prejudicial to their interests to refer the matter to the Traffic Bureau for adjustment. All such cases are taken up and pushed aggressively.

"Where it has been impossible to get satisfactory rate adjustments, the Traffic Bureau has been successful in getting fast package car service, which, in some respects is more important than rates. St. Louis has the best package car service in the United States. It has almost the equivalent of express service at freight rates, which is a most important factor in the development of the business of the city. Quick delivery is a most important element in modern merchandising.

"Shipments will move from St. Louis to New York in the East in three days, and to Denver in the West, St. Paul in the North and New Orleans in the South, as shewn in the package car service book issued by the League to its members.

"As to the Kansas rate case, and the Upper Mississippi River crossings cases, the bureau was active in both. The interests of St. Louis were guarded in each instance by the bureau, but for details of our activities in these cases I must refer you to Mr. Coyle or Mr. Versen."

Coyle explained that the Traffic Bureau filed no petition in the Kansas rate case because it was directed against Kansas City merchants, who were customers of St. Louis. Diplomacy was necessary in this situation, they said, to protect the interests of St. Louis merchants who sold goods to the Kansas City merchants. The rate experts of the Traffic Bureau had many conferences with the experts of the Kansas Railroad Commission, they said, and furnished them many facts upon which to prosecute their case. At all times the bureau was ready to step out into the open in defense of St. Louis, if it should have become necessary, they said.

Watched Iowa Rate Case.

The Iowa rate case presented similar conditions, they said. It was instituted by Iowa merchants, seeking cheaper rates from the East. The Iowa merchants were also customers of St. Louis, and St. Louis, Coyle explained, could not oppose them in their demand for cheaper rates, without creating a prejudice against this city. The case was watched closely to see that no injustice was done to St. Louis, they said, and when the rates were reduced to the Iowa points notice was served that they must also be reduced to St. Louis.

Simmons said that "while the league intervened in the Burnham-Hanna-Munger case and did its best to prevent breaking down the Mississippi River as a basing point for rates, it did say to the Interstate Commerce Commission that if they saw fit to break down the Mississippi River as a basing point, they should also break down the Missouri River as a basing point. The commission's final order was based upon his suggestion and resulted in securing for St. Louis an added advantage into Colorado and Utah territory, in which Kansas City had previously held the advantage. As we have realized that the Interstate Commerce Commission is plainly working on the principle of making equitable adjustments, regardless of the old-time basing points, we are watching these matters closely and contending for the readjustments which, in each case, will be to the best interests of St. Louis.

"The Traffic Bureau of the Business Men's League filed an intervening petition in the Lumbermen's case and rendered them all possible assistance," Simmons said, regarding the case of the Lumbermen's Exchange. "In that case the principle of the same rate to St. Louis and East St. Louis as one industrial zone, for which we have been contending, was established by the commission, but the failure of the commission to advance the rates from Arkansas points through Cairo at the time they were advanced through St. Louis zone gave some advantage to local dealers in Cairo over those in this industrial district. We protested but the Interstate Commerce Commission ruled against us.

"Take now the Cotton Exchange case. We knew nothing of that until it was filed. Although the Business Men's League has but two members from the cotton merchants, as soon as we heard of the case Commissioner Coyle went to the Cotton Exchange and tendered the services of the bureau, which were gladly accepted. No organization or individual in St. Louis was ever asked for aid that it was not freely and efficiently given. And we have been so active then when our aid was not sought we voluntarily tendered it.

Southeastern Rates an Issue.

"As to the Southeastern rates, they have been an issue for 25 years. We have not been able to get a satisfactory adjustment, but we have succeeded in establishing package car service into that territory, which, in spite of rates, has made it St. Louis territory. Water competition has a decided effect on railroad rates from Eastern cities to the Southeastern territory, and it is difficult under those conditions to get an entirely satisfactory adjustment to St. Louis. But we have done the next best thing in getting a service which enables St. Louis to deliver goods in that territory quicker than the Eastern cities, and will continue to fight for better rates, too.

"We have not tried to attract public attention to the activities of the Traffic Bureau. The criticisms in these specific cases must have been made by persons not familiar with the work of the organization. Perhaps we have not advertised the work of the bureau as widely as it should have been done."

CALEB POWERS IN CLASS ROOM HEARS SELF DENOUNCED

Professor in Law School Unwittingly Refers to Goebel Killing in Lecture.

KENTUCKIAN IS CALM

When Others Grow Indignant, Powers Tells Teacher He Is Not to Blame.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.—There is at least one lecture on English law that Dr. Holmes Conrad, professor at Georgetown University, will be careful about delivering again.

The lecture has to do with punishment by mutilation of murderers, inaugurated by William the Conqueror, and it carries with it an excoriation of the modern hysteria which makes heroes of criminals and rewards them. Dr. Conrad delivered that lecture last night.

After a general condemnation of political awards, which, he said, hysterical people showered on men who had violated every trust, and had even committed murder, he asked:

"Why, who was that man in Kentucky who murdered another—a Governor, I believe—and who, after serving a prison sentence, was pardoned and elected to Congress?"

There was a restless movement in the class room, vague murmurings broke out and Dr. Conrad called out sharply for order. Then from one of the front rows a slight, brown-haired man stood up. His face was white and his fingers twitched against his coat.

"I was that man," he said in a listless monotone. "I was not guilty." Then, as placidly as he had arisen, he sat down again, head erect and eyes fixed straight before him.

The man was Caleb Powers, Representative from the Eleventh District of Kentucky, who was convicted of having murdered Gov. William Goebel of Kentucky, a Democratic contestant for the governorship, and who served eight years in prison. He was pardoned and later elected to Congress.

Dr. Conrad lost his self-possession entirely. He stammered vague apologies and then, as the murmur in the class threatened to become an indignant outburst, he hurriedly ended his lecture and walked straight to where Powers, immovable and calm, was sitting.

Dr. Conrad apologized earnestly while Powers, who face had a whimsical smile, listened in silence. When the professor had finished, Powers stretched his hands in front of him.

"I am reminded of it so often," he said softly; "you are not to blame," and, shaking off the students who crowded about to express their sympathy, he stalked out. Powers is a student in the post-graduate class at the university law school.

PATROLMAN LEARNED TO KEEP AWAKE ON RIVER

Pulling Oars 26 Hours at a Stretch Helped Man on Probation Make Good Record.

The Weekly Police Journal yesterday scooped all the daily papers by publishing interesting details of the record of Andrew Koehn, a probationary patrolman, who was in the navy 11 years. Editor Espy of the Journal thought so well of the story that he put it on the first page and sprinkled it with emphasizing italics.

Koehn, the article says, journeyed alone last summer in a rowboat from the headwaters of the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico in 45 days and 20 hours. He had a 10-foot galvanized steel flatboat, 45 inches beam and 14 inches deep, and made the voyage between June 16 and July 31. He remained at the oars 26 hours at one stretch. He thus acquired an ability to keep awake which will be valuable to him as a policeman. He joined the force Sept. 22, and in his first month made one of the highest marks on record for a probationary, 96.15 per cent.

News and Features of the POULTRY WORLD

EDITED BY T. W. ORCUTT

Former Secretary St. Louis Poultry Association.

INDIAN RUNNER DUCKS ARE FINE BACK YARD FOWL

Hardy, Easily Raised Birds That Need Little Special Care and Lay Many Eggs.

On account of their wonderful egg-laying qualities, the Indian Runner duck often is referred to as "the leghorn of the duck family."

A farmer can help a flock of them at very little expense, and they will return a handsome profit. They do not wander or follow a stream like other ducks. For the man in a village or city who has a small plot of land, a small flock of Indian Runner ducks will help reduce the high cost of living by furnishing fresh eggs and meat for the family, with no great amount of labor in taking care of them.

A packing case is all that is necessary, for them to sleep in (no roosts or furnishings), and a two-foot fence will confine them to their quarters. An Indian Runner duck egg is far superior to a hen's egg for eating or baking. In fact, two Runner eggs are equal to three hen's eggs. They are not strong or "fishy" like most duck eggs.

As a table fowl the ducks are unsurpassed. The flesh is very tender and has a flavor that appeals to almost any man's taste. As an exhibition bird for the fancier, they are a study of beautiful shades and a graceful carriage.

Indian Runner eggs as a rule are very fertile and will hatch extra well. The young ducks are very hardy and vigorous and if properly taken care of will mature in eight to 10 weeks and will begin to lay when a hen is used, but an incubator is best if a large number of ducklings is sought. The ducklings can be cared for in a brooder with very little trouble. After the eggs have been in incubation 20 days sprinkle them with water warmed to 103 degrees daily until they hatch, which will be on the twenty-sixth to the twenty-eighth day.

Do not feed the ducklings from 36 to 48 hours after they are hatched. Their first feed should consist of stale bread moistened with milk and squeezed as dry as possible with the hands. This should be fed five times daily until they are 10 days old. Then feed a mash five times daily until they are six weeks old, and then reduce to three times daily. Care should be taken in changing the feed from the bread to mash. This should be done gradually to avoid sickness among the ducklings.

The following is the composition of a mash that has been fed successfully: Four parts wheat bran, two parts corn meal, one part middlings, one part ground alfalfa or fine cut clover, one part of fine beef scrap and one part sand. Mix together dry and moisten with water until it becomes a sticky mass. Give them tepid water for the first three weeks and arrange the vessels so that they can get only their heads into them to a depth that will allow them to rinse their nostrils. Do not allow them to get their bodies wet during the first three weeks.

Put the coop or brooder on sod in the shade and keep them in a small yard until they are used to their new quarters, and then give them a larger yard or a free range. Keep a small pile of sand, some fine charcoal and fine oyster shell so they can get it at all times and disease or sickness will never be known in the flock.

The Indian Runner duck, if kept in clean quarters, makes an ideal fowl for the small back yard or farm. They will lay from 200 to 300 large white eggs a year, are easily raised and are free from lice, mites, roop and other diseases.

The American Poultry Association has adopted the fawn and white for the standard color in Indian Runner ducks.

Champion Barred Plymouth Rock Cockerel

Victor, a Missouri-bred barred Plymouth Rock cockerel owned by Judge W. W. Henderson of Bridgeton, Mo., was winner of the sweepstakes for males of this breed at the Chicago show in 1912. Experts declare that Victor is one of the grandest birds of this variety ever shown and entirely worthy of the high honors that go with the Chicago award.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED.

Buff Orpington Club.

I am a breeder of single comb buff Orpingtons and intend to exhibit this fall. Is it necessary for me to be a member of the club in order to compete for club prizes? If so, whom should I apply to for membership.—D. H. B., Troy, Tenn.

It is necessary for you to be a member of a specialty club to compete for the prizes it offers. Write to M. S. Brady, Richards, Mo., secretary of the National S. C. Buff Orpington Club, who will receive your application for membership.

Feeding Cabbage.

I understand that cabbage is a good green feed for winter. How can it be kept and how should it be fed?—Mrs. P. E. H., Jonesboro, Ark.

Cabbage makes a very good green feed for winter. It should be hung in a good cellar by the root or buried in the ground about two feet deep with the root up. For feeding the head should be suspended on a wire from the ceiling of the chicken house so that it will be two feet above the floor or at such height that will force the birds to jump to get it.

Caruncles.

I intend to buy some turkeys and in a description the caruncles are referred to. Can you tell me what the caruncles are?—Mrs. N. Denison, Tex.

Caruncles are the fleshy protuberances on the neck of the male turkey.

Health of the Flock.

What is the best way to tell if a small flock of chickens are healthy? I have had trouble with my chickens and lost quite a few. What I have left seem to be healthy and I want to keep them so.—Experiment, St. Louis.

The condition of the droppings furnishes the best indication of the hens' health. They should be of sufficient consistency to hold their shape, but should not be too solid. In color they should be dark running to grayish white. If the droppings are soft and of a yellowish or brownish color, it indicates too much carbohydrates or lack of meat. If on the other hand, the droppings are watery and dark, with splashes of mucus, it indicates too much meat. A greenish, watery dropping usually indicates unsanitary conditions, either in surroundings, feed or water.

Large Combs.

My cockerels seem to have larger combs than the parent stock. They are white Leghorns hatched in May and at this time their combs are almost twice as large as they should be. Can you tell why?—B. B. H., Fayetteville, Ark.

Close hot quarters and too much beef scrap or meat will increase the size of the combs. Keep your cockerels in cool quarters (an open-front house) and cut down the meat in the feed and you will not be troubled with large combs.

Breeding.

I have some very fine white Wyandottes. When is the best time to start to breed them? This year I started in April and the young ones did not seem to get the size.—W. F. K., Tupelo, Miss.

To increase the size of your birds and have them mature in September, the breeding pen should be mated in December and the hatching commenced as soon after as you get the eggs. Early hatched chicks are larger and get a better growth than the late ones.

Crate Fattening.

What is the best way to fatten chickens? That is, to get weight on them quickly? Would you feed them all they will eat and keep them in a yard or is it best to coop them up and feed them?—R. T. H., St. Louis.

What is termed crate fattening is the best way to fatten fowls quickly. A few fowls are confined in a crate and fed from a trough. A crate six feet long, 18 inches high and 20 inches wide is large enough for a dozen birds. Little space for movement of birds is desirable, for the less exercise a bird obtains the more readily it fattens. The top, back and ends of the crates should be solid if they are to be placed out of doors. If they are to be kept inside they may be built of lath or slats. The crates should be kept dark until just before feeding, when light should be admitted to allow the birds to see to eat. They should be fed three times a day and be allowed to eat for a half hour at a time when all uneaten food should be removed and the crates darkened.

Dust Bath.

Is it necessary to put anything in the dust to kill lice? What size dust box is best for 20 chickens?—Mrs. H. G. K., St. Louis.

When hens are badly infected, Persian insect powder or any lice powder may be added to the road dust or hard coal ashes. A tight box three feet wide and 3 feet long and 1 foot deep makes a good receptacle for the dust.

Roop.

My chickens make a noise when they breathe and their eyes are watery. Some of them droop and seem to have no life in them. What shall I do for them?—H. K., Belleville, Ill.

Your birds have the roop, which is caused by damp quarters and drafts. Separate the affected birds and give them any of an advertised roup cures. Clean and disinfect their quarters and keep them dry and warm.

Ration for Winter Layers.

I have about 50 pullets (Buff Plymouth Rocks) that I want to keep for winter eggs; they are in good condition and some of them have started to lay. What would you suggest in the way of grain and dry mash for feed during the winter? Interested Reader, Webster Groves, Mo.

For winter layers the following ration, fed in litter twice a day, is very good: Crackd corn 300 pounds, oats 120 pounds, wheat 100 pounds, buckwheat 30 pounds, sunflower seed 30 pounds, coarse beef scrap 20 pounds. Substitute whole corn on cold evenings two or three times a week.

The following dry mash should be kept before the birds in box hoppers all of the time: Wheat bran 100 pounds, middlings 75 pounds, ground alfalfa 100 pounds and fine beef scrap 25 pounds. The above rations, with plenty of green feed, consisting of sprouted oats, cabbage and cut clover fed in the middle of the day should produce the maximum of eggs.

Pale Legs.

Is there any way to prevent the legs of Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes from getting pale? I notice that all yellow-shanked varieties have a tendency to get pale after the first year. J. E. W., St. Louis.

There is no natural way known to prevent the legs of the yellow-shanked varieties from turning pale as the birds grow older. A good, clean range will keep the color in the legs longer than anything else. Breeders have the same trouble with the bay or red eyes. A young bird will have bright bay eyes the first year and after that they will get pale and sometimes turn gray. Some attribute pale legs to the excessive use of slack lime on dropping boards.

Campines.

I am interested in campines and would like to know who won first prize on silver campine cockerel at the Boston show last January. D. E. G., Montgomery City, Mo.

George E. Noeth won first prize in all classes except golden hen and golden pen.

Pigeon Fanciers Join Pet and Poultry Show

Entry of More Than 800 Birds Is Expected for Exhibit Thanksgiving Week.

The St. Louis Pigeon Fanciers' Society, which will hold its annual show in connection with that of the St. Louis Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association, Nov. 24-29, at 1015-19 Washington avenue, has its premium list ready for distribution. J. H. Richts, 1214 North Market street, is president of the "Pigeon Club," as it is familiarly called, and John Schroer, 1807 Benton, is secretary.

The officials expect an entry of 800 fine pigeons. In former years they have had entries from Canada, Texas and California, and many from the East. Because of the large scale upon which the show will be given this year, the officers expect even larger entries.

Among the pigeons that will be shown are English pouters, English carriers, dragoons, magpies, pigmy pouters, fantails in various colors, Jacobins, barbs, tumblers, satinettes, hen pigeons, turbits, owls, English and Russian trumpeters, white and colored homers, swallows and archangels. Several owls will be shown.

The "Pigeon Club" held a lawn show several weeks ago as a preparation for the big show. In that show, one afternoon, 200 birds were entered.

Recovered From Lung Trouble—Now Insured

Insurance companies will not accept any one affected with Lung Trouble. When you know a man who has been afflicted and who later has been insured, such action means that the policy-holder must be in a very good state of health. Cases have been reported when Lung Sufferers, after taking Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, have successfully passed the medical test of insurance companies. Read this case:

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Gentlemen: About a year and a half ago I noticed that my health was rapidly failing. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak; having, in fact, absolutely no ambition whatever. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of Lung Trouble. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have just been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. A very good drinking fountain is made by melting the top from a tin can, then punch holes in the sides of this can near the open top, with a nail. Now fill the can with water. Invert the shallow lid of a tin bucket, or a saucer, over it. Then turn the whole thing upside down. The water will pour out of the nail holes in the can until it rises in the lid to a point where it covers these nail holes, then it will cease flowing. When the chicks drink the water until it is low enough to uncover the nail holes it will flow again.

If straw or cheap hay is hard to get, many of our readers can gather and store plenty of dry leaves to serve as litter in the poultry house during the winter.

When making ready the houses for fall and winter layers, do not neglect the runs. Dress the land with airslaked lime or with wood ashes, and plow or spade deeply, stirring the soil well. Then sow rye, so that there will be abundant fresh, green growth when the birds are housed for the fall.

Milk, whole, or skimmed, sweet or clabbered, is good poultry food.

I can truthfully say that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is a very good medicine, not alone for kidney trouble, but also for weak and sore back, as well as for rheumatism.

About a year ago I became ill and unable to work, my trouble being a lame back. I read of your Swamp-Root in the newspaper and in an Almanac. Believing it would do me good, I went to my druggist, Mr. Skinner, and purchased a bottle. SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

DISPUTE OVER CURRENCY BILL KEEPS THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET IRREGULAR

Week's Range of Quotations Show a Slightly Lower Level.

LONDON TRADING QUIET

Foreign Speculation Adversely Influenced by Conditions in Mexico.

y Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly review oday, says:

"Whether the controversy over the anking and currency bill, and the fear f trouble if it passes, are actually dom-ant influences on financial sentiment s a question which Wall street would robably find it difficult to answer.

"There are several peculiar things bout the discussion of the banking bill, nd one of them is the difficulty of etting its critics to agree on what ind of trouble it would cause.

"Side by side, one of the critics will t forth the inevitable contraction of redit which the bill would cause; the ther, the resultant inevitable credit in-ation. The ordinary looker-on's bewil-erment increases when one bank presi-nt of high standing points out the nger of political control—even if ap-d to the national supervisory board one, and not to the regional reserve nks; whereupon another eminent bank esident proposes as a remedy a bill pplying political control to a Central oard and all its branches.

"Having heard the argument that the gional reserve banks might not use screetly their power to determine how any notes they should put out, even hen they had to keep a cash reserve ainst them, for redemption purposes, he public is all at once confronted ith the argument that the notes are overnment fiat money, issued without nit and without the maintenance of y reserve whatever.

Public Is Confused.

"The fiat money argument im-esses the bystander's imagination; t somehow it does not seem to orry him, and for this reason doubt-s is his dim recognition that the gument is based on a certain (per-ps unconscious) jugglery with rds.

Fiat money, as the Century Dic-nary defines it, is paper currency ued by a Government as money, t not based on coin or bullion; pa-r currency containing no promise pay coin and, therefore, not con-tible into coin.

Now the pending banking bill pro-s that, before any given amount notes shall issue a regional reserve k shall apply for them; that it l pledge with an agent of the ernment an equivalent amount of e commercial paper; that it shall at all times in its vaults lawful ey in the ratio of one-third of its standing circulation.

Only then is it possible for a note et into outside circulation, and bank must always be ready to it up in cash. In all these ts the machinery merely dupli-s the present national banking under which all bank notes are ted by the Government and issued banks by the Comptroller, but when an equivalent amount in ernment bonds is lodged by the k with the United States Treas-and when a redemption reserve ash has been established.

n what then is based the allega-of 'fiat money,' in the case of the law, as against the old? Un-tedly on the language of the ding bill, declaring the notes to be gations of the United States,' h the present national bank cur-y does not profess to be.

Inflation Not Likely.

he Government, to be sure, ld have no more power to in-se outstanding note circulation it has today—probably less, be-p an issue of Government bonds automatically increase bank under the present law.

he currency would be better in-of redemption by the banks e the cash reserve against them uch larger) than are the present note issues.

ut the notes are declared to be ations of the Government and nces to the banks; the reserve t up by the banks, not by the rnment; are not the notes, then, money?

is a pretty case for argument—n, indeed, becomes more inter-the more the actual facts of ote issue machinery are ignored. is an argument where either can ostensibly prove its case. n that is so, the real solution usually be found by some one applies to the problem the meth-of simple common sense.

ch a person, if familiar with the ry of the pending bill, would without much hesitation that its ments as to Government obli-ns and advances to the banks s senseless and superfluous and uly an authorization of fiat y, as if the British exchequer suddenly to declare that a Bank ngland note was a loan by the h Government to the bank. t he would also probably con-that, inasmuch as superfluous senseless declarations are a sh to legislation, those declara-should be stricken from the g bill—even if the process to hurt the feelings of that emi-economist in whose behalf they probably slipped in; our peri-ic Secretary of State.

ock prices closed the week at r sharp losses, compared with aturday's finals. Yesterday's t was firm."

ALL GRADES OF CATTLE CHEAPER ON LIBERAL RUN

High Quality Kinds Show Heavier Cut for the Week Than Minor Grades.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	22,000	28,655	34,570
Hogs	37,000	36,068	48,050
Sheep	15,000	10,611	18,697
Horses and Mules	4,000	3,640	2,822

Receipts during the week were very liberal. Especially was this true of the showing of beef steers. In fact, the supply of the latter was more than was needed to meet the demand. While there was a liberal volume of beeves on hand each day, prime quality was a comparatively scarce commodity, as not more than half a dozen loads of this kind were received. The market was very slow and dull each day and because of a liberal showing, packers took advantage of the slightest opening to hammer the market. They succeeded on nearly every occasion, practically all of the steers suffering losses and at the end of the week prices were 35@50c lower than the previous period and it was hard to place some of the showing at this decline.

The supply of butcher cattle was liberal but bulk of the offering was of medium to good grade as there was only a small showing of choice heifers and practically no strictly prime ones. With only a fair demand from outsiders, the trade lacked support all week and prices steadily declined from the start. Nearly all grades of heifers suffered and at the end of the week prices were generally 35@60c lower than the preceding period. Bulk of the heifers sold in a range of $6.75@8.00, with a few going above the latter figure.

Cows Are Lower, Too.

Strictly fancy cows, of which there was only a small showing, suffered a decline of 10@15c, a few selling at $7@7.25. Bulk of the fat cows, however, sold 35@50c lower, clearing mostly in a range of $5@6.

Canners and cutters were 15@25c under the previous week.

Bulls declined 15@25c, the worst decline being on the medium grade.

Vealers opened steady, but as the week aged losses of 25@50c developed. Best vealers brought early $10, but later on $9.50.

Demand for stockers and feeders was very narrow and a decline of 25@40c moved the big end of the showing. Feeders sold up to $7.60 and bulk of the stockers went at $5.50@6.50.

Receipts in the quarantine division were moderate and with the exception of one day the bulk of the showing came from canner territory. Texas and Oklahoma, however, contributed a much larger proportion of steers the past week than they did the preceding period. Steer trade was very unsatisfactory to the sellers during the week as there was a very light demand from both packers and order buyers. Prices showed declines of 15@20c generally. Fed steers from Texas brought $7.25@7.40, while Oklahoma grassers sold at $5@6.50. Fleshy cows and heifers lost 20@30c, grown canners and cutters 15@25c for the week. Yearlings and heretics sold strong throughout the period.

Hogs Gain a Quarter.

As the receipts of hogs were inclined to be rather light all week there was an improvement in the market to the extent of close to 25c and, strange to say, the mixed hogs of fair quality received the full benefit of the advance, and, in fact, showed just a little more gain than any other grade. Pigs and lights also were ready sale at the higher prices.

Monday the top was $8.05, but later in the week the top was up to $8.30 and the bulk of the good hogs went at $7.85@8.15. Butchers and shippers paid $8 and upwards for the good hogs of medium and heavy weight, and hogs weighing as much as 330 lbs. sold up close to the top of the market. Good hogs weighing more than 200 lbs. also were selling at top prices, but it was necessary that they weigh at least 200 lbs. to bring the highest prices.

Packers purchased a plain to good grade of mixed hogs at $7.50@8, while best lights weighing less than 165 lbs. sold at $7.50@7.90, fair grades $7.25@7.50, best pigs under 125 lbs. $7.25@7.50, fair to medium kinds $6.65@7, and poor grades $5.50@6.35. Rough throwout packers went largely at $7.50@7.65.

Sheep and Lambs Higher.

The week started in good shape and continued to improve so that by the end of the week both sheep and lambs were showing a good gain over the close of the previous period. Lambs showed a gain for the week of 40@50c, and sheep about 25c, which placed both on the highest basis they have been in a month or more. The receipts were only moderate each day, and as there was a strong demand the competition was keen.

Best fat lambs sold at $7.40@7.75, fair grades went at $6.65@7.15, poor kinds $6@6.50, and the culls and trashy offerings at $4.50@5.75. Buyers were not able to sort the lambs very closely on account of the sharp competition. Most of the good lambs sold at $7.35@7.50. Several times the number on sale were needed to meet the demand.

Most of the sheep went to the slaughterers at $4.50, but some of the best, the middle and latter part of the week, sold at $4.60@4.65. Choppers and good stockers went at $3.35@3.85, fair stockers $2.60@3.25, old cull sheep $2@2.50, and bucks $3.50@3.75.

There was a liberal run of horses on the market which insures that the usual winter trade is about to set in. Buyers increased in the same proportion to the horses and there was a very good trade all week. There was a good supply of buyers from the Eastern states and they were active in paying good prices. Southern states were especially well represented and these buyers were taking the toppy kinds of Southern horses at satisfactory prices. Any kind of a good work horse sold well.

The mule trade was on a good, steady basis, and if any change was noted it was an advance. There was a good trade on the good quality kinds of fat cotton mules ranging from 15 to 15 2-3 hands high, and prices on these were satisfactory. Any kinds of a good quality work mule met with a good sale.

KILLING FROST COVERS ENTIRE COTTON DISTRICT

Crop Depends Entirely Upon Matured Bolls Saved as They Open to Pickers.

A killing frost over almost the entire cotton belt has put an end to further fruition and the cotton crop is confined to cotton that has matured. The top crop is cut off and the shedding of such leaves as were left on the plant will hasten the opening of the developed but unopened bolls and expedite the gathering of the crop.

In some localities, both East and West of the Mississippi, there has been complaint that rains, following soon after the frost, have caused a softening and rotting of the bolls. This is not general.

From now on the ginning will be the surest guide to the size of the crop but that is likely to be deceptively large should fine, clear weather prevail, for the reason that the crop is made and picking should be easy.

From all accounts, the size of the present crop in bales will not be a certain guide to the actual production. In Texas the staple has been wasty all season, barring the small per centage produced on the irrigated lands, and since the rains the quantity of dirt and waste that has been baled with the cotton can only be calculated by the mills who buy the cotton.

Loss of 10 Per Cent From Dust.

In the storm year 10 per cent loss in weight from dust alone was not unusual when cotton was picked from the ground, to say nothing of the loss from damage after the cotton was ginned and baled. So much off, the spinnable production in the territory that has suffered through excessive rainfall and heavy winds is largely problematical and the loss is not easily estimated as the marketing of the crop likely be long drawn out. First hand prices in Texas are said to range from 5 cents to 14 cents a pound, so great is the difference in the quality, and real white cotton is altogether missing.

Buying in the Atlantic states where the grade is high is highly competitive and many Texas buyers have gone into those states seeking cotton they cannot get at home. While the grade is not as low as in Texas, other states west of the river have suffered and considerable complaint of grade and color is heard in Arkansas. Oklahoma is in about the same fix as Texas.

Prices have declined somewhat, and the lower grades are going begging. Many who bought them at apparently attractive figures are seeking an outlet that is hard to find. Undoubtedly, as in the "storm year," all low grades eventually will find users, but it will take time. In the meantime those engaged in buying for shipments, or who wish to hold cotton, find that the preponderance of low grades has had an effect on credits and borrowing the usual percentage of value is not easy and it is to be feared that this may cause some cotton to be crowded on the market prematurely.

Middling Price Creates Doubt.

The present level of prices (middling from 13⅝c to 14c) prevents speculators taking hold of the unsalable cotton with the same willingness that they evinced in the "storm year" when low, dusty cottons were selling at five cents a pound, with middling around 10c.

Southern spinners are said to be holding the price of yarns at a high level and are rigid in their attitude, chiefly because they are uncertain about the supply of the better grades of cotton which are absolutely necessary in the production of certain grades of yarns. Their attitude in regard to the price of yarns is met by an inclination on the part of buyers who claim inability to hold off.

The good trade seems brisk and cloths are salable at a stiff price, especially for nearby deliveries, but any extended deadlock between buyers and sellers is likely to work against the price.

There is some rumor of money stringency in England, but, so far, it does not seem to have hurt the trade much. Exports of cotton continue on a very liberal scale. Stocks of cotton abroad have slightly increased but not more than might be expected at this season.

The visible supply of American is about 400,000 bales less than at the same time last year, while the movement into sight is about 60,000 more. Oct. 24 the total visible supply of American was 2,910,796 bales compared with 3,301,918 a year ago, while the total insight was 3,811,265 bales against 3,750,808 a year ago. On the same date the total taking of American cotton by spinners was 1,942,820 compared with 1,813,375 last year.

In the spot markets the conditions are very much mixed. The demand for white cotton is out of all proportion to the general demand, if there is any general demand. Off-colored cottons do not sell as readily as might be wished. The trade is acquiring exaggerated ideas as to the quantity of the lower grades and is holding off. While quotations have not been revised to any great extent, large differences exist between grades in actual transactions. Prices are quotably lower than last week and buyers have the advantage.

Wheat futures reflected further buying the past week, and touched the highest point reached since the recent severe decline. Most of the demand, however, came from shorts and professionals, commission houses taking only a small interest in the advance.

Foreign news was the main force back of the buying and was based on reports of dry weather in India and the Argentine. Smaller receipts in the domestic Northwest and Canada also favored the upturn.

Crop Is a Wonder.

Argentine crop news was unfavorable Friday, but that was to be expected, as it was favorable Thursday. It has been good, then bad, every other day this week.

"It is the most marvelous of crops, for its condition completely changes over night. This has always been a peculiar feature of the Southern country's wheat crop.

Of course, Broomhall and the Chicago speculative crowd have nothing to do with the lightning-like changes in the Argentine news, even if traders do assert that it is manufactured in La Salle street and in Liverpool one day to be denied the next.

Aside from the manipulative Argentine reports there was not much to encourage bullishness after the recent 4½c advance.

The stock market was irregular and lower, and attention was called to the unusual pessimistic speeches of James J. Hill and Frank A. Vanderlip before the Bankers' Convention in Chicago Thursday.

There sems to be a sinister motive back of the continued attacks of these two financiers on Wilson's administration and currency reform policy

Instead of these important financiers doing what they can to brighten business sentiment, they are doing all in their power to darken it.

Weather was cold over the country, temperatures in Kansas, Nebraska and the Southwest reaching new low records for this season of the year.

This revived the reports that the short corn crop would force considerable feeding of wheat to stock, which experts figured earlier in the year at 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 bu.

From the statistical standpoint, however, there was not much bull ammunition in the week's news.

Primary receipts are lighter, but the trade is not positive that the movement will not increase later, when the farmers' fall work is completed. The cash trade was slightly less active than at the preceding session.

The technical position of the market has been weakened by the recent 4c rise and professionals are not inclined to follow the advance. The elimination of a rather extensive short interest also has decreased the demand from speculators.

The visible supply of wheat in Europe this week amounts to 79,716,000 bu, against 78,868,000 last week, showing an increase of 848,000 bu. Last week there was an increase of 1,004,000 bu, and last year an increase of 3,600,000 bu. when the total amounted to 85,200,000 bu.

Exports Are Large.

According to Bradstreet's the exports of flour from the United States during the past three weeks were 745,325 bbls, and of wheat 11,880,799 bu—equal to 15,234,761 bu. Exports from Canada for the same period were 282,190 bbls flour and 3,794,167 bu wheat—equal to 5,064,022 bu. Total for three weeks equals 20,298,783 bu.

Winnipeg Grain Exchange reported the visible supply of wheat in Canada, in detail, as follows:

	Bushels		Bushels
Ft. Will'm	10,635,000	Colling'd	28,000
		Vic. Harbor	943,000
Pt. Arthur		Depot Harbor	82,000
Midland	1,064,000	Duluth	633,000
Goderich	503,000	Buffalo	1,303,000
Pt. Colborne	482,000
Kingston	46,000	Total	17,081,000
Quebec	2,000	Last week	15,982,000
Montreal	1,435,000	Last year	14,229,000

Analysis of wheat movement in Canada shows that the Canadian crop is disappearing in the same remarkable manner that our own winter wheat crop this year passed out of sight. Up to Saturday Winnipeg has received 59,000,000 bu of new wheat, or almost one-third of the total crop. Last year in the same time receipts were 31,000,000, or an excess this season of 28,000,000 bu. At the same time the visible supply of wheat, including Canadian wheat at Duluth and Buffalo, is only 2,700,000 bu more than a year ago. Already 25,000,000 bu of the surplus receipts this season have been exported and otherwise passed out of commercial sight. With more than a third of the movable crop already passed through Winnipeg, the stock today at Fort William is only 10,000,000 bu.

Bradstreet's detailed showed:

Wheat, United States and west of the Rockies, decrease 338,000 bu; United States and east of the Rockies, decrease 650,000 bu; Canada, increase 1,542,000 bu; United States and Canada, increase 554,000 bu; afloat and in Europe, increase 900,000 bu. Total increase 1,454,000 bu. Corn, decrease 129,000 bu. Oats, increase 1,349,000 bu.

The following statement gives the French imports of wheat and flour for the past five seasons, from Aug. 1 to July 31, according to official returns: 1912 and 1913, 44,708,000 bu; 1911 and 1912, 26,272,000 bu; 1910 and 1911, 57,960,000 bu; 1909 and 1910, 4,240,000 bu; 1908 and 1909, nil.

Chicago grain stocks show: Wheat this week, 3,303,000 bu; last week, 3,782,000; last year, 5,733,000. Corn, 4,050,000 bu; last week, 4,329,000; last year, 1,277,000. Corn afloat last week, 100,000. Oats this week, 14,053,000; last week, 14,257,000; last year, 1,[illegible].

The domestic visible supply of wheat decreased 3,241,000 bu for the week, corn 277,000 bu; oats increased 84,000 bu.

The total visible supply of grain showed:

IGOE BILL WOULD GIVE U. S. CONTROL OF KEOKUK DAM

St. Louis Congressman Favors National Commission on Use of Natural Resources.

AROUSED BY HIGH CHARGE

Post-Dispatch Investigation Revealed Cheaper Power Is Not Being Furnished.

A national public service commission to administer the public domain and control the exploitation of water power sites, forests, fisheries and other natural resources, is the object of a bill to be introduced in the House of Representatives at this session by Congressman William L. Igoe of St. Louis.

That the sale of water power electricity by the Keokuk Dam Co. is made on a basis of bituminous coal cost under a charter by Congress granting the free use of the Mississippi River, as revealed by the Post-Dispatch, has moved Congressman Igoe to propose a national commission patterned after the numerous State public utility commissions, as a means of checking abuses under Government grants.

Post-Dispatch Gave Idea for Bill.

An investigation of the Keokuk dam project by the Post-Dispatch, showing that promises of cheaper current for light, power and heat have not been kept by the promoters, and that a policy of exacting all the traffic would bear had been adopted, directed the attention of Congressman Igoe to the subject, he says.

"I have studied the situation, and am convinced that Congress has power under the commerce clause of the Constitution to regulate the use of the public domain wherever it has power to grant the use, just as it regulates railroad rates and service," said Igoe to a reporter yesterday. "I believe the national Government is the only authority that can regulate such a business as the Keokuk dam, using a navigable river to carry on an interstate business, and I believe the time has come when Congress must assume control over this and other corporations exploiting the public domain, to exact fair charges and proper service to the public.

Anti-Conservation Fight Bitter.

"In the short time I have been in Congress I have been impressed almost daily by the bitterness of contention between the champions of conservation and those who assume a contrary attitude, in debating governmental policies affecting forest reserves, water power sites and so forth. When I see the development of power dams on the huge scale of the Keokuk plant, costing, I am told, more than $26,000,000, it seems to me that it is time the proper authorities assumed such control as they may be entitled to exercise over the management of such enterprises.

"I think it is perfectly natural that the Government should perform this duty through some agency, and because the Interstate Commerce Commission now appears to be burdened with as much work as it can reasonably look after, it is my idea that a second commission, created on the same authority, should supervise the broad field of public service outside of transportation.

Cites Commerce Board's Success.

"I see nothing revolutionary in this proposal. It is the natural result of the development of these new fields on the great scale we witness today. There was an outcry against the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to control transportation, but the railroad men and others who foresaw the wrecking of business and the destruction of the Government in this undertaking, have lived to witness a practical, sane and salutary operation of this governmental agency, and today there is no talk of abolishing it to preserve the Government or to enable business to pursue its course.

"The particular need of regulation now uppermost in the minds of the St. Louis public grows out of the practices of the Keokuk dam company. If this company obtained use of the rapids of the Mississippi at Keokuk, with the understanding, implied or expressed, that it would in return give the public the benefit of cheaper power, it should be compelled to do so. There is no doubt that water power generation is far cheaper than production by steam power through the use of soft coal, and the public is entitled to share in this economy when it is accomplished by the use of the public domain.

Says Consumer Is Exploited.

"The Keokuk corporation, by its practices, furnishes a striking instance of the need of governmental control and regulation of rates and earnings. Without such control the progress of science and the development of natural resources would not better the condition of the great mass of consumers. The savings thus accomplished would go into the pockets of exploiters who would be capitalizing the public's property against the public and making the public pay handsomely for the use of what it really owns."

Igoe will consult with other members of Congress, and administrative officials at Washington, in the preparation of his bill. It is his intention, he says, to introduce it at this session of Congress, although it cannot possibly get consideration before the next session, which will convene in December.

It is Igoe's theory that a commission with ample power should be created by an act of Congress, and a code of laws covering every phase of conservation should be enacted by Congress with the advice of the commission as rapidly as the necessity arises.

Thinks U. S. Rights Ample.

When told that Congressman Bartholdt had promised t. start an investigation in Washington, but had raised the question of the Government's right to regulate the Keokuk Dam Co. when the Govern[illegible] it has no property rights in the river, but only the right to control navigation, Igoe said:

"As I see it, it makes no difference what the nature of the Government's control may be. If the Government has the right to permit or withhold the use of navigable rivers, it may stipulate the terms of such use, and I have no doubt may include in these terms the limitation of earnings and charges."

Igoe is a lawyer and familiar with public utility regulation in the State. He was a member for two terms of the House of Delegates. He championed the bill of the St. Louis Public Service Commission in 1911, limiting the charges of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. to 9½ cents a kilowatt hour. His analysis of the company's earning value and operating expense aided materially in winning a fight over the bill in the House.

Igoe resigned from the House of Delegates last February, after being elected Democratic Congressman from the Eleventh District. He will return to Washington next week and present his bill as soon as he can decide the details.

U. S. TO CONTINUE USE OF TYPHOID SERUM IN ARMY

War Department Finds Vaccine Does Not Tend to Make Men Liable to Tuberculosis.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Announcement was made today that the innoculation of enlisted men in the United States Army with typhoid vaccine would continue in spite of the fact that recent reports of the armies of France and England showed that men so innoculated were more susceptible to tuberculosis than those who have not been innoculated.

This report from abroad aroused the War Department officials in Washington and an investigation, based on official records from army posts, was begun. This has convinced the United States authorities that whatever the experience with the vaccine has been in France and England, it has proved most efficacious in this country.

Boston Hygiene Director Thinks Fresh Air Will Cure Most Cases.

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—Adenoids will heal themselves in four cases out of five if the child suffering from them is given plenty of outdoor air, according to Dr. T. F. Harrington, director of school hygiene in Boston. In addressing a teachers' association last night Dr. Harrington said:

"The knife is necessary only when there is a discharge from the ear and doing injury to the hearing or when the blood supply is cut off from the brain and feeble-mindedness, flat chests and glandular trouble seem imminent.

"The air of the classroom should be down to 55 degrees and the children should be allowed to wear their wraps when they care to."

Was Leo M. Frank Convicted Because He Was a Jew?

Co-Religionists, Asserting So, Rush to His Defense

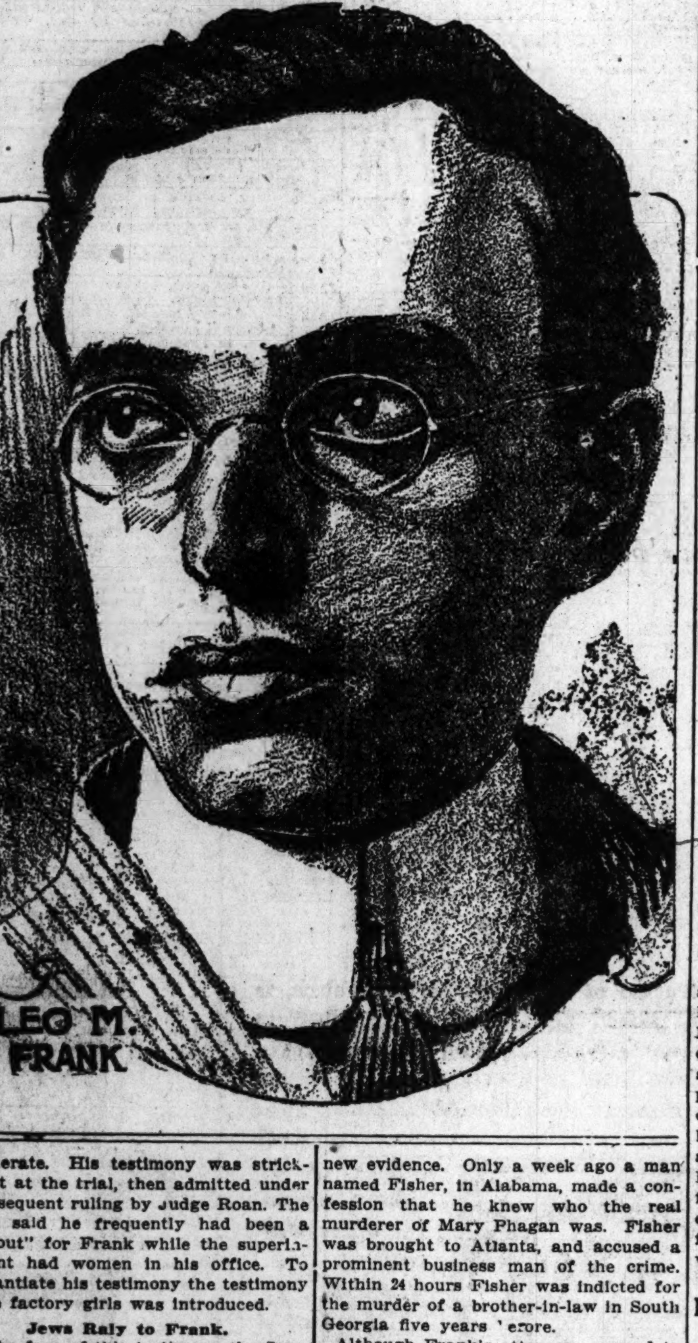
Case Is to Be Appealed to Supreme Court

Trial Judge in Denying Rehearing of Case Declares He Is Not Convinced That Prisoner Is Guilty of Murder.

Man Under Death Sentence, Told of Decision, Says: "I Am Prepared for Anything; I Am Not Guilty."

Witneses Declared Condemned Man Was Degenerate and Pursued Young Girls Employed in Factory.

Conviction Brought About by Testimony of Negro, Who Said Superintendent Met Women in Office.



LEO M. FRANK.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 1.—Leo M. Frank, sentenced to hang for the murder of Mary Phagan, 14 years old, and whose application for a new trial was denied by Judge L. S. Roan yesterday, is preapring to appeal his case to the Supreme Court. His lawyers, and his friends among the Jews who supplied the money for his defense, declare the case will be taken to the United States Supreme Court if possible and if necessary to free him.

When Frank heard Judge Roan's decision, denying him a new trial, he said:

"I am now prepared for anything. I have said before that I am not guilty, that I know nothing of the murder nor of the murderers."

In announcing the decision the Court said:

"I have heard all the evidence in this case, and, taking it all together, I am not thoroughly convinced either as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. The jury having passed upon this case, and having been convinced by the evidence of his guilt, however, I do not feel disposed to overturn its verdict. I consider it my duty to overrule the motion."

Persecution Is Charged.

The Jews of Atlanta have freely charged that Frank was persecuted by public opinion as bitterly as was Mendel Beiliss, the Russian Jew who is now on trial in Kiev on a charge of "ritual murder." Thousands of Gentiles hold to the same opinion.

This was one of the specific counts upon which a motion for a new trial was predicated. The lawyers for the defendant made it the crux of their pleas, declaring that the jury that convicted Frank was subjected to a reign of terror and that it declared the defendant guilty in spite of evidence to the contrary because its members feared that they would be mobbed and, perhaps, lynched if they set him free.

All America was surprised when the announcement was made in Atlanta a few weeks ago that Frank, notwithstanding that a sentence of death was hanging over him, had been re-elected head of the local lodge of B'nai B'rith, the powerful Jewish philanthropic organization.

From the moment of Frank's arrest in April to the present time the Jews of Atlanta have stood by him. They believed his prosecution and conviction was due to race prejudice.

This attitude was based upon the fact that he was sentenced purely upon circumstantial evidence, and upon the statement of a negro with a long police record, who testified that he aided Frank in hiding the girl's body in the asement of the National pencil fac- ory. Frank's own plant, where it was found by the negro night watchman.

Frank has always stood high in the community with both Jews and Gentiles. Not a smirch on his character ever was brought to light until the trial, when witnesses testified to certain of his actions a year before.

When the trial opened Frank's co-religionists stood stanchly by. As the fabric of incriminating evidence against Frank began to be woven, the popular ry became bitterer. Time and again owdies in the street were arrested for rguing over the subject.

But the climax came when "Jim" onley, negro sweeper at the factory as put on the stand and said he as- ted in disposing of the body at ank's request. Upon cross-examina- n the negro was caught in lie after with one exception—he stuck to his ry of carrying the body down the ator from one of the upper floors ne basement.

o also testified that Frank was degenerate. His testimony was stricken out at the trial, then admitted under a subsequent ruling by Judge Roan. The negro said he frequently had been a "lookout" for Frank while the superintendent had women in his office. To substantiate his testimony the testimony of the factory girls was introduced.

Jews Rally to Frank.

In the face of this testimony the Jews rallied to Frank more strongly than ever. They did not defend him simply because he was a Jew, but because they thought he was innocent and was being persecuted because of his creed.

The majority of the Jews of Atlanta are wealthy, well educated, and stand high in the community.

On the other hand, most of those who have been crying "hang the Jew," have been Gentiles of the lower order. Among the better class of Gentiles in Atlanta, opinion against Frank is divided. Some, after carefully reading the evidence, think Frank guilty. Again, others believe him innocent.

During the progress of the trial, those who packed the courtroom were mainly the morbidly curious of the lower class, big business and professional men of the city kept away—and read the newspapers.

Consequently, upon every winning point which the prosecution made, the courtroom rang with cheers time and again, while the points gained by the defense were either received in stony silence or with suppressed hisses. This was cited as one of the reasons for a new trial.

Much Money Spent in Trial.

Every possible effort has been exerted in Frank's behalf. Money has been freely spent. Two of the highest priced lawyers in the South were employed for him. Yet Frank himself received only $150 a month.

During the course of the trial character witnesses in his behalf were brought from New York and all over the country at enormous expense.

Since the trial opened the American Jewish Review, a monthly, formerly published in Oklahoma, was transferred to Atlanta, and the first issue, coming out after the trial, contained a long article against capital punishment, written by a prominent Rabbi of the North.

While the populace generally has been against Frank on general principles, it might be said that certain tactics employed by the defense have brought forth bitter criticism from those of the upper classes as well.

It was announced before the trial, and made public in the papers, that the defense had secured a new witness, a school teacher named Mincey. Mincey told reporters that on the day of the crime the negro Conley had told him that he (the negro) had just killed a person. Mincey was brought to the city, but was not placed on the stand. The public wondered why, if Mincey knew so much, he was not placed on the stand. Therefore, it was presumed that he was secured to create public opinion in Frank's favor before the jury was drawn.

Again the solicitor accused Frank's attorneys of withholding information of new evidence. Only a week ago a man named Fisher, in Alabama, made a confession that he knew who the real murderer of Mary Phagan was. Fisher was brought to Atlanta, and accused a prominent business man of the crime. Within 24 hours Fisher was indicted for the murder of a brother-in-law in South Georgia five years before.

Although Frank's attorneys seemed to give little credence to Fisher's story, yet the public blamed them, asserting that it was a "play.

As a consequence of the Mincey affair and the Fisher statement, prejudice against the Jews people in general has been aroused in Atlanta among the ignorant classes.

Even one of the newspapers has been accused of selling out to the Jews.

Every move that the defense has made, no matter how honorable, how fair, has been looked upon with suspicion by a portion of the public.

In the minds of men and women who have analyzed the evidence, there is a grave doubt whether Frank is really guilty. There is no doubt but that the overwhelming opinion of the crowd may have had some effect on the jurors. Even while they were conferring in the jury room, outside they could see the crowds gathering about, and they had heard the cheers brought forth by the solicitor's arguments in court.

The arguments of the lawyers this week for a new trial were extremely bitter. In his address before Judge Roan, R. R. Arnold, for the defendant, said:

"The crime at the pencil factory was as atrocious as any in the history of the State.

"But the intense feeling over this crime grows out of something else than its mere atrocity. You have got to hunt down under the surface, but you have to scratch down just a little before you find that it is the same old cause that has run down through the ages.

Parallel to Kiev Trial.

"About the only parallel in recent times is going on today in the holy city of Kiev, Russia, where they are trying Mendil Beiliss, a Russian Jew, for the 'ritual murder' of a 12-year-old boy. It's a case on which the civilized world looks aghast and with horror. Everyone knows that it's all a lie and a diabolical persecution. The boy was killed. There is no doubt of that. But that he was killed by Beiliss as a victim of the so-called 'ritual murder,' which, as a matter of fact, exists only in the imagination of the persecutors of the Jews, is an infamous lie. as the world knows.

"As strange as is this travesty on justice in progress in Kieff, Russia, it is no stronger than the trial which was enacted in our own city of Atlanta last August. The charges are no more ridiculous and fantastic than those brought against this young man here.

"I don't believe there is another case on record that a wretch lied in each of four successive affidavits on material points in his story, where his evidence would have been taken against that of a sheep-killing dog.

"Yet, you would believe the infamous lies told against this man now under a sentence of death in the Tower. You would believe the charge of perversion, as base a lie as ever was heard in a courtroom. The revolting story created an impression of truth, though it was the greatest strain ever put upon the credulity of a civilized and law-abiding people.

"I ask Your Honor: Outside the testimony of that miserable wretch, Conley, would there be any pretense of having enough evidence to convict Leo Frank?"

RESCUED MAN, INSTEAD OF HERO, GETS MEDAL

Lindquist, Noted Athlete Who Saved Two From Gas Pit, Not Mentioned in Award.

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 1.—The publication of the Carnegie hero award has disclosed what apparently is an odd twisting of names, Roy W. Hubbard of this city being announced as the recipient of a bronze medal and $1000 for his rescue of a brother workman from a gas pit.

Hubbard was one of two employes of a local gas company rescued by John Lindquist, formerly of Minneapolis, a Marathon runner and a Swedish athlete of note. Lindquist was attracted to the scene by a crowd surrounding the gas pit, and, although warned that it was certain death to descend into it, shed his coat, tied a rope around his waist and carried the unconscious forms of Hubbard and another man to the surface, tottering as he deposited the last of his burden. The newspapers were filled with praise of Lindquist, but he was not mentioned in the award.

FOUR JUSTICES OFFER TO MARRY PAIR, REJECTED

St. Louis Doctor and Girl Get License at Waterloo, but Postpone Marriage.

Waterloo (Ill.) Justices of the Peace—there are four of them—are wondering why a Dr. S. C. Castleman and Miss Minnie Hoffmann, who said they lived in St. Louis, refused their services after having obtained a marriage license at the Monroe County Courthouse in Waterloo Friday afternoon.

Dr. Castleman and Miss Hoffmann arrived in Waterloo on the 1:15 p. m. car, got the license and boarded a car scheduled to depart at 1:30 for East St. Louis. Each of the Waterloo Justices offered his services. To each of the courteously worded offers the doctor replied, "Not today."

Justice Bremser, thinking that perhaps the pair feared they would miss their car, offered to ride with them to Columbia and perform the ceremony there. Under Illinois law the marriage must take place in the same county where the license is issued. His offer was refused.

SEER TELLS A WOMAN HUSBAND IS MURDERED

She Reports to Police, They Arrest Neighbor Who Confesses and Discloses Body.

MILFORD, Mass, Nov. 1.—A confession made by Daniel J. Cooper, a farmer, led to the discovery today of the body of Alfred Bradish, a neighbor. Cooper told the police he had murdered Bradish, dragged his body into the underbrush and on the following day, Sunday, had carried the body into a swamp where he buried it.

Mrs. Bradish, her three children and others made a number of ineffectual searches for the missing man's body, but not until today were the police called upon. Mrs. Bradish said that she did not know her husband had been murdered until a few days ago when a clairvoyant "imparted the information," whereupon she decided to ask the police to investigate the case. The officers heard the woman's story and suspecting Cooper knew something about the disappearance brought him to Milford.

Under sharp questioning he confessed to the killing.

IF YOU LOSE ANYTHING, and will advertise it here, you will surely recover it if found by an honest person. A 3-time ad seldom fails. Remarkable recoveries are brought about every day through this column. Your druggist our agent.

IF YOU FIND ANYTHING, bring it to the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau, 210-12 North Broadway. Get a claim check. Advertise the article. Reclaim it if the owner does not.

THE LAW—People who find lost articles are interested in knowing that the State law (sections 8263 and 8272, R. S., 1909) is strict in requiring them to seek the owners through advertisement and otherwise, and that a failure to do so, if same can be proven, involves a severe penalty. (52)

Values and costs have been forgotten, and only the fact that we must sell them this week has been taken into account in making the prices.

THE ASSORTMENT is the finest ever shown. Never before have we had such a complete lot of really first-class cars. There are cars to suit almost every possible requirement, from small roadsters to 7-passenger touring cars of such well-known makes as HUDSON, Dorris, Moon, Oldsmobile, Cadillac, Paige, Chalmers, Hupmobile, Mitchell and numerous others, and including 1913 model HUDSON, both fours and sixes, in touring cars and coupes. Most of these cars are 1912 and 1913 models.

GUARANTEE. Every used car we sell is accompanied by a written guarantee. We value the customer purchasing a used car as highly as the one purchasing a new car and treat him accordingly.

FAIR WARNING! THE LAST CHANCE! BIG FLAT BARGAIN.
The owner wants to sell. This flat is advertised at the price of $5500 the last time. If not sold next week, we will buy it at that price ourselves, and next year, when the real estate market will improve, we will be able to sell it at $6500. Is this not a fine profit? Why can't you make this profit? If you don't make it you will lose that much, simply because you have no courage and no foresight, or you have no real knowledge of real estate and building values. The flat is at 4273 Connecticut st.; 5 rooms and bath each floor, furnace and all modern conveniences; in good condition, about 6 years old, and there is a garage and big stable in rear part of lot; the lot is 48x125 and both streets are fully improved; you cannot replace this flat for $5500 and the lot is worth $40 per foot. Figure it out yourself how much you are missing if you don't buy this. We want to sell, not trade. Once more, take fair [illegible] last time we are cutting the price to $5500, and we will make you all kinds of terms.

The Laclede Gas Light Company Begins Work of Laying Mains in SOUTHAMPTON

Owners and Prospective Purchasers:

We call your attention to the fact that the Laclede Gas Light Company is laying mains in SOUTHAMPTON.

Lansdowne Avenue is the first street to be benefited by this activity—

But, the others will follow.

There is not a more beautiful tract of ground in the confines of Saint Louis today than is SOUTHAMPTON.

It would be well worth your while to take a ride down there and see what the ground is like.

The present owners of ground are advised to recommend this property to their friends.

As a matter of fact—you don't even have to look at it.

The mere statement that ground of this character is selling for $10.00 per foot is sufficient.

It's the greatest value in real estate that was ever offered to the people of Saint Louis.

Don't put it off a day longer.

Obey the impulse.

"PLAYER PIANOS"

Our advice to player-piano purchasers is to buy only players that have their makers' name on them because those cheap stencil (fictitious named) players are made so cheap that the maker wilfully evades responsibility and you are the innocent victim in a few years time—just about when you've got it paid for. We positively do not give an unreliable instrument house room. That's why we have succeeded. We have no solicitors, but depend entirely on our patrons for new business. Just think of the assortment we have—8 different, absolutely reliable players—to select from, in all prices. Terms arranged to suit. Come and let us show you.

"GREAT PIANO BARGAINS"

Last week we traded in some cracking good pianos that you ought to see before you commit yourself elsewhere. Some are almost new. Amongst them are such makes as the Schiller, Winter, Steinway, Packard, Bailey, Chickering, Rudolf, Gabler, Stetson, etc. We fully guarantee each one so you run no risk. And our prices are recognized the lowest in the city—quality considered. Terms to suit.

WISCONSIN BEGINS INSURING LIVES OF ITS CITIZENS

Commonwealth Expects to Give Old Line Security at Far Less Cost.

NO AGENTS' COMMISSIONS

Handling of Policies Is Added to Duties of City and Other Officials.

RICH AND POOR, HOLDERS

All Funds to Be Invested in State for Dividends to Premium Payers.

Features of New State Insurance

Fund operated without creation of new offices.

Savings of fund to be returned to policyholders.

Cheaper insurance through low rates and less expense.

Students of University Class of 1913 take 100 policies and establish student loan fund as class memorial.

Funds to be invested in this state.

Applications come from many states, but only Wisconsin residents allowed to participate.

Commissioner Ekern says plan is sound and points to its successful operation in Italy, Belgium and New Zealand.

More than 10 per cent of the first policyholders are women.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 1.—State life insurance became an accomplished fact in Wisconsin this week with the issue of the first policy in the "State life fund" to Charles A. Ingram of Durand, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of 1911, and the second to L. L. Johnson, present member of the Assembly from Door County. Among others receiving policies were:

Prof. Ransom A. Moore, University of Wisconsin; John S. Donald, Secretary of State; J. K. Livingston, engineer, president of the university class of 1913; former Senator John A. Hazelwood, secretary of the State Civil Service Commission; James A. Crabtree, president River Falls Normal School; Prof. Carl Russell Fish, University of Wisconsin; George D. Whitefield, Senator Gabriel T. Zophy, Milwaukee, and Alfred T. Rogers of the law firm of La Follette & Rogers.

Policies Scattered Widely.

The policies went to all parts of the State, including Madison, Superior, La Crosse, Oshkosh, Green Bay, Wausau, Appleton, Antigo, Menomonie and Milwaukee, as well as smaller towns and country districts. Policies were taken out by public officials, clerks, machinists, stenographers, salesmen, farmers, professors, students, teachers, laborers, lawyers, bankers, manufacturers, merchants, engineers and railroad men.

Following are statistics regarding the first group of policyholders: Average age, 29 years 1 month, 6 days; average height, 5 feet 9 1-8 inches; average weight, 153 pounds; average chest measure, 35 8-10 inches; average waist measure 31 8-10 inches.

The law making provision for State life insurance was enacted by the Legislature of 1911, after the idea had been worked out by Commissioner of Insurance Herman L. Ekern and presented before a legislative committee. A previous thorough study had been made by him of similar laws in operation in Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Belgium, Norway and New Zealand.

Europe Blazes Path.

Italy has recently made life insurance a state monopoly. Norway, Belgium and New Zealand have systems of state life insurance. In Germany the state insures workingmen against sickness, accident and old age dependency. Legislation establishing a similar system of state insurance to that in Wisconsin was considered by Legislatures in [illegible] states last winter, among them Washington, Wyoming, Kansas, Ohio and West Virginia.

The State of Washington has a system of compulsory insurance of working men against accidents, administered through a State department.

Under the Wisconsin law, the Commissioner of Insurance was given two years to work out the plans, and get the machinery of the new law into operation. While he was in the midst of this work an attempt to remove him from office was made and the distraction and litigation from that episode impeded the preparations. Members of the University of Wisconsin, class of 1913, applied for policies and assigned them to a loan fund for needy students as a class memorial.

Present Limit Is $1000.

The policy contracts are attractive in appearance. They are printed on bond paper, 8½x11 inches, with a decorative green border. Each document bears the signatures of Ekern and Henry Johnson, State Treasurer, and the seal of the State of Wisconsin. On the second page of the policy is a full description of the disposal of the policyholders' payments, an accurate statement of the amount to be set aside as a reserve, the amount which may be used for expense, interest to be credited to the policy and the sum to be set aside to pay death losses during the current year. To the third page of the policy is affixed a photographic copy of the application.

No policy is issued for a larger amount than $1000. When the number of policyholders reaches 1000 the maximum policy issued will be for $2000, and when the number reaches 2000 the maximum policy will be for $3000, the highest amount now authorized.

No New Offices Created.

In the administration of the law no additional offices will be created. The State has made provision by which applications will be received by Clerks and Treasurers of cities, towns and villages; by officials of banks which receive State deposits, and by State Factory Inspectors. No paid agents, as such, will be employed.

The elimination of salaries and commissions of agents will not be the only saving, however. The office expense and cost of management will be small. The Insurance Commissioner will supervise the life fund, and with the Secretary of State, State Treasurer and Attorney-General, will invest the funds. The Attorney-General is made the legal adviser.

"The purpose of the State life fund is to give the people of the state the benefit of the best old line insurance on a mutual plan at the lowest possible cost," said Ekern. "To benefit the policyholders is the sole consideration. Of the total expense of old line companies, much more than one-half goes to agents in commissions and salaries."

Funds May Earn Profit.

Under the State plan, policyholders are saved this great expense. Besides, there will be gains from excess interest earnings and mortality savings. The premium rates require that 3 per cent interest shall be earned. The funds should earn at least 5 per cent, leaving a margin of 2 per cent as a source of dividends to policyholders. A greater item of saving for the dividends of policyholders, however, comes from the fact that the actual number of deaths run about 4 per cent below the number calculated in the table.

The State life fund at present offers seven forms of policies as follows:

Ordinary life, 20-payment life, 20-year endowment, 10-year endowment, endowment at age 65, 10-year term and term to age 65.

This affords a wide range of choice and allows the applicant to obtain the form best suited to his age, circumstances and financial resources. The form most popular so far is the 20-payment life. Under this 20 annual payments are made and the insurance is then fully paid for life. This enables a man to pay for his insurance during his productive years and have his protection for the remainder of his life.

Employers Lend Support.

Premiums may be paid monthly if desired and monthly premium rates have been worked out in order to make it convenient for people earning small wages to take advantage of the new plan. Manufacturers are putting the plan before their employes by enclosing the State circulars in pay envelopes, posting placards in their shops and advancing their employes money to make the first year's payment.

The people of Wisconsin hold [illegible] old line insurance policies and [illegible] certificates in fraternal societies, a total of 331,290 contracts. This does not include the industrial policies, which are mostly on the lives of children. The male population of Wisconsin is about 1,200,000, of which 700,000 are of insurable age.

Servant Made Police Matron.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Nov. 1.—After mandamus proceedings had been begun by J. Ralph Roberts, author of Kansas' "White Slave" law, to compel the County Commissioners to appoint a county police matron, the commissioners met and appointed the Sheriff's servant girl, at $10 per month, ignoring the candidate supported by the W. C. T. U. and the suffrage association.

Domestic Science Demonstrated.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 1.—The girls who are studying domestic science at the Kansas Agricultural College proved this week that their instruction is practicable. A luncheon was served to the distinguished guests of the college and many others as a part of the fiftieth anniversary celebration. Each domestic science class prepared different articles for the luncheon which was given in the college gymnasium.

JEFF DAVIS' LIFE COMPILED BY BEST KNOWN ARKANSAN

Sharp Dunaway, Solicitor Who Knows Tastes of People, Publishes Volume.

STORIES AND SPEECHES

Chancellor Bourland Writes an Appreciation of Late Senator as Introduction.

Author of Book on Jeff Davis' Life and Speeches

L. SHARP DUNAWAY.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 1.—Sharp Dunaway, a newspaper solicitor who knows more people in Arkansas than any politician in the State, and has a personal acquaintance with every wagon yard and hotel proprietor and chicken-peddler in Arkansas, is preparing to issue from the press 10,000 copies of a book on "Jeff Davis, Governor and United States Senator; His Life and Speeches."

Chancellor J. V. Bourland of Fort Smith, a lifelong friend of Senator Davis, has written the introduction and he places Jeff Davis in a different light than that which had been cast upon him by his enemies.

"Contrary to a reputation which his political enemies sought to thrust upon him, Jeff Davis was Jacksonian in rugged patriotism," writes Chancellor Bourland. "His political career was largely shaped by a natural passion for equality and exact justice. He stood for right; believed in governmetn by the people, not by a favored few. And when his official duties made him acquainted with the injustice of special privilege which had honeycombed our social fabric, he set about rectification; and it was this which brought on and keeps glowing the white heat of his political course.

Fought Like Gatling Gun.

"Not that he loved a row for its own sake; but once in the arena, buckling a-breast his bull-hide shield, he smote the enemy hip and thigh; nor did he at any time cry 'enough.' Upon the contrary, far and wide he strewed the State with political carnage, working night and day with all the precipitation of a Gatling gun. Whoever now would know the rectitude and wisdom of his political propaganda, let him give himself to the study of our political history. There he will find that every measure brought forward by Jeff Davis has been justified by time and verified by current history. Whatever he did was misconstrued by his enemies. His death is irreparable. He fixed definite lines of political conduct for public good, and none will dare traverse them."

The vitriolic speeches delivered by him in his campaigns for Governor and United States Senator, and his speeches delivered in the Senate on the suppression of trusts,, including the celebrated "cobweb speech," delivered nine days after he took his seat, are reproduced as shedding a brilliant and illuminating light upon his mental characteristics and political methods, whereby he overcame his enemies, turned their weapons upon themselves and established himself as the particular champion of those whom he termed "the red-necks and the hill-billies," as compared with "the high-collared roosters," who were his pet aversion.

Called "Political Meteor."

"Senator Davis flashed like a meteor across the political horizon of Arkansas," declares his biographer. "Never before in the history of any state has his equal appeared. He worked by no set rules. He could not be guaged by ordinary standards. If ordinary men had done as the Senator did, it would have ruined them.

"He was always lucky in the opposition he had and he made the most of that opposition. He rallied the support of the masses to his standard by showing the weakness of the opposition and attacking its vulnerable points. He was essentially a man of the people. He understood human nature as few men have ever understood it. He could feel the public pulse and could scent danger from afar. He always advocated measures that could be understood by the people. He had a power of invective and ridicule that was invincible.

"It was this method that first brought him into prominence as a spellbinder. By means of it he made his adversary look ridiculous."

Illustrative of his methods, the following story is told:

"On one occasion when the Senator met a Prohibition candidate for Governer, whose name was Adams, in a joint debate at Danville, the Senator was told by a friend that he had put a bottle of whisky in Adams' grip and that Adams had the grip on the platform. The Senator turned to Adams and said:

"'Old soda-pop, when did you come to town? You say you are a Prohi. I can take two green persimmons and squeeze on you and make you so drunk you won't know your heels from a shotgun. Open up your old grip and let the crowd see that whisky.'

"'I haven't got any whisky in my grip,' said Brother Adams.

"'Yes you have. Let's examine and if you haven't I will donate $100 to the churches of Danville.'

"The bottle of whisky was produced and the crowd yelled for Jeff."

How He Won the People.

Here are half a dozen of the characteristic sayings from among the hundreds the biographer has preserved in the book:

I do not know that I will ever marry again, but if I do I am coming out here in the country and marry one of these big, fat country girls, that can cook an oven of hot biscuit, throw them up the chimney and run out and catch them in her apron before I can get my boots on.

If the boys in the hills will only touch hands with the boys in the valley we will win one more victory for good government and in the meantime whip these Yankees out on dry land and let them stink themselves to death.

Aunt Julie (addressing an opponent), I understand you can make better chile con carne, hot tamales and macaroni than any bare-footed nigger in Little Rock. If you can, you had better put on your white apron and get busy, as you will never be Governor of Arkansas.

I have whipped the squirrel-headed editors in Little Rock; in fact, all over Arkansas, until you couldn't convict a nigger for stealing on the testimony of half a dozen of these squirrel-heads.

I am a hard-shell Baptist in religion; I believe in foot-washing, saving your seed potatoes and paying your honest debts.

Old Armour and Cudahy never raised a sow and pigs in their lives. Yet the prices of meat are so high that I can hardly buy breakfast bacon in Little Rock enough to support my family. I just buy one little slice, hang it up by a long string and let each one of my kids jump up and grease their lips and go to bed.

Another Rap at Editors.

I have got a little 8-year-old boy at home. I have been thinking of making a preacher out of him. Some want me to make a lawyer out of him, but I don't care if he makes a chicken peddler or anything else, but when he gets grown and I find he hasn't got any sense at all, I am going to make an editor out of him; then there will be one more squirrel-head in Arkansas. Most newspaper editors can live on sawdust and wind, and make the wind themselves. Bob Rogers (addressing the Attorney-General, who was then a candidate for Governor), you threatened to kill me. I am not afraid of you. I can take a corn-cob with a lightning bug on the end of it and run you into the river.

Throughout his career, at least 90 per cent of the newspapers of the State more or less violently opposed him. But he was proud of this opposition; in fact, he courted it as a sure means of currying favor with those whom he could convince that he was being traduced and villified and persecuted for the sake of the "great throbbing heart of humanity," as he phrased it. Where others would have been crushed by the weight of opposition, his hold upon the affections of the masses was only strengthened and made more secure. Never was he more in his element than when engaged in lambasting the newspapers, the corporations, the "special privileges" and "the high-collared roosters."

Last Arraignment of Press.

In one of his few speeches in Congress that he delivered, a philippic against the newspapers that may well be considered a classic of its kind, he said:

"The sober, sane, simple truth! Let scavengers of plutocracy howl! Truth God's living truth—where are its defenders? Miserable travesty upon noble manhood, post-graduates in all arts of slander and defamation, I challenge a subsidized press! The people know your design and spurn your pretenses, whether under show of argument or more subservient hypocrisy. Go! damnable imps of pelf and greed, I defy your taunts!"

"Tear to pieces my political career, if it comport with your execrable will; stifle and distort my every utterance; not satisfied, if such be your brutal frenzy, lash my poor form into insensibility; then, if it be your further pleasure, gnaw from my stiffening limbs every vestige of quivering flesh; howl in wretched bestiality through my own innocent blood as it drips from your fiendish visages; drag them, if you want what remains, into the filth and vermin of your foul den and burn it upon the altar of Baal, or scatter it before the friendly winds of heaven, to your betters, the carrion crows of the field All that may they do, all and more, if there yet be open further depths of infamy to a polluted, besotted press.

"These ready servants of greed, what have they not done or attempted, to fasten still more securely an autocracy upon us? It seems to be their special function, not simply to pervert truth but to threaten and terrorize public men. Dare a Senator align himself with the people? What? Yes; many illustrious servants of the people have lifted honest voices here and elsewhere against the march of plutocracy, to fall ambushed, politically assassinated, and by whom? By the trusts, wearing masks Ah, sir, newspaper masks. But, Mr. President, insignificant as I am, if my political career be marked, let them sharpen their blades, for I will be here at the appointed hour, and while here only God can stay my voice in behalf of organized united labor and the yeomanry of America."

BIG REALTY DEALS MARK OPENING OF WINTER SEASON

Zenda Apartment Building at Westminster and Walton Is Purchased by W. N. the Perry Estate—Has 18 5-Room Suites.

APPROVAL OF PEPER SALE IS IN DOUBT

Paul Brown, Back in Local Market, Bids $156,000 for Half Block on Market Street at Eleventh, Appraised at $290,000.

Realty circles in the closing week of October were cheered by large announcements.

The final sale of importance was that of the Zenda Apartment building at the northeast corner of Westminster place and Walton avenue, by the Perry estate, to Walter N. Davis. The transaction was promoted by William T. Matthews of the Matthews Real Estate Co. The price mentioned was $78,500.

The building, three stories in height, has 18 five-room suites. It occupies a site 65x135 feet.

The Perry estate, composed of Messrs. David R. Francis and Lewis and Richard Perry, acquired the apartments 10 years ago for $100,000.

Trades $50,000 Properties.

As a part of the present transaction, Davis deeded to the Perry estate various properties the value of which is estimated at $50,000.

The making of the deal at the outset of the winter season is of decided significance.

The details of other apartment building sales are given elsewhere.

Big Buyers in Market.

The auction sale of the property of the Peper estate at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange disclosed a host of big buyers in the St. Louis realty market. The sale, which was made under the direction of Charles Cummings Collins, of the law firm of Collins, Barker & Britton, included a choice selection of high-class business and residential holdings.

The half block on the south side of Market street, extending from Eleventh to Twelfth street was knocked down to Paul Brown, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Co., for $156,000. As the site, the Twelfth street side of which is occupied by the old Peper tobacco warehouse, was appraised by experts before the sale, at $290,000, it is not likely that this price will be approved.

The appearance of Brown in the St. Louis realty market, after an absence of a decade or more, augurs well, realty men declare. As a client of the Mercantile Trust Co., Brown, whose fortune is estimated at from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000, was one of the heaviest investors in the downtown field. Should the courts approve the sale, it is predicted that a handsome structure will be erected on the Twelfth street frontage of the site, which is available for either a hotel, a theater or a large commercial building.

Auctioneer in Quandary.

Capt. C. A. Tilles was among other capitalists who bid against Brown for the half block. Incidentally, Lorenzo E. Anderson, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Co., and who 10 years ago was one of the most potent factors in the St. Louis realty market, was a desultory bidder at this auction.

Before the property was awarded to Brown on a bid for the whole piece, it had been sold in parcels for an aggregate of $148,550 John Gundlach, President of the City Council, bid $35,000 for two pieces.

The property at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Walnut streets was bought by Henry L. Cornet of the firm of Cornet & Zeibig, one of the strongest real estate organizations in St. Louis, for $30,000. The ground has a frontage of 136 feet on Twelfth street and 152 feet on Walnut street, and is occupied by old two-story brick buildings. The corner, for many years was occupied by the late Jim Cronin's saloon. Realty dealers think that Cornet paid a fair price for this property with a view to the courts awarding it to him.

Building Sold for $18,500.

A three-story brick building at the southeast corner of Sixth and Wash streets was bought by M. E. Smith for $18,500. A two-story brick building on the southwest corner of Sixth and Wash streets went for $10,100 to John Rockenstein, a commission merchant connected with Conrad Schopp & Co.

Two brick buildings at 1423 and 1424 Morgan street brought $9100, the purchaser being Frank Dubinski. Tom W. Grace of the Grace Realty Co. was a strong rival of Dubinski for the Wash street corner.

Thomas W. Grace was a rival of Dubinski for this corner.

A vacant lot 104 feet on Washington boulevard between Newstead and Taylor avenues was purchased by W. H. Redemeyer, sprinkling contractor, for $75.50 a foot. It is understood that an apartment building to cost $75,000 will be erected on the site if the sale is approved, which in all probability it will be.

An incident occurred in connection with the sale of the Washington avenue lot worthy of special mention. The prospective buyers declined to bid on this property until they were fully informed as to whether there were restrictions against apartments.

On this point the auctioneer was not informed, and the sale hung fire. Both Special Commissioner Collins and Auctioneer Sutton were in a quandary. C. H McMillan, former vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Co. finally yelled: to "Wilkie," the pet name of Charles Cummings Collins, to look at the certificate of title. This gave the desired information, and saved the day.

The Christian Peper homestead, occupying almost a block, at Taylor and San Francisco avenues, was bought by B. A. Thompson, a real estate agent, for $21,300. There are rumors that Thompson bought this block for a site for a tuberculosis hospital.

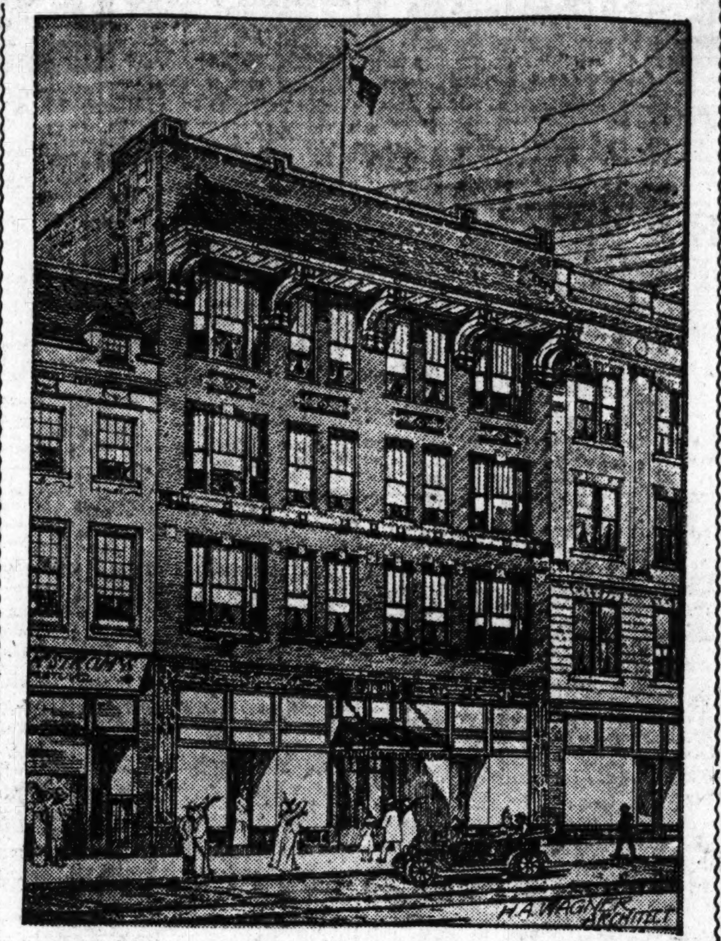
The one and two story building at 1200-1208 inclusive, Park avenue, having a site 118x127 feet, was knocked down to Sam Wells for $4800.

The sale was liberally advertised and intelligently conducted, but the time was not opportune for the conversion of this class of property.

No Dearth of Capital.

There were many bona fide bidders for every piece presented, showing conclusively, according to G. W. Neumann, a smart operator, that there is no dearth of capital for realty investment.

Mission Style Hotel for Union Station District



New Four-Story Building to Be Located at Nineteenth and Market Streets.

Contracts have been signed for the erection of a four-story and basement semi-fireproof hotel building for Mary E. Holzhousen, opposite the Union Station, at Nineteenth and Market streets. The building will be under the supervision of Barngrover & Specht, who promoted it.

The exterior design of the building will be in modern mission and the face will be of model gray brick, trimmed with terra cotta. The roof will be in Spanish tile, with heavy copper cornices.

The building will be equipped with a modern heating plant and high-speed elevators. On the ground floor will be two storerooms, with plateglass fronts and sides, which will open into the hotel. The hotel office and lobby and the writing room will be on the ground floor. The three upper floors will be devoted to guest rooms, all of which will be provided with running water and private baths.

The building will be erected by Schroeder & Son Building Co. It will be ready for occupancy March 15. Henry A. Wagner, architect, who designed the building, will have supervision of its erection. Barngrover & Specht will continue in charge of the property after its completion.

SALE OF SOUTHAMPTON LOTS GOES ON RAPIDLY

More Than 30 Houses Are Completed and Much Building Is Expected in Spring.

Salesmanager Buchanan of the Southampton subdivision says that in his opinion sales in that section are only fairly begun. The Laclede Gaslight Co. and Union Electric Light and Power Co. are installing mains and wires there, while the telephone companies will begin work soon in what is properly known as West Southampton.

The building activities, Buchanan predicts, will be in force in early spring. This fall has witnessed the completion of more than thirty houses in the subdivision.

Buchanan is of the opinion that this is but the beginning of a period of activity in this section that will make a new record in real estate circles. The best feature in connection with the Southampton business, he says, is that the purchasers are so loyal and energetic in the proclaiming of the quality of the location to their friends when the opportunity presents itself.

HOME ON GATE AVENUE SELLS FOR $20,000

Capt. Henry W. Leigh Purchases Residence Which Was Recently Built.

A new house at 405 West Gate avenue has been purchased by Capt. Henry W. Leigh for $20,000. The house, which was built by the Leigh Bros.' Real Estate and Investment Co., is one of the most beautiful in Parkview. It is built on old Tudor style, with poston brick, terra cotta trimmings and slate roof, constructed of reinforced concrete; it is absolutely fireproof.

Leigh Bros., who are among the highest class builders in the city, have extended their operations to Hillcrest.

Bronx Hat Co.'s New Store.

The Bronx Hat Co. has leased the entire third floor of 823-25 Washington avenue at a rental of $1800. It is now located at 1024 Lucas avenue. The lease was made for the account of the Rosenheim estate, through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

Moves to New Quarters.

Joseph F. Dickman Real Estate Co. has removed to new and large quarters at 623 Chestnut street. The concern, formerly located at 19 North Eighth street, is one of the most progressive on the row.

DOCTOR LEASES STORE ROOM FOR PHARMACY

Automobile Show Places on Locust Street Pave Way for New Trade District.

Dr. J. F. Gallagher has leased the storeroom and flat over it at 919 North Sarah street, for three years. After making improvements and alterations he will open a first-class drug store on the ground floor. This lease was made for account of William H. Priesmeyer by the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co.

Tal J. Walton, formerly superintendent of the police garage, will open a high-class showroom and auto repair shop, having leased for a period of three years the two-story building at 2007 and 2009 Locust street, 50 feet by 155 feet with an entrance from St. Charles street. The rapidity with which automobile showrooms are being occupied on Locust street between Jefferson avenue and Twelfth street would indicate that this section finally will be the home of the automobile trade. The Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. represented the lessee and the lessor, the Tufts estate of Boston.

The property at 1612 Wash street owned by the United Railways Co. of St. Louis, and formerly used as a "booster station," will be used for a moving picture show, opening about Dec. 1, under the name "Park Theater." A. E. MacMurray is the proprietor. The Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. represented both the lessor and lessee.

UNITED RAILWAYS BUYS LOT FOR A TERMINAL

Sidney Schiele Sells Double Corner to Be Used for Switch and Station.

The southeast corner of Florissant and Robin avenues, 142x140 feet, was sold by Sidney Schiele, a former secretary of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, to the United Railways Co. for $3905. The ground is at a terminus of the company's tracks and will provide space for a spur, switch and waiting room.

The Bellefontaine cars, it is announced, will run to Robin avenue upon the completion of the work contemplated.

Schiele, who is one of the aggressive realty agents on Chestnut street, has other big sales under way.

REAL ESTATE SALESMEN HOLD LIVELY MEETING

Committee Named to Arrange for Banquet to Be Given in Near Future.

The Salesmen's Association of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange held a very enthusiastic meeting yesterday. A. J. Shine of Edward L. Bakewell's office was elected a member. Four new proposals were submitted.

A committee of three was appointed to make arrangements for a banquet to be given in the near future. R. C. Becker, R. C. Rutledge and Charles J. Lewis make up the committee.

Off to the Ozarks

W. Lyman Case and C. P. Health, two live wires of the Goodnow Realty and Investment Co., departed last night for a week's shooting in the Ozarks.

MANY NEW HOMES ARE BEING ERECTED IN UNIVERSITY CITY

Gerling Realty Co. Buys Four Lots; Buildings Thereon to Cost $24,000.

WANT CARS TO CLAYTON

Citizens Ask McCulloch to Extend Service on University Line.

The Gerling Realty Co. has purchased four lots on West Portland place in University City and will erect thereon houses costing $24,000, exclusive of site. J. A. Mayhew, a realty agent with offices in the Liggett Building, effected the sale. This section of University City is building up rapidly with a better class of houses.

A site on the south side of Kingsbury between Pennsylvania avenue and Williams street in University City, was purchased by Thomas Gugherly yesterday as a site for a $15,000 home. He has built several attractive houses in Parkview. The purchase of the Kingsbury lot, it is believed, marks the beginning of extensive operations on his part in this locality. The price for the lot was $60 a foot.

The construction of Pennsylvania avenue, from Forsyth boulevard to Delmar boulevard, has just been completed, while the macadamizing of the latter thoroughfare to Clayton is under way.

Assessed $4 a Front Foot.

Incidentally, the owners of the lots abutting Pennsylvania avenue were assessed $4 a front foot for its construction, the inside property holders being exempt, according to provisions of the law in St. Louis County.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. is negotiating with the Berdith Realty Co with plans for connecting Kingsbury place in Parkview with Kingsbury boulevard in University City, with the idea of making it the main thoroughfare of both additions. In University City the handsomest homes are being erected in Kingsbury boulevard, the only through east-west thoroughfare of this section with the exception of Delmar boulevard.

Want Car Service Extended.

Citizens of Clayton are trying to get Capt. McCulloch, general manager of the United Railway system, to extend the service of the University car line to Clayton. This contemplates the operation of the westbound cars on the Clayton and Suburban tracks north of Washington University and Maryland Terrace, and the eastbound on those south of Washington University. This would not only quicken the service to Clayton, but also would give in conjunction with the present Clayton car line, ideal transportation advantages to Hillcrest, Skinker Heights, Brentmoor, Forest Ridge and Washington Park.

The University car line now has its loop at West Portland place and Pennsylvania avenue.

Cornelius L. Butts of the Butts Realty Co. yesterday moved into his new $15,000 home on Dartfort avenue in Hillcrest, becoming the pioneer resident of this charming locality.

Agents Urge Hillcrest Purchases.

Sanguine in the belief that higher prices will prevail in Hillcrest the forthcoming spring, agents are counseling prospective purchasers in this locality to drive their bargains now.

W. A. Giraldin, former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, purchased at the recent auction sale 100 feet in Hillcrest in the section between Skinker and De Mun avenues, with plans for a handsome home. Many offers, however, have been submitted for the lot, forming one of the most attractive sites in Hillcrest. His selling inclination when profits are offered may cause him to dispose of his holding, agents say.

Gerald B. O'Reilly, also a former Exchange president, as has already been told, has purchased a site in this section of Hillcrest for an $18,000 residence, bids on the construction of which are now being taken by his architect.

BUYS LARGE RESIDENCE FOR PIANO SALES HOUSE

Property at 3621 Washington Avenue Brings Rate of $250 Front Foot.

The 10-room house at 3621 Washington avenue has been purchased by Carl Adams from Mrs. Francis Cockrell for $12,500. The sale is at the rate of $250 a front foot, a new record for that section of the street

The house will be used for a piano store. The Butts Realty Co. and J. H. Farish & Co. negotiated the sale. It was the third transaction in the block with which the Butts company has been identified.

S. C. JOLLY ENLISTS IN REALTY FRATERNITY

Firm, Under Name of M. O'Connor Real Estate Co., Opens Office on Chestnut Street.

S. C. Jolly is the name of the most recent addition to the ranks of the realty fraternity. He has locked arms with Morris O'Connor under the style of the M. O'Connor Real Estate Co.

The new combination is said to be one of the strongest on Chestnut street. The concern is conducting a general realty and financial business.

Vandeventer Place Home Sold.

The Wiggins house at 32 Vandeventer place was sold by Franciscus & Kunz in connection with Albert T. Terry & Co., to Mrs. Ann E. Bent. The house will become the home of Mrs. Crittenden McKinley, Mrs. Bent's daughter.

The legitimate PAID circulation of the Post-Dispatch in St. Louis and its suburbs is greater than that of ALL other English Dailies COMBINED.

TWO HIGH-GRADE APARTMENTS SOLD IN THE WEST END

Goodfellow and Waterman Avenue Structures Bought for Investment.

PROFITS ENCOURAGING

W. A. Giraldin, Manager of Exclusive Building, Says Vacancies Seldom Occur.

Records in the Recorder's office disclose an exchange in high-grade apartment houses in the West End. Among them are the Armand Apartments on the east side of Goodfellow avenue, between Clemens and Von Versen avenue, and those at the northwest corner of Rosedale and Waterman avenues.

The Armond Apartments were sold by George W. Brown to Mrs. W. H. Stephenson, the controlling stockholder in the Lexington Investment Co. While the price was not revealed the value of the property is estimated at $25,000. The Armond, presumably, was given by Brown in part payment for the 40 feet on Washington avenue east of Sixteenth street, which he recently acquired of Mrs. Stephenson. The consideration in the latter instance was $100,000 The trade was brought about by Ralph Cole, who consummated it in conjunction with the Butts Realty Co. and the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co.

The four-family apartment building at the corner of Rosedale and Waterman avenues was acquired by George P. Johannes from the Anchor Real Estate Co. for $25,000. The site is 60 by 130 feet. Fred A. Benecke negotiated this sale.

The Anchor company transferred the lot to Johannes and Johannes deeded as part payment his 11-room residence at 5126 South Broadway. The apartments yield $2400 a year.

The small percentage of vacancies in apartment buildings renders them attractive forms of investment. This is notably true of the larger apartment buildings. There are only two vacancies in the Oxford, the pretentious six-story structure at the southeast corner of Union boulevard and Waterman avenue.

The building, which is of fire-proof construction, is equipped with automatic freight and passenger elevators.

With the removal from dwellings, the demand for high-class apartments, according to W. A. Giraldin, president of the company which manages the Oxford, is increasing.

TEN-ACRE TRACT IS SOLD TO LEWIS FOR $60,000

Land at Natural Bridge and Euclid Avenues Bought of Theodore Beyert Estate.

A notable subdivision sale of the week was that of the 10-acre tract at the northeast corner of Euclid and Natural Bridge avenue to the Lewis Realty and Building Co., of which Sylvester G. Lewis is president. The purchase price, it is understood, was $60,000.

The sellers, who are the heirs of the Theodore Beyert estate, were represented in the transaction by Arthur E. Kammerer of Rassieur, Kammerer & Rassieur, lawyers, Lewis acting for his corporation.

The tract of ground is located on one of the highest points in the city and is beautifully situated. It contains approximately 4000 front feet, of which 1000 are on Euclid, 1400 on Sacramento, 600 on Natural Bridge road, 600 on San Francisco and 300 on Margaretta avenues. It has recently been subdivided and equipped with sewers. The Natural Bridge car line, which gives a 35-minute schedule to Sixth street and Washington avenue, serves the locality.

Lewis, who has sprung into prominence by purchasing large tracts of land in that section of the city and improving them with handsome buildings, states that he will at once begin improving the tract with high-class bungalows, flats and residences.

RICHER AFTER PRAYERS

WABASH, Ind., Nov. 1.—Henry Cripe, farmer, of Center township, Wabash County, believes an incident of farm life recently showed that being a tiller of the soil has its rewards if the farmer attends church.

Cripe and his family had gone to the Eel River Church. When they returned they found a new colt, a new calf, 25 additional pigs and a dozen additional chickens. And while all this happened the corn was ripening, the shoats were growing fatter, the apples were getting ready for the fall picking and the chickens kept on laying eggs.

DOLLAR FINANCIER SUES

William Miller, 17 years old, who conducted the variety store in Wood-river for one day before he was ousted by the mortgage holders, has ordered an Alton attorney to issue an attachment against the store for $38 back salary which he claims is due for working in the store under the former proprietor.

Miller said that he was forcibly ejected from the store by four men and when he returned he found a heavy lock on the door.

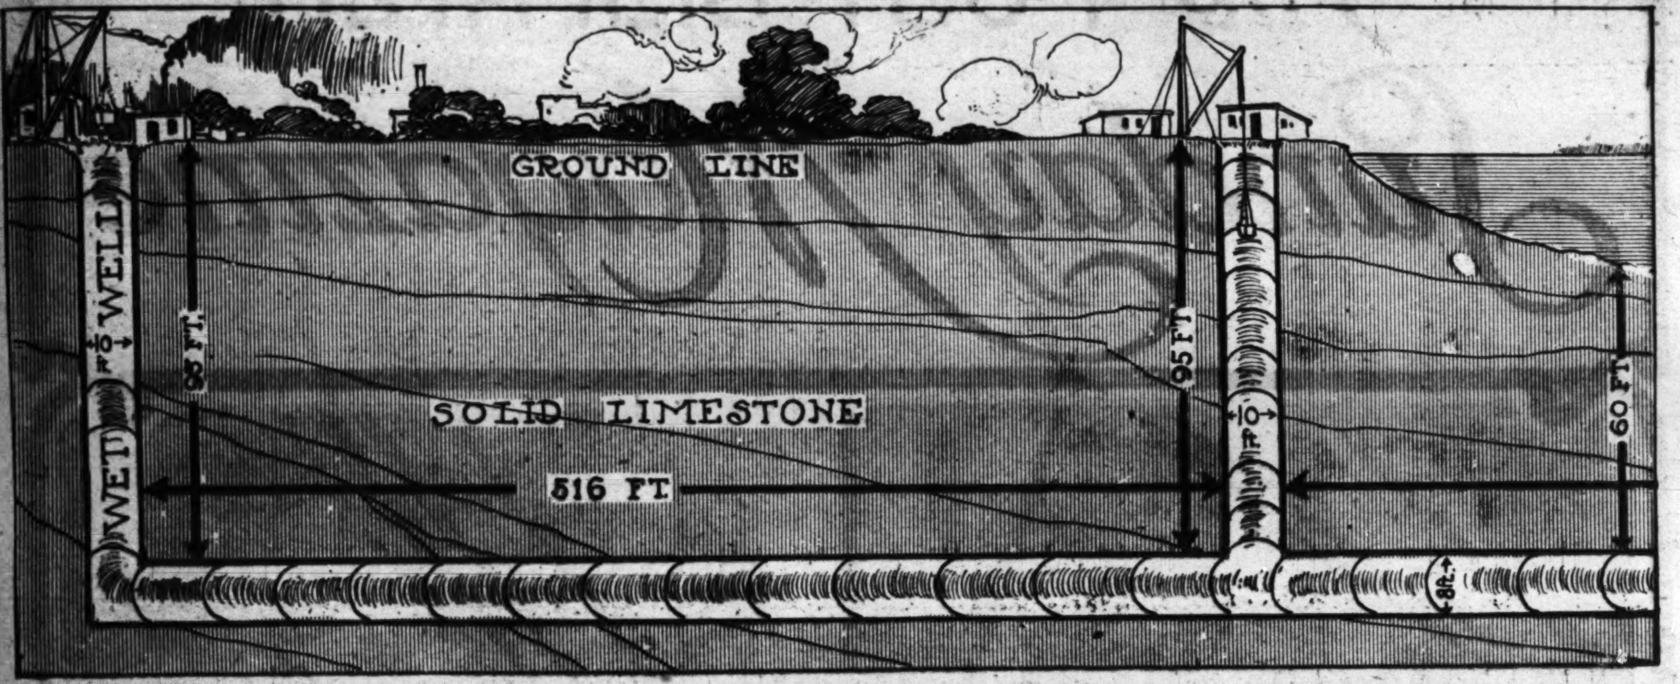
Boring a Half-Mile Tunnel Through a Two-Hundred-Million Ton Rock to Get Water for St. Louis



One Hundred and Fifty Men, Working More Than Sixty Feet Beneath the Rock Bed of the Mississippi River at Chain of Rocks, Are Dynamiting a Circular Hole Ten Feet in Diameter, 2766 Feet Long, Through Solid Limestone—New Tunnel Will Have Capacity of 150,000,000 Gallons of Water a Day.

THREE times a day—at 8 o'clock in the morning, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at midnight—there is an earthquake shudder within the corporate limits of St Louis. It is not recorded by seismographs, either at Washington University or Washington, D. C., but it is nevertheless a powerful shock. Sundays only are immune from these disturbances. Each of them is a two-fold shock, in fact, for it is caused by the simultaneous explosion of 50 pounds of dynamite in each of two facings in a tunnel that is being blasted out of solid limestone nearly a hundred feet below the land surface at one facing and more than sixty feet below the bed of the Mississippi River at the other facing.

Every day for the next six months 300 pounds of the explosive will be set off with clockwork regularity. By the end of that period, it is hoped, the city of St. Louis will be the owner and creator of one of the most extraordinary tunnels in the world.

Nobody other than the work gang of 150 men observes these regularly recurrent earth shocks, since the explosions are so far down under the solid rock that there is little or no perceptible tremor or sound beyond the premises of the city waterworks department at Chain of Rocks, where the stupendous activity is going on. There is but one vent whereby the sound can get to the surface. It is a big shaft, 12 feet in diameter at the top and 10 at the bottom, 93 feet down. The shaft is circular. For about 30 feet from the top it is cased with concrete. The rest of the way down concrete is not needed, since the hole is cut through substantial limestone.

This shaft was the necessary preliminary to the beginning of the work which will give St. Louis a new intake for its water supply from the Mississippi River. When the shaft was completed the tunneling began, not long ago, and now every minute in the 24 hours 50 men, most of them highly skilled in tunnel driving, are boring into the limestone foundation of the earth, while 50 other men are sleeping in the bunkhouses above ground, and still another 50 are taking their recreation. The men work in shifts of eight hours each. When a blast is ready to be set off the shift on duty comes up out of the underworld, the dynamite is exploded by electricity, and the next shift of workmen goes down to clean out the shattered rock and prepare for the next earthquake, which takes place on schedule time.

When this new intake tunnel is finished it will be 2766 feet long and 516 feet of it under the land and 2250 feet under the Mississippi River. The river part of the tunnel will be at an average of 64 feet below the bed of the stream. The tunnel will be a round hole, lined with concrete, eight feet in diameter. It is being blasted about 10 feet in diameter to allow for concrete walls a foot thick.

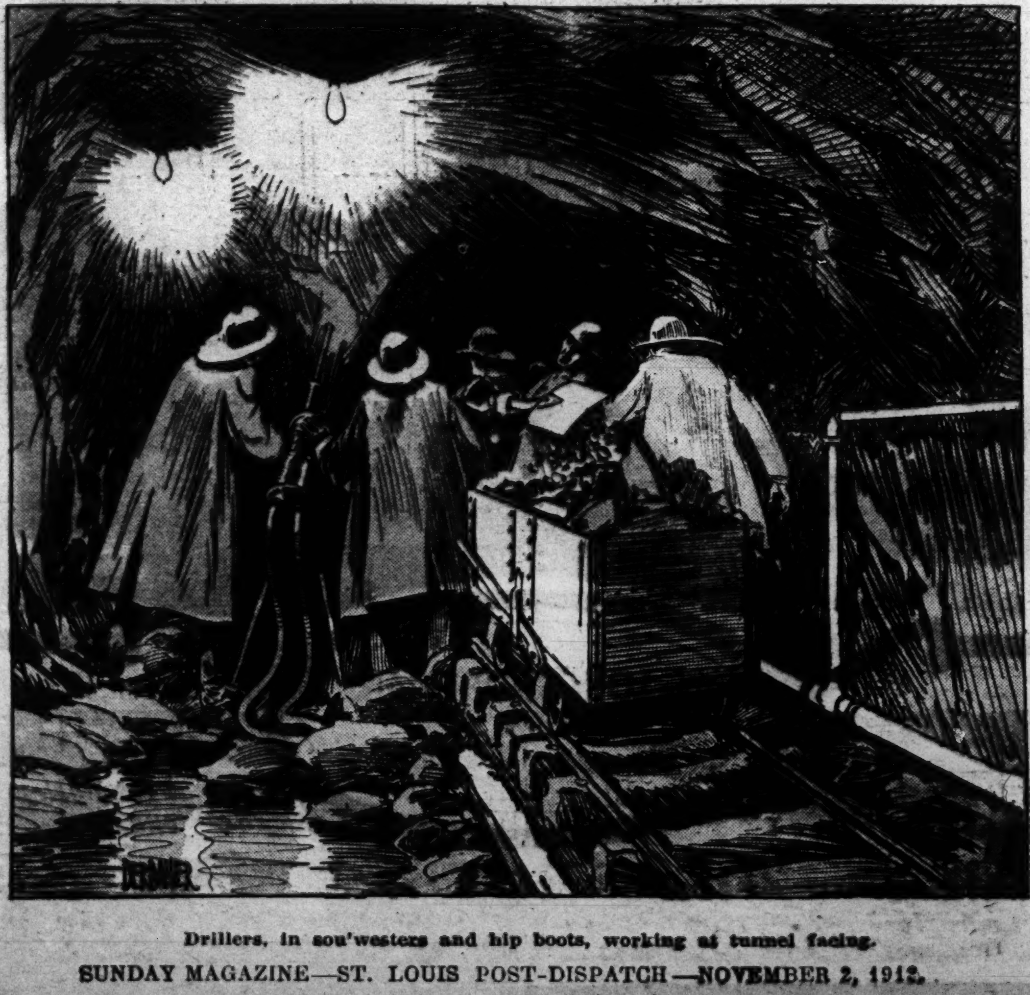
Through the tunnel will be pumped, when required, 150,000,000 gallons of water a day. This is enough to supply water to all of St. Louis with the present population. The old intake tunnel has about the same capacity. It is not the intention of the Waterworks Department for the present to enlarge the capacity of the system. Why, then, one may ask, is this new intake tunnel being built at a cost of half a million dollars?

Taken from bottom of 93-foot shaft, looking up to sky.

The answer is: To save St. Louis, with her 700,000 people, from a water famine in the dead of winter. Two winters ago St. Louis, officials of the Waterworks Department say, was within six hours of going dry. Slush ice taken in at the old intake tower opposite Chain of Rocks clogged up the gates through which the water flows into the settling basin. A big force of men was put at work to fight the ice. They worked night and day, finally giving free passage to the water. There was water in the reservoirs only sufficient to last six hours when the difficulty was overcome. Every winter such a situation menaces St. Louis, particularly in extremely cold winters, and for that reason this new intake plant is being added to the present one.

At the new intake tower, which will arise 700 feet east and 300 feet north of the old one, a more modern arrangement for the inflow of water will be constructed, so that the menace from slush ice will be reduced to a minimum.

So quietly have the contractors and engineers gone about the punching of this half-mile hole through the rock far beneath the Father of Waters that but few citizens are aware of the project. It is known, however, to tunnel men throughout the country. The job has brought to St. Louis a gathering of tunnel workers from various parts of the United States and has created at Chain of Rocks a new temporary village that is not lacking in picturesque features. The cluster of wooden buildings constructed for the accommodation of the men in charge and of the workmen employed is located near the river bank. It is different from the ordinary construction camp in that there are no individual family shacks. Practically all the tunnel workers are single men. Those who are married have left their wives and children at home.



Drillers, in sou'westers and hip boots, working at tunnel facing.

There are two office buildings, one for C. H. Hollingsworth, superintendent of the work, and his staff, and another for Civil Engineer E. C. Davis, who is in charge for the city, and his assistants. Standing in a row along the river bank are three long, unpainted frame buildings. First comes the mess house, where the men take their meals. This is divided into four compartments. One is a big kitchen. The others are dining rooms for the white tunnelers, the negro tunnelers and the foremen and office men. Long board tables, covered with white oilcloth, with plank seats, serve for each set of men alike.

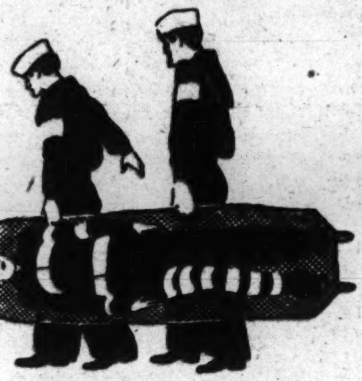
The other two buildings are bunkhouses, one for whites and one for negroes. The bunks are double-decked affairs of iron frames. The upper berth is accounted the more desirable, since its occupant is immune from being stepped upon by some wakeful man moving about in the dark.

There is nothing primitive about these camp houses except their rude construction. They are supplied with steam heat, electric lights and running water. It is promised that they will be cosy and comfortable in the dead of winter, despite the boreal blasts beating down

NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

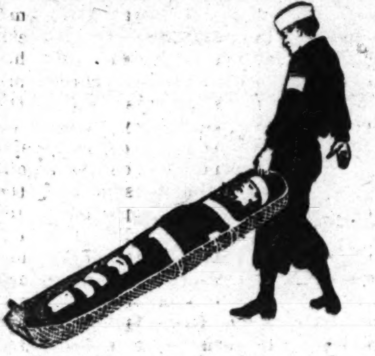
Stokes' New Naval Stretcher

WHEN necessary to move a wounded man from the street, from a factory, a mine or a ship, the question of handling him becomes grave. He must be lifted and carried in such a way as to put no strain on the injured member; he must receive no shock; he is in pain and nothing must be done that will increase this pain.



Carrying patient on his side.

Dr. C. F. Stokes, Surgeon-General of the United States Navy, spent several years in experimenting on the best method of handling injured men. He did most of the work on warships, and finally perfected a stretcher that he believes meets all requirements. This has now been adopted by the Navy Department and the stretchers are in use on all American warships.



Dragging over rough ground.

The Stokes splint stretcher, as it is called, is a basket of heavy iron wire, properly braced, long and wide enough to accommodate a man, with nickel-plated handles on the sides and at the corners. The braces also serve as runners when dragging the injured man is the only way removal can be accomplished. Within the basket a partition extends from the foot end well up toward the center. This keeps the legs separated and affords additional support. Since the majority of accidents needing a stretcher require bandaging of one or both legs the advantage of this arrangement is obvious.

Dr. Stokes' stretcher acts as a splint for the entire body, no part of which is constricted, but all of which is so securely fastened that it can be handled in any position, on the side, on the back, with head up or down, as the exigencies of the case may require. With its occupant the stretcher may be swung from a tackle and dragged up or down stairs or ladders without shock to the patient or further injury to his wound.

Danger Lies in Dust of Roads

SIR JAMES CRICHTON BROWNE, president of an English Sanitary Inspectors' Association, calls attention to the dangers from the dust of roads, warning motorists that they should be careful to dress all cuts or abrasions which lay them open to infection. The germs of tetanus are frequent on these roads and may easily be picked up by any open wound. He said, further, that road dust had become a widespread and in some places intolerable nuisance, calling for prompt abatement. The chief danger attending it was, however, tetanus, or lockjaw, a rare disease, no doubt, but one the death rate from which showed a decided increase.

All motorists and dwellers on the highway should be warned that they should keep covered and free from road dust all cuts, wounds or abrasions on the hands or face, and that they should seek immediate treatment when road dust had found its way under suspicious circumstances into one of these. Perhaps one of these days the armamentarium of a well-appointed motor car might include a tube of tetanus antitoxin for immediate application to the dust-impregnated wound.

Brightest Children Study in Coldest Room

DR. WALTER W. ROACH, supervising medical inspector of Philadelphia schools, demonstrated that pupils who are taught in an open-window classroom excel pupils taught in closed-window classrooms.

"The test was made at the Alexander Dallas Bache School, Twenty-second and Brown streets, Philadelphia, during the winter session of 1912," says Dr. Roach. "It was decided to devote one classroom, with the heat cut off and the windows wide open, to teaching in nature's air with a minimum of artificial temperature, a normal third-grade class the regular third-grade work.

"It happened that in this same school there was another class of equal number of pupils, of the same grade, occupying a room heated and ventilated in the ordinary way, so that we were able to keep accurate records and make a fair comparison.

"In order that there should be no appearance of compulsion in the matter of attendance the medical supervisor of the district first addressed a letter to the principal expressing the opinion that the stimulating effect of cool fresh air would benefit both pupils and teachers, mentally and physically, and asked that some teacher in the school volunteer to teach the children through the winter with the classroom windows wide open. Happily there was no lack of volunteers and the problem of securing a willing teacher was solved. A circular was addressed to the parents of pupils and all consented to the experiment.

"Desk chairs were provided for routine class work in order that they be readily moved aside by the pupils to clear the floor space for physical exercise.

"This freedom of desk movement also enables all children to be so seated that their eyes are properly protected from the unobstructed and unfiltered light.

"Standard platform scales with measuring attachment for quickly and accurately determining height and weight were installed. Woolen blankets, sweaters, woolen caps and hoods and knitted woolen gloves were also provided for use in exceptionally cold weather, to guard against disturbing the equilibrium of the circulation which might follow from the children sitting with their upper extremities in a stratum of air warmer than that to which their lower extremities were exposed.

"The total weight of the 44 pupils in the open-window room Sept. 30, 1912, was 2669 pounds—an average of 60 pounds. The 25 boys weighed 1526 pounds, an average of 61 pounds; the 19 girls weighed 1143 pounds, an average of 60 pounds.

"On the last school day in December (at the end of 12 weeks) the average weight of the boys was 63 pounds, an average gain of two pounds; the average weight of the girls was 62 pounds, an average gain of two pounds."

On teaching tests the average percentages were as follows: Closed-window room, 56.45; open-window room, 65.02. The closed-window room was not denied ventilation, and as its teacher was naturally anxious that her pupils make as good a showing as their competitors, she saw to it that they had more fresh air than is usual in schoolrooms.

White Bread Contains No Real Nutriment

WHITE bread contains very little nourishment. This means that as a food it has little value. And the whiter the bread the less nourishment it contains. One might as well adopt a diet of starch as of bread made from fine white flour. Whole wheat bread, graham bread, rye bread and the magnificent bread made from unbleached flour in the Italian bakeries that abound in almost all large cities in America, retain the "vitamines" or vital qualities of the wheat.

It is more important to poor people than to rich to know this. Rich people use bread generally only as an accessory of meals that are plentifully supplied with meats, eggs, vegetables, cheese and fruit, but for many poor families bread is still the "staff of life."

At the recent meeting of the British Association in Birmingham, Dr. Leonard Hill recalled that some years ago politicians were using as a campaign cry that the British workingman must not be reduced to eating "black bread," like the Germans, and added that had they then known as much about the "vitamines" of flour as they know now the black bread would have carried the day.

Modern methods of sterilization and milling are to blame for removing the nutritious qualities from our bread. The public has demanded a bread that is very white and the millers have striven to remove from the flour everything that tends to make it dark.

The best macaroni and spaghetti—such as they eat in Naples, the greater part of which is made at Gragnano—is not pure white, but a slightly yellowish gray. This is made from unbleached flour and is as nutritious as the whole wheat bread. Some spaghetti is made in America from the bleached flour. This is pure white, but contains as little nutriment as the pure white bread.

Life can be sustained on black bread and water alone, but not on white bread and water.

Russia's New Giant Aeroplane

THE St. Petersburg correspondent of the Parisian sporting journal, Aero, telegraphs to his paper that Igor Sikorsky, a student at the Technical High School of St. Petersburg, has built what is probably the biggest aeroplane which has thus far appeared. Sikorsky's machine is a biplane, the upper surface of which is somewhat larger than the lower. The span of the biplane is 27 meters and its total lifting surface is 130 square meters. The weight of the machine is 3000 kilogrammes. The aeroplane has an enormous lifting capacity. Besides 10 passengers, it is designed to carry provisions, fuel for 20 hours and a miscellaneous load of 800 kilogrammes. As might be expected, the power plant is huge. Four engines, each of 100 horsepower and each driving a screw propeller are mounted in the machine. The fuselage is of wood and is shaped to form an observation cabin, a spacious pilot house with glass windows for two pilots, a rather large cabin for passengers, stores, tools, a corridor and finally another cabin in which a couch is actually to be found for those who wish to sleep.

It is said that on Aug. 2 the machine actually made a flight with seven passengers of 90 kilometers, lasting not quite two hours, at an altitude of 500 meters, during which the pilots took turns in the pilot house and passengers walked about as if they were in a city apartment. Experiments are also said to have been made in cutting out two motors in flight and runing the machine with the remaining set of two.

Naturally these accounts of the machine's performances are received with considerable incredulity in France. To be sure, the aero-taxicab of Henri Deutsch de la Meurthe gave a good account of itself in France, but French aeroplane designers wonder how equilibrium could be maintained with passengers moving to and fro in spacious cabins. Moreover, the speed obtained, less than 25 miles an hour, seems suspiciously low for sustentation. Further details will certainly be looked for with much interest.

24-Hour Clocks

IN the timetables of all French railways the hours of the day for nearly a year have been numbered from 1 to 24; but until recently the dials of all station clocks have remained unchanged. A French inventor has now made a new double dial that gives the hours as the timetables do, and that can be easily fitted to any large clock. The outer dial contains 12 openings, through which the figures upon the revolving inner dial appear. From 1 o'clock in the morning until noon the clock faces carry the figures from 1 to 11; but at noon the inner dial automatically shifts an inch or so, and displays through the openings the figures from 12 to 23. The large clocks of the St. Lizare station in Paris have the new dial, an example that will probably be followed in all railway and town clocks throughout France.

Wireless in Church

THE Rev. Father Alfani, director of the observatory at Florence, wondered how a wireless telegraph would work if entirely inclosed in a building. He has installed in the Cathedral at Florence an antenna formed of three wires hung from the dome and falling to about 13 feet from the pavement, where they were attached to a pillar from which the single wire joining the antenna to the receivers departed. The grounding also takes place inside the cathedral, for it is produced by a branch leading to a lightning rod that rises from a pit inside one of the walls.

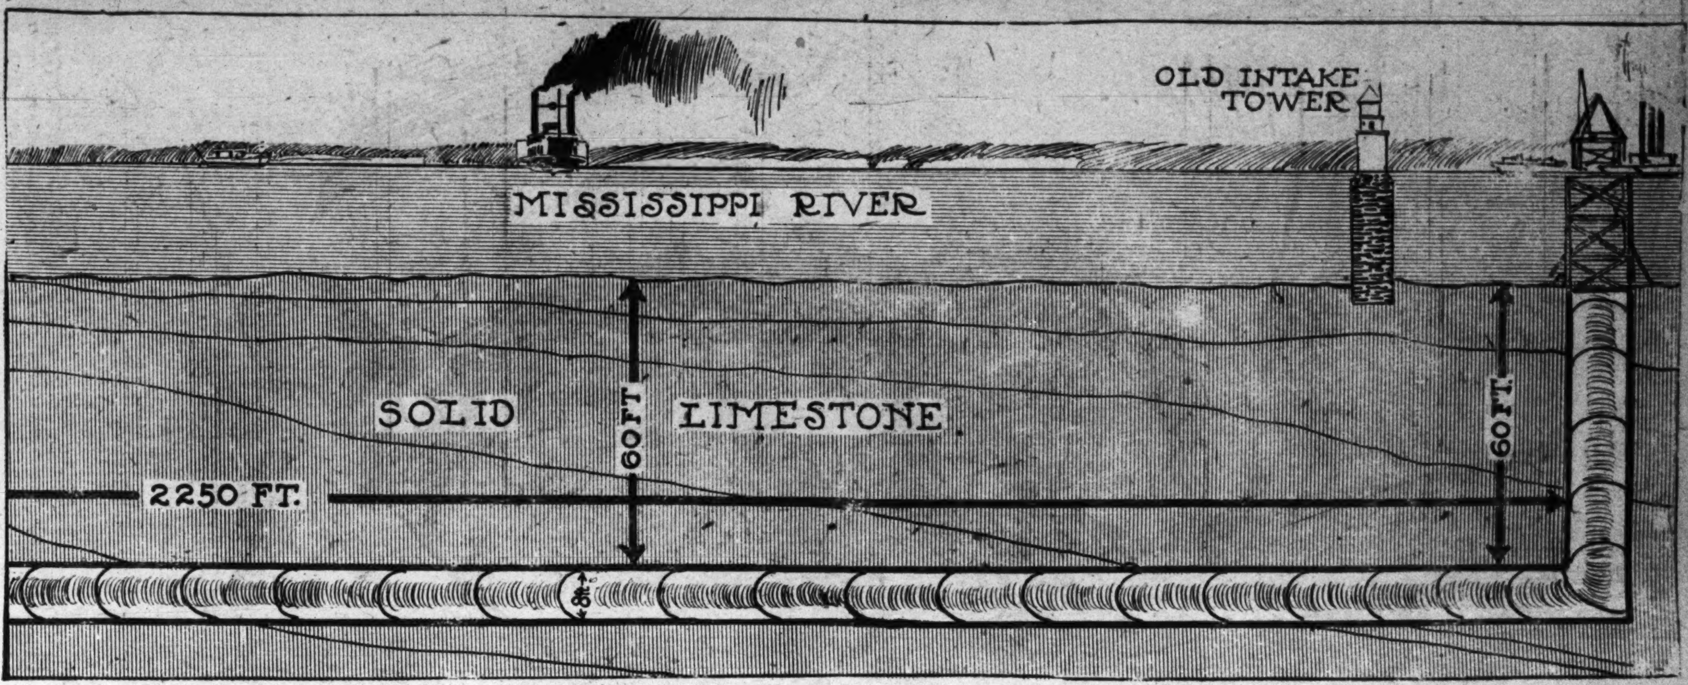
With this ingenious apparatus Father Alfani receives without difficulty messages from the Eiffel Tower in Paris, from Nordeich and from Toulon.

Tiles Stop Sound

TESTS made in 1895, at Chicago, to determine the best kind of partition for retarding sound, showed that a double tile partition with air space between was the best, the next ones in order of merit being single tile; two-inch solid plaster and expanded metal; double walls of expanded metal covered with five-eighths-inch plaster, and similar ones filled between with asbestos and mineral wool. The sound was probably carried through the double walls because of the metalic connection, notwithstanding the presence, in some cases, of insulating material.—The Engineering Magazine.

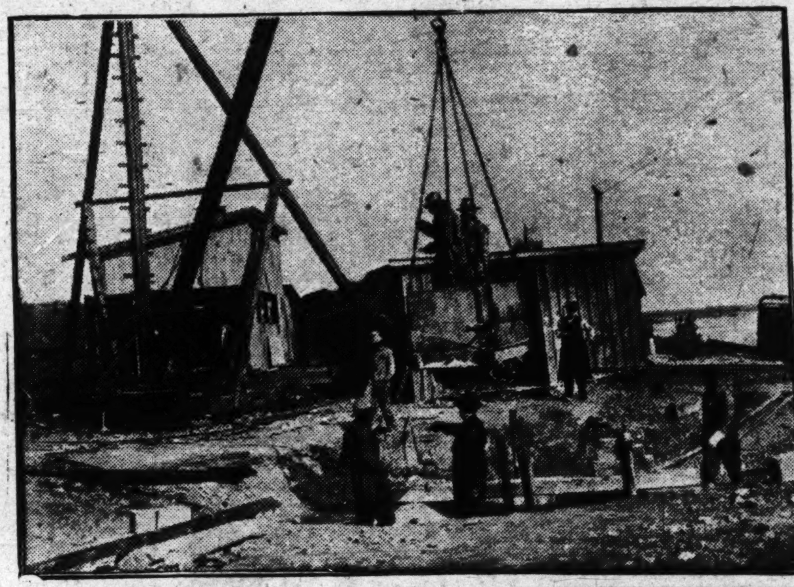
Remarkable Engineering Feat to Protect St. Louis

Against a Water Famine When Ice Clogs Old Intake



the river. Supt. Hollingsworth is a veteran tunnel builder. He was connected with the boring of the Pennsylvania Railroad tubes under the East River at New York and has engaged in tunnel construction of various kinds in other parts of the country. Drillers and muckers, the latter being the term describing the laborers underground as distinguished from the men who handle the drills, drop in from far-distant states to find work with Hollingsworth. Many of them have worked for him before, and if he has a job open he puts the applicant on the payroll and sends him down the shaft.

Anybody who cares to get a suggestion of the seashore at a whaling port such as New Bedford, or for that matter any harbor where seafaring men come and go, need but take the half-hour ride from Baden on the municipal railway that runs to Chain of Rocks. If the visitor ever has sojourned where the salt tang is in the air and the prevailing talk is of plum duff, foretops'ls and the like, he will be inclined to rub his eyes and wonder if that wide stretch of inland water to the northward is not in fact an arm of the briny deep, for he will see groups of men standing or moving about who look precisely like sailors clad for stormy weather, or perhaps just as much like clam diggers garbed for a rainy day's work on the tide flats.



Mouth of tunnel shaft, showing men about to descend in cage.

The men who are putting through the St. Louis sub-river tunnel wear rubber boots, hip-high. Their backs are protected by oilcloth coats. On their heads they wear sou'westers, by means of which a Cape Cod resorter is able to distinguish a true seafaring man from a mere landlubber. Such a get-up is necessary. It is damp down there beneath the Mississippi. Water seeps through the limestone from above, from the sides and from below. Pumps are kept going to prevent the tunnel from filling and thus drowning the men. In spite of the pumping, however, the men sometimes work in water above their knees.

The tunnel is illuminated by electricity. The bore is being driven in each direction from the foot of the shaft. The land end will terminate at the "wet well," where the water will flow into the settling basin. At the other end it will terminate at the foot of an intake tower to be built of granite. The crib for this tower already has been placed. The tunnelers are making a straight shoot for the crib and must hit the exact spot with the final blast.

Crib for new intake tower at river end of tunnel now being built.

One of the interesting features of the work already done was the boring of four deep holes in the rock bed of the river, where the water is 20 feet deep at the present low stage, for the anchoring of the crib. When the new tower is completed there will be on duty at all times a watchman who, though several hundred feet away, will be company for the man who occupies the old intake tower. For 23 years, since the old tower was built, this man's job has been accounted the loneliest in this part of the world, particularly in seasons when the river is full of floating ice and it is impossible for him to get ashore or to receive visitors for weeks at a time.

The rock "chain" through which the tunnel is being bored may be described as a great backbone of limestone protruding up from the general level of the subterranean bedrock. This backbone stretches up and down the river for approximately one mile. Before work on the tunnel began, diamond drills were used to take "soundings." The drills penetrated to a depth of 130 feet, the cores showing solid rock all the way. It was not necessary to ascertain how much deeper the rock extends.

"For all we know or care," remarked one of the engineers, "the rock may extend clean through to China. We may say, at any rate, that this tunnel is being bored through the middle of a rock weighing approximately 2,000,000 tons, figuring a rock depth of 140 feet and using the mile width of the backbone and the 2766-foot length of the bore."

Nowhere else along the entire length of the Mississippi is there such a formation as the limestone bed which gives this place its picturesque name, Chain of Rocks. Nowhere else, therefore, would it be possible to bore such a tunnel. The rock bottom extends nearly all the way across the stream. Here and there at low water "the bottom sticks out through the top," as a riverman has expressed it. The channel of the river is always deep enough there for the passage of steamboats, and because the stream flows through a ravine with a rock bottom and sides the Chain of Rocks is one place where there is no possibility of the shifting of the channel. Thus St. Louis always is assured of getting a fresh-water supply.

A new settling basin, to be used for the water supplied through the new tunnel, is under construction at Chain of Rocks. This project will cost half a million dollars, making the entire improvement a million-dollar job.

The urgent necessity for the new intake was illustrated early in January, 1912, when, on account of ice-clogging, only three of the six huge pumps at the Chain of Rocks station were working. The city required at that time 120,000,000 gallons of water a day. The three pumps in working order could supply only about 75,000,000 gallons. The weather was bitterly cold. Ice known as "salt rock" or "mush" got into the tunnel through the two-inch gratings at the tower. The elevators which hoist the ice out of the "wet well" at the land terminus of the tunnel broke down. There was imminent danger that the tunnel would freeze up, thus completely cutting off the supply in the dead of winter.

For a short time the public schools were closed on account of the low water pressure, which shut off the heating apparatus. Thousands of men were thrown out of work temporarily because of the necessary closing down of laundries and other industries requiring a large supply of water. The dearth of water for steam heating in business buildings and residences caused great discomfort. Hotels and apartment houses felt keenly the insufficiency of water. Four clerks in the water department were kept busy several days answering complaints. Capt. Robert McCulloch, head of the United Railways, declared that there must be a complete tieup of the street car service if the water famine held out much longer.

Former Water Commissioner Ben C. Adkins said at the time: "St. Louis is now absolutely incapable of coping with a large conflagration. The water pressure is insufficient. The water supply of the entire city depends upon keeping the intake tunnel free from freezing. If it were to clog and freeze for a single moment it would probably burst and thus shut off the supply for months."

Water Commissioner E. E. Wall and other officials in the department spent several nights at the intake tower, directing the large force of men engaged in fighting the ice. Hundreds of men worked there constantly, spearing away the floating chunks of ice which were gorging and choking the tunnel. The cold was so severe that they worked in short shifts.

It was a grave emergency, and the general public did not become aware of the fact until the shortage of water required an explanation. That experience convinced St. Louis that it must have a new intake plant, with centrifugal pumps instead of the old pumps of the Allis type. Out of that emergency came the project for building the new tower and boring the new tunnel upon which work now is going forward steadily. The work was authorized by act of Congress.

THINGS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

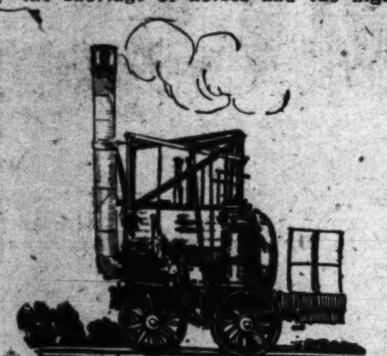
Locomotive 100 Years Old

IT is just 100 years since the first locomotive ran upon rails. Puffing Billy, the engine which inaugurated modern railroading, still exists and may be seen on its pedestal in a place of honor in the Science Museum at South Kensington—that is, unless a recent question as to its identity be answered in the negative, in which case it is a slightly later engine, but still the earliest now in existence.

Stationary steam engines had already been in use for a score of years. They were the Boulton and Watt beam engines, using very low pressure steam and relying on the vacuum obtained by condensing it in a separate vessel containing cold water. In 1802 Richard Trevithick, a Cornish engineer, patented an engine with no beam, using high-pressure steam and exhausting it into the air after it had done its work. This made the engine so compact that it could be used in any [illegible]ition not necessarily stationary. It was tested in hauling cars laden with iron from the Panydarren Iron Furnaces in South Wales—to Navigation House, more than nine miles away. The tracks along which these cars ran were flat iron plates, with a flange to prevent the wheels from running off. Trevithick's engine broke the track and was set up to help run the rolling mill.

Other attempts of a similar nature also proved failures, for all the engineers of that day worked on the erroneous idea that a smooth wheel would slip on a smooth rail if an attempt were made to draw a load after it. Therefore they made use of rack rails, chains, movable legs and other such devices.

In October, 1812, Christopher Blackett, proprietor of the Wylam Colliery, facing the necessity of hauling coal five miles to the River Tyne and being embarrassed by the shortage of horses and the high cost of provender due to the Napoleonic wars, determined to try steam power. He asked William Hedley, the overseer of the collieries, to undertake the work. Hedley was not afraid of the bugbear of smooth rails and smooth wheels. He made experiments with a little model which satisfied him that the friction or adhesion of smooth wheels on smooth rails was sufficient. To make quite sure, he constructed an underframe on four wheels the full width of the colliery plateway, which was worked by men at cranks standing on platforms attached to the frame. Different known weights of iron were placed on it, and wagons from two up to six in number attached successively. The relationship between the weights and the load when slipping took place was found to be practically the same in every case.



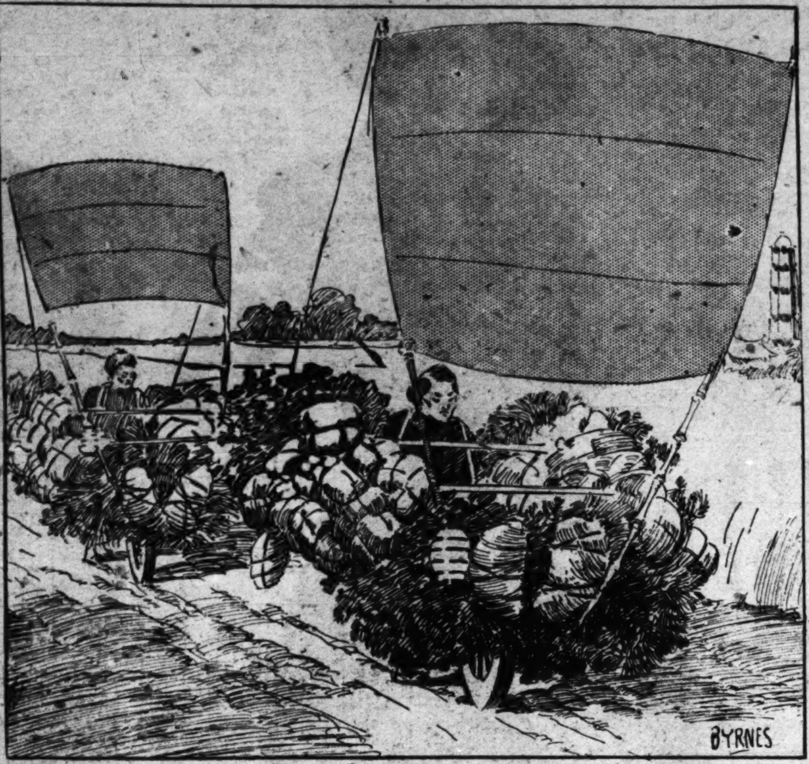
"Puffing Billy," the oldest if not the first locomotive.

With the assistance of Timothy Hackworth, the enginewright of the colliery (subsequently well known as a locomotive engineer), Jonathan Foster, the blacksmith, and Tommy Waters, a Gateshead iron founder, Hedley began the construction of the steam engine. It had a single horizontal cylinder and a fly-wheel, while the boiler was of cast iron, with the fire tube straight through it. The result, however, was not very successful, principally because the steam-raising capacity was insufficient. Another machine was therefore started.

This time the boiler was of malleable iron, with a fire tube of U-shape returning through it; consequently the fireman had to stoke at the chimney end. There were two cylinders placed vertically, and each piston rod was attached to a beam which consequently had a peculiar "grasshopper" motion. A connecting rod hung from the beam and turned a crank shaft on the underframe that supported the boiler and in turn the engine. A pinion on the crankshaft geared with cogwheels on the two axles.

This rude machine, which was set to work in the middle of 1813, was found capable of dragging after it as many as eight loaded wagons at the rate of four or five miles an hour, i. e., more quickly than horses could do, and as costs soon [illegible] more economically. Naturally, the construction of several other

Chinese Market Gardeners Sail Truck in Wheelbarrows



THE sailing wheelbarrows of China are a sight to delight the eyes of an old salt stranded inland, particularly in the Shensi district, where mile-long processions of these queer vehicles may be met with, says Popular Mechanics. Wheelbarrow transportation would be almost impossible in this district, due to the blown sand, were it not for the ingeniously devised sails. Night and day, for months at a stretch without ceasing, the wind blows steadily from west to east at an average velocity of more than fifteen miles an hour. Luckily, this chances to be the direction of the country's produce transportation, so that the heaviest laden of the barrow craft are able to "make port" with a fair wind. A wind "dead astern," however, is by no means absolutely necessary, for, by ingeniously contrived supports on the sides of the barrows, the sails may be set to take advantage of almost every slant of breeze.

With a 20-mile wind astern and a not too "choppy sea" in the road, a Shensi coolie will trot along behind his load of 1000 or 1500 pounds, at a speed of six or seven miles an hour, with scarcely more exertion than a sailor in spinning the steering wheel of a schooner running before a fresh sou'easter. A barrow sailor has to watch his canvas just as closely as does a sailor of the seas, and a gusty wind forces one to reef just as quickly as it does the other.

HEALTH HINTS

IT takes 15 days for the average human body to recover from the loss of two consecutive nights' sleep.

THE hard crust of bread is more easily digested than the soft crumb because it must be thoroughly masticated.

MILK, because it contains so much lime, is one of the best foods for the teeth, which often decay for the lack of lime.

GREEN peas should never be given to children, because they are likely to swallow them unchewed, in which case they are not digested.

THE best diet for anemic girls is made up of blood sausage, spinach, cabbage, carrots and eggs, because they contain so much iron.

MOST of the excrescences commonly called corns are really warts. They are easily cured.

Be Careful in Choice of Soap

THAT many dangers cling to alkaline soaps is emphasized editorially by the London Lancet, in which attention is called to the large proportion of mineral ash and alkali in dearer toilet soaps. When these soaps, after being dissolved in water, touch the skin an excessive secretion of the acid sebum and sweat follows, and the protective outer layer of the skin, the epithelium, is partially dissolved. This means intense irritation, which is apt to lead to skin complications.

In the cheaper soaps the cottonseed oil and rancid fats used are responsible for considerable irritation. Castor oil soap is found least irritating, but it dissolves rather too freely and is apt to become rancid. Cocoanut oil soap is decidedly irritating and palm oil soap is less so, while tallow soap is least irritating of all.

Fourth Dimension Explains Gravitation

A THEORY of gravitation that depends on our acceptance of the existence of a fourth dimension of space is propounded by A. G. Blake, a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, in Knowledge. Dr. Blake's explanation depends on the fact that the density of a body may be regarded as our perception of its thickness in a fourth dimension, says the Literary Digest. If all bodies were equally dense, their weight would depend only on their volume. If density is thickness in a fourth dimension, weight is proportional to four-dimensional volume. The type of theory that explains gravitation as due to impact of systems of waves or moving particles has always met with a stumbling block in the fact that weight is proportional to density as well as to volume. If density is simply another dimension, then this trouble is avoided.

NUMBER THREE

Dorothy Breakfasts in Bed

DOROTHY is 18. Her life at this time is a continual testimonial to the correctness of her mother's theory that her daughter must have a "good time" all the time. At least it seems to outsiders that no one could be sweeter than Dorothy. It didn't seem so to Brother Bill or Mr. Perkins, and if Mrs. Perkins was truthful with herself, which we doubt, she would have to acknowledge that Dorothy's manner with her family was not quite Dorothy's manner with others. Dorothy's motto seemed to be "Be it ever so tiresome, there's no place like home." On this particular morning, near noon, she has just remarked to her mother that she wished she would set down her breakfast and leave her alone, as she didn't like being smiled at just as she was waking up.

Mrs. Perkins had another theory that Dorothy didn't mean any of the rude and heartless things she said. That underneath this mean manner her daughter was as sweet and affectionate and unselfish as they made them.

She was really hurt, though she wouldn't admit it.

The fact of the whole matter is that Dorothy was helped by her mother's daily purrings, kept asleep in a sensuous dream of self, and it will take drastic measures to awaken the young woman. It is almost unnecessary to state that Dorothy Perkins at this age is not a numerous type.

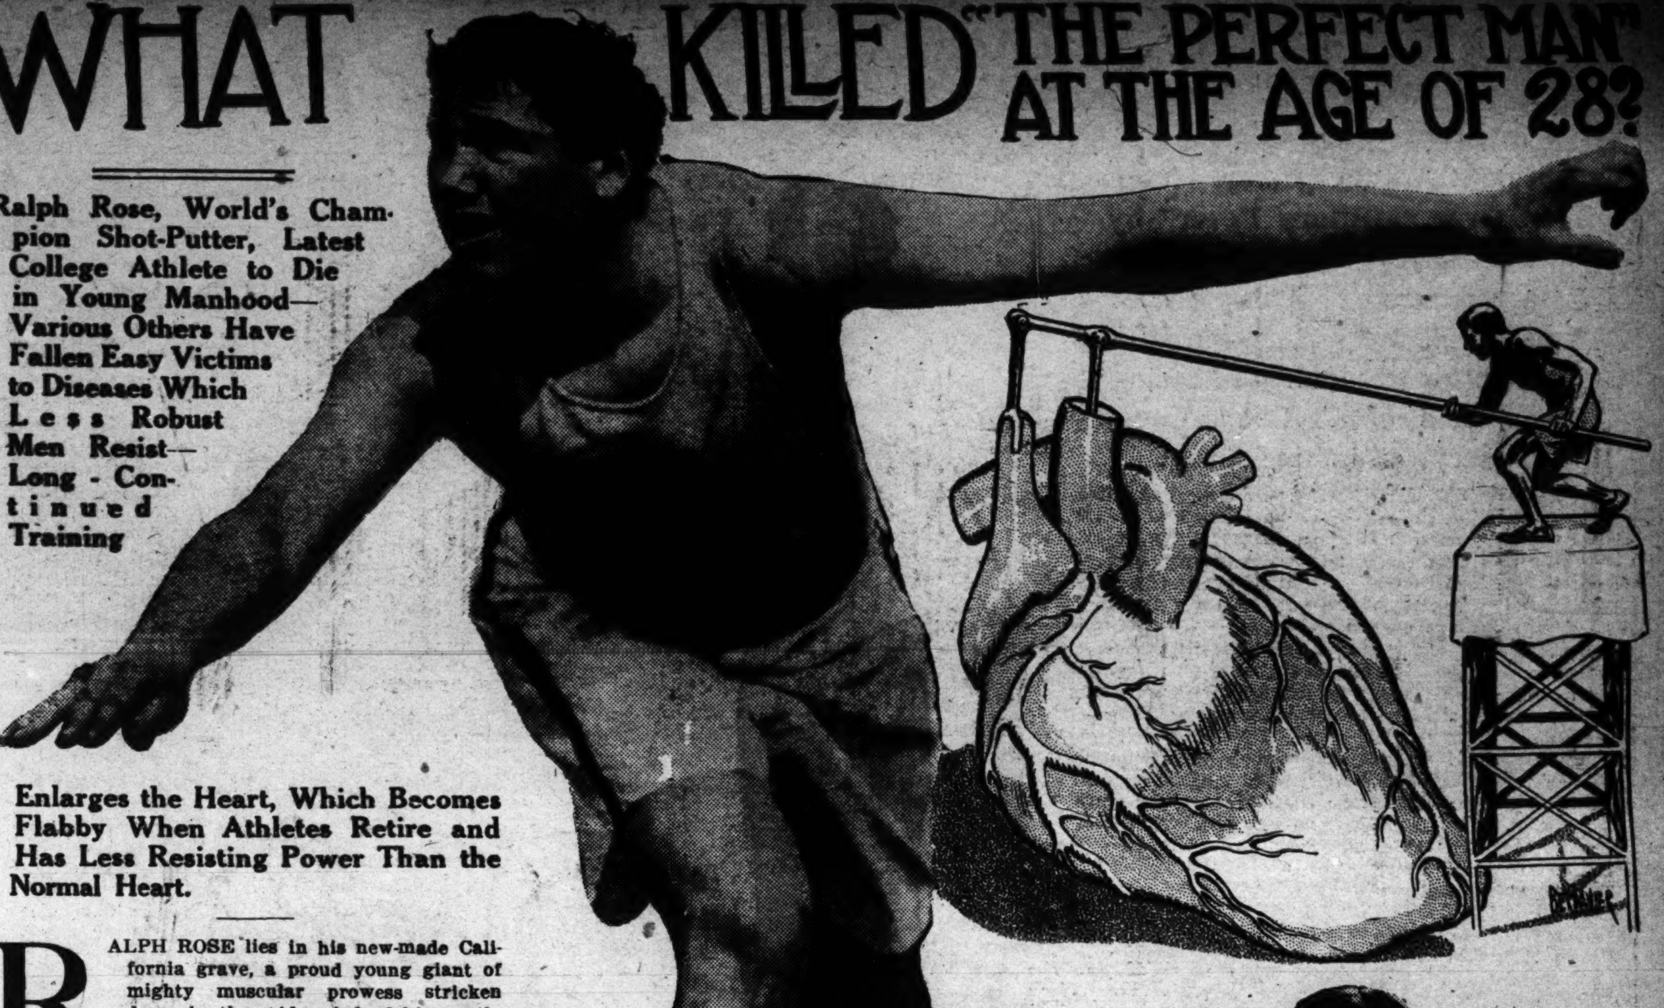
WHAT KILLED "THE PERFECT MAN" AT THE AGE OF 28?

Ralph Rose, World's Champion Shot-Putter, Latest College Athlete to Die in Young Manhood—Various Others Have Fallen Easy Victims to Diseases Which Less Robust Men Resist—Long-Continued Training



RALPH ROSE, world's champion shot-putter, dead at 28.

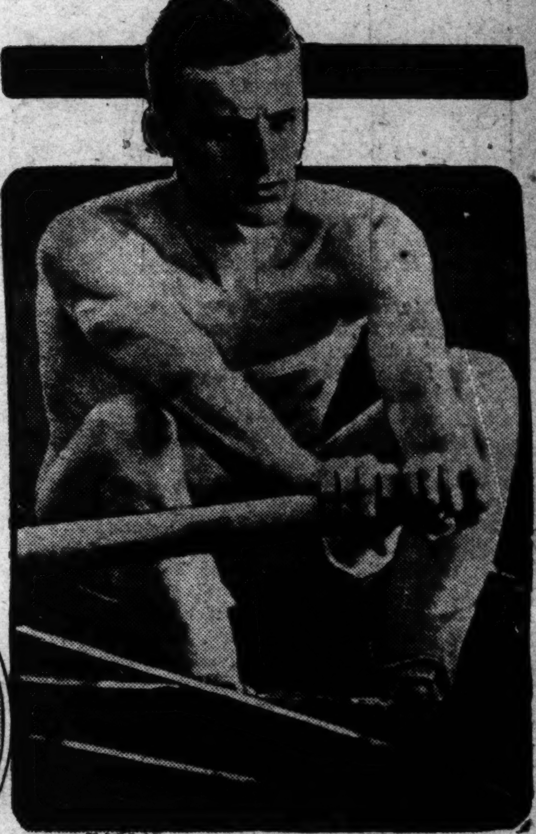
Enlarges the Heart, Which Becomes Flabby When Athletes Retire and Has Less Resisting Power Than the Normal Heart.

JACOB WENDELL Jr., Harvard athlete.

WILLIAM A. M. BURDEN, Harvard football captain, who succumbed to a chronic ailment which puzzled physicians.

JAMES J. HOGAN, Yale football star, victim of Bright's disease.

FRANCIS GORDON BROWN, Yale football captain, victim of diabetes.



DWIGHT T. GRISWOLD, Yale stroke oarsman, who died a few months after collapsing in shell in 'varsity race.

RALPH ROSE lies in his new-made California grave, a proud young giant of mighty muscular prowess stricken down in the mid-period of his youth. At 28 Ralph Rose is dead—Ralph Rose, "the perfect man," as he was acclaimed 10 years ago by the physical director of the University of Michigan and as he has become known throughout the world.

The press reports said briefly that Ralph Rose died from typhoid fever, "after a brief illness." Thousands of measurably puny men, who never evinced any unusual physical powers, have resisted typhoid for weeks, and after the infection had run its course, have recovered. Ralph Rose succumbed in a few days. This physical giant, pronounced perfect in all his proportions, conforming symmetrically to the standard adduced by exact measurements, a Hercules in strength, an Adonis in manly beauty, went down quickly under the onslaught of typhoid.

On this page is printed the theory of a heart specialist which is offered as a probable explanation of Rose's inability to withstand the attack. In view of the young athlete's history from infancy, which is such as to uphold the common belief that outdoor exercise and a plain, simple diet are conductive to long life, the question naturally arises: Why is Ralph Rose cut off in his twenty-ninth year?

Rose was born and reared on a farm, or, as it is called in California, a ranch. Near Healdsburg, Cal., he grew up, living an outdoor life from babyhood. His family was well-to-do and the boy had every advantage for both physical and mental development. He took early to athletic sports, and at 14 years of age was noted as "the strong boy" of his neighborhood.

In the high school at Healdsburg he won various honors in running, jumping, shot-putting and hammer-throwing, and when at 19 he entered the University of Michigan, he was accepted at once as a student who would add largely to the athletic prestige of Ann Arbor. When he was measured, and by reason of those measurements declared to be "the perfect man," he was 6 feet 6 inches tall and weighed 245 pounds. His chest measured 48 inches, his waist 38, his upper arms 17, his forearms 14, his thighs 26 and his calves 17. "Athletic training," said an expert at the time, "has made him into a man as symmetrical and powerful as the models of the ancient Greeks."

Rose won at his first athletic contest at Ann Arbor three events—shot, discus and hammer. As a member of the Michigan team he equaled the world's record of 48 feet 2 inches in putting the 16-pound shot, at Philadelphia in 1904, and then beat the record by adding an inch and a half. Less than a month later, at Chicago, he put the sphere 48 feet 7 1-5 inches, but this was not allowed officially. In the Olympic games at the St. Louis World's Fair, Aug. 31, 1904, he established a new world's record of 48 feet 7 inches. At the Jamestown Exposition in 1907 Rose hurled the sphere 49 feet 6½ inches. His next advancement of the record was beyond the 50-foot mark, and finally, at San Francisco, Aug. 21, 1909, he established the record of 51 feet even, which stands today.

Rose not only was the world's greatest hurler of the 16-pound shot, but he held nearly all the world's records for lighter and heavier shots. At Los Angeles, June 12, 1912, he made a new record at shot-putting with both hands, 49 feet 10 inches with the right, 42 feet with the left. In the Olympic contests at Stockholm last year he won the 16-pound put, both hands, with a total of 90 feet 11 inches.

Rose lived on a simple diet, never being a heavy eater. He avoided pies, pastries and excessive meat eating. He used no intoxicants—in those days—and always insisted upon getting plenty of sleep.

After the Stockholm games Rose returned to San Francisco, where he was preparing himself for the practice of law. He dropped out of athletics and he grew very much heavier. He had increased in the past few years to 280 pounds, and when not in training for a considerable period he would go above 300. For a dozen years or more he had kept himself in training most of the time. He stopped, rather suddenly. He is dead.

What, then, killed Ralph Rose? Was it "athlete's heart," the hypertrophy caused by his long career of violent muscular exertion, leaving, after a period of inactivity, a flabby vital organ? The belief of some medical men is that Ralph Rose was assassinated by athletics.

Many other college athletes have died young, after leaving school, abandoning the forms of athletics in which they excelled, and settled down to the less exciting business of making a living. The list of them if all the names were grouped together, would make a startling inditement against athletics, in case the grand jury of scientific detectives should return a true bill in each case.

The list of victims would include Francis Gordon

What Too Strenuous Exercise Does to the Heart.

A ST. LOUIS physician who makes a specialty of treating ailments of the heart offers this theory as to the death of Ralph Rose:

"It is probable that the young man's heart was hypertrophied by the extreme and violent exercise of athletic work, and after cessation of such exercise became flabby, thus rendering it less capable of withstanding the poison of typhoid than it would have been in the normal state.

"Hypertrophy is an undue development of the heart, which is a muscle. When athletes, as they generally do, stop their strenuous exercise suddenly and lapse back into inactive life, this enlargement, of course, remains, and as the subject returns to heavy diet the heart tends to flabbiness, just as does any other muscle over-developed by unusual exercise. The heart then is in a condition to be attacked by typhoid or pneumonia poison without the normal resisting power.

"College athletes, who usually go into business or professional life shortly after leaving school, make a mistake in suddenly leaving off athletic pursuits. They should slow down gradually."

BUCKO LOGAN

By Perceval Gibbon

swept them in a paroxysm of haste and labor; and when all was done he was the only one of them to land on deck again without quickened breath and aching muscles.

All that afternoon it breezed up with growing force in the true Cape Horn style, raising a strong running sea. The second dog-watch saw the first of the snow; by eight bells they were in the thick of it and all hands were resigned to stand by all night. The men gathered at the break of the poop, bundled in their thickest clothing, with oilskins over all, dodging the wind that carried the chill of ice down on them and watching the snow as it drove over them in thickening clouds.

A barometer is by no means so sensitive as that bundle of nerves, memories and intuitions which constitute the weather-wisdom of a good sailor; and the captain, who believed in his barometer, was late in waking to the fact that three lower topsails and a staysail were too much for the Etna to carry. This fact he realized at that particular moment, when all possibility of handling the topsails was definitely past. The sky to the northwest seemed to open and a dull light to show through, the Horn's authentic ensign of wind in reserve, or re-enforcements of tempest advancing to the attack. He popped his blond head in the companion and consulted the barometer; then scuttled back to where his two mates were together behind the weather-dodger.

"Gosh," he said, in tones of protest; "it's still falling."

"Yes, sir," answered Logan; "there's a lot more coming."

The captain twisted inside his clothes uneasily and put his hands up to shield his eyes from the driving snow while he looked for'ard. The Etna rose just then to a sea, rolling to leeward, as she did so, and again the foretopsail flattened and filled again with a jolt that shook the ship.

"Mind your helm there!" roared the captain over his shoulder to the two men who strained at the kicking wheel.

He stepped under the shelter of the dodger again, eager to be out of the wind.

"We'll have to get them tops'ls off her," he said, and hesitated. "I suppose we can furl 'em?" he asked.

The mate grunted doubtfully. Logan, who had not ceased to keep his lookout to windward, turned.

"No," he said. "You'll have to lose 'em, sir."

The captain stared at him. "Eh?" he cried. "What d'ye mean? Ain't you got your chaps in shape yet, or what? Tops'ls must be mighty cheap where you come from, Mr. Second Mate."

He could see that Logan was smiling at him. "Yes, mighty cheap," he repeated, shrilly.

"They're cheaper where they're going to," answered Logan. "Look what's coming."

The captain looked. The dull light to windward had brightened, so that its reflection was seen on the sea. It was a pale opalescence lying low on the horizon.

"See?" said Logan, with a thrill in his voice. "Shall we start the sheets now?"

The captain's fingers plucked at his lips.

"Ye-es," he said. "Start 'em."

Logan crammed his sou'wester down on his head and sprang to the ladder with the mate at his heels.

"Tops'l sheets," he roared, vociferous at last, and in the same breath; "Hang on all! Hang on!"

Noble Speaks His Mind.

IT was as though some conscious and infinitely hostile force had gathered its strength for a single blow. The wind lulled for a moment as though it drew breath; from the main deck the hands in a troop clawed their way to the refuge of the poop. Then out of the darkness, in a single vehemence of power, the wind smashed down on them. The ship stood on the impact as though she had struck ground, and with a rending noise the mizzen topsail blew from the bolt ropes. Seas climbed the rail to thunder down the deck in a quick succession of staggering blows, and the Etna, straining and shivering, laid her long side down, canted her deck till they thought she was going over for good.

"I want one man," cried Logan. "One man to lend me a hand with them sheets."

He turned forthwith and made his way to the ladder, conscious that a man in oilskins was following him. Logan turned and peered into the face of the man.

"You, Noble," he said.

"Yes, sir," answered the old man.

It was chancy work getting for'ard, and once they had to hang on desperately to ring-bolts in the deck while a sea stamped over them and half drowned them. When they emerged, Noble's sou'wester was gone and his clothes hung on him in rags. A sea racing to leeward across a deck will sometimes strip a man naked. The fore fire-rails were heaped with tangled ropes; they labored desperately before they could clear the sheets ready to run. All the time they could barely see one another, and worked with a fear that a sea might leap upon them and make an end of their striving.

"All clear," cried Logan at last. He had been finding the end of the chain-sheets, and, at the word, Noble slacked off, twisted it from the pin, and let it race aloft, roaring through its sheave. With a sound like blowing off steam from a boiler, the sail tore and the Etna rolled back, righted and wallowed. Noble, with both arms wrapped round the fire-rail, felt the water cascading over him. She came to an even keel and freed him, gasping and weak. Something had floated between his legs. It stirred, and murmured.

"Good Lord!" cried Noble.

Logan panted a little; Noble could only see his face as a pale blot on the wet deck.

"Sheet was round my legs," said the second mate, very deliberately. His voice seemed no quieter than of wont. "Both broken," he added.

"You blame fool!' cried Noble, aghast. "Couldn't you step clear?"

The Etna was upright again, and for the moment shipped no water. But the snow thrashed down upon them unceasingly, and the wind sung shrilly in the rigging.

"Drag me for'ard, under the foc'sle head," Logan said.

Noble stared down at him, gathering his wits. "Why?" he asked, at length.

"She's falling off," was the answer, still measured and deliberate. "There'll be water aboard again in a minute. Haul me careful, mind."

"I ain't goin' to haul you at all," replied Noble. "Not a haul, Mister Logan."

"Why?" said Logan. It was strange to hear that equable voice speaking up from the deck, in its tones of every day.

"I'll tell you," said Noble. "I'll stay by you till I've told you if I go overboard with you." He was on his knees by the second mate's side, and he still had to shout to make himself heard. "It's your bucko style that don't suit me," he said. "This is the end of it. You're the finest sailor that ever I see, Mr. Logan; but the bucko business had done for you."

The prone man made no answer; his face still looked up.

"You ain't never laid a hand on me," Noble went on. "And why? 'Cos I done my job and done it right and shipshape. But if I was to make a mess of a job, where'd I be? On my back with a broken jaw. An' it don't seem right to me that men before the mast should be pounded like little boys that don't know their book, or like horses that won't pull. If you want to punch here and there when you felt like it, I'd have nothing to growl about; I been workin' on ships since I was 12. But this punishment game's got to stop."

"I hear you," answered Logan.

"Right," said Noble. "And you get the idea?"

"Yes," was the reply. "Hang on."

"Eh?" said Noble.

"Hang on," said Logan. "She's goin' to roll."

She gave a sickening heave, and Noble had barely time to find a hold and fasten to it when the water came aboard. It thrust him under the fife-rail and against the mast; it wrapped him in rasping coils of rope and pushed his head back like a wrestler. Only the mast to leeward of him saved him; when he was clear again he could hardly stand on his feet. And now he was alone.

Aft on the poop they were seizing a folded awning into the mizzen rigging to bring her head up. He told his news—that the second mate was overboard—and lent a hand with the work. When it was over, Fullerton took him by the arm.

"Say," said the American; "it wasn't you that killed him, eh?"

"No," said Noble.

"If it was," said Fullerton, "I'd settle you. I'd something to say to Bucko before I was through with him."

"I didn't do nothing to him," said Noble, wearily. "But, Jim, the sea's no place for an old man."

What Killed "The Perfect Man" at Age of 28?

Brown, Yale football captain, nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan. Brown, who captained his team in 1900 and did much coaching for it after he left college, died in May, 1911, of diabetes. It is said by those who hold that athletic excess permanently weakens the system that this disease proves to be particularly deadly when it affects athletes. Brown had spent the fall season coaching the Yale team. He returned to office duties at the close of the season. He had been, it is said, a picture of health up to that time, but he began almost immediately to decline. The indoor occupation kept him from taking the amount of exercise to which he had been accustomed for so long.

James J. Hogan, one of Yale's most indomitable spirits in football, died a few years after he left college. Dr. G. Austin Flint, a noted authority, once advised athletes to do well always, but do their utmost only occasionally. "Jimmie" Hogan did his utmost always. He was captain of the team in 1904 and for several seasons was a bright particular star on the gridiron. They called him "the mighty Hogan." When he left school his friends predicted a long and useful career for him, a man with such a surplus of physical energy being expected in the nature of things to do something notable in business life. "Big Bill" Edwards, Street Commissioner in New York, appointed Hogan his assistant in 1909. Hogan died March 21, 1910.

Commissioner Edwards expressed the opinion that Hogan's death was due to exposure when he underwent the work of supervising the removal of snow from the streets of Manhattan the last winter of his life. Here was an admission which the opponents of strenuous athleticism used as an argument against it. Hogan, severely trained on the football field, could not withstand the exposure incident to the "bossing" of the snow squad, in which were ordinary men with cart and shovel who worked in snow and slush day by day throughout the winter and kept their health. Hogan first had a nervous breakdown. Then kidney trouble developed. He died from Bright's disease, complicated with an acute attack of grip. One of his physicians said:

"Jim's breakdown probably was due more to his inability to obtain sufficient exercise since leaving college than to anything else."

Hogan never drank intoxicants. He never smoked. His rigid adherence to a routine in training, through long years of preparatory school and university life, had given him regular habits in eating and sleeping. Yet when he got into business life and gave up his athletics he fell an early victim to disease. Here is a significant thing that was written about him just after he died:

"Hogan had what many men given to great physical training have—an enlarged heart. In some cases this is due to the aortic valve giving way. With a man such as Hogan was, however, it was the result of the exceptional work he was called upon to do. Like the muscles, the heart had increased in size from the exercise and training. But the muscles had grown larger and more powerful at the expense of the heart, it was explained. Hogan, it was said, found too late that his heart had been irreparably injured by the strain he had put upon it. Not heeding, he paid the penalty with his life at an age when he should have been at his best in physical power."

Another name on the list is that of Dwight T. Griswold. He pulled stroke oar for Yale in the Yale-Harvard varsity race on the Thames River at New London in 1908—that is, he pulled until he collapsed and was taken out of the shell at the three-mile mark. Yale finished with only seven men, nearly a mile behind Harvard. Six months later Griswold died. Typhoid fever was the direct cause. The weakening of his heart by such excessive exertion as that which caused him to crumple up and fall forward at his oar when the assembled thousands were cheering him on to victory at New London may have had something to do with his inability to resist the disease, it is believed by some who studied his case.

William A. M. Burden, who captained one of Harvard's most successful football teams, survived his college days only 10 years. He died in 1909, of an ailment which puzzled the physicians. The symptoms were said to be something like those in typhoid fever, but it was a chronic, not an acute malady. Burden spent four years of the severest training and activity on the gridiron.

William Wendell Jr. was a young millionaire who by athletic prowess earned his Harvard "H." After graduation he went on the stage. He suffered a nervous breakdown on the road and died of pneumonia, early in 1910, at the beginning of a promising career.

Sprinting is one of the severest forms of exercise. A long run, in competition with men trying for a record, tries the powers of endurance to the utmost. Among the runners who made a national reputation in college was John B. Taylor, a negro. He wore the colors of the University of Pennsylvania. He was the intercollegiate and the national champion for the quarter mile. Taylor died a few months after his graduation, in 1908. He had been out of athletics since school closed in June. In November he succumbed to typhoid-pneumonia.

The list is long and the names are shining ones in college athletics. The foregoing few will serve as samples. America is coming to be known as the nation of athletes. It is computed that about 10,000,000 persons, one-tenth of the entire population, are engaged in some form of athletic activity. Comparatively few, however, engage in the severer forms which put upon the physical faculties demands which nature did not intend.

William Muldoon, once a famous wrestler and now a physical trainer of the professional sort, says this:

"The man who has trained as an athlete makes his heart demand exercise at regular intervals. It is the athlete's duty therefore to see that he takes the exercise his heart requires. If he suddenly stops all training and neglects to take any physical exercise, or if he dissipates, he must naturally expect that his body will become fagged, and he will have to suffer the consequences."

New Models of Noted Artists

heads and symbolic pictures which have made his work famous.

True Spanish types are not common in this country, either in society or among the artists' models. There are several from Mexico, but as a rule they show traces of other nationalities. Louise Billings is not only a good Spanish type with her dark hair and eyes and olive complexion, but has the distinction of having one of the most perfect heads to be found in any nationality. Alonzo Kimball, Carroll Beckwith and Howard Giles all paint her. Christy, Underwood, James Montgomery Flagg and Arthur Keller use her in their illustrations. Miss M. C. Barker finds her a good subject for her charming miniatures. Henry Mosler has exhibited an ideal head of her here and abroad. Caponi, too, has found a market for her head abroad.

From sunny Italy Regena Cipriani comes with her beauty typical of the South of Italy. George Davidson, who won the most recent Roman competition with his painting, "Work," used Miss Cipriani for all the female figures in that piece. John Alexander uses her and Victor Brenner does many of his ethereal figures from her. Miss Cipriani has transformed herself into a Cleopatra for Edward Beemer.

"A Botticelli angel come to life," exclaimed A. P. Lucas, the painter, when he first laid eyes on Miss Grace Hudson, a Western girl, who walked into his studio for her first pose. Gibson refused to call her anything but Cimonetti and said she was the most paintable person he knew. Francis Jones said she had the most wonderful hands in America.

Miss Hudson posed for the paintings "Reflection" and "The Crystal," exhibited by Robert Reid a year ago. At an exhibition last spring she was seen in Louis Bernaker's "Lady in Gray," and Francis Jones' "The Letter." J. Alden Weir, Warren Davis and Victor Brenner also have found her a valuable model.

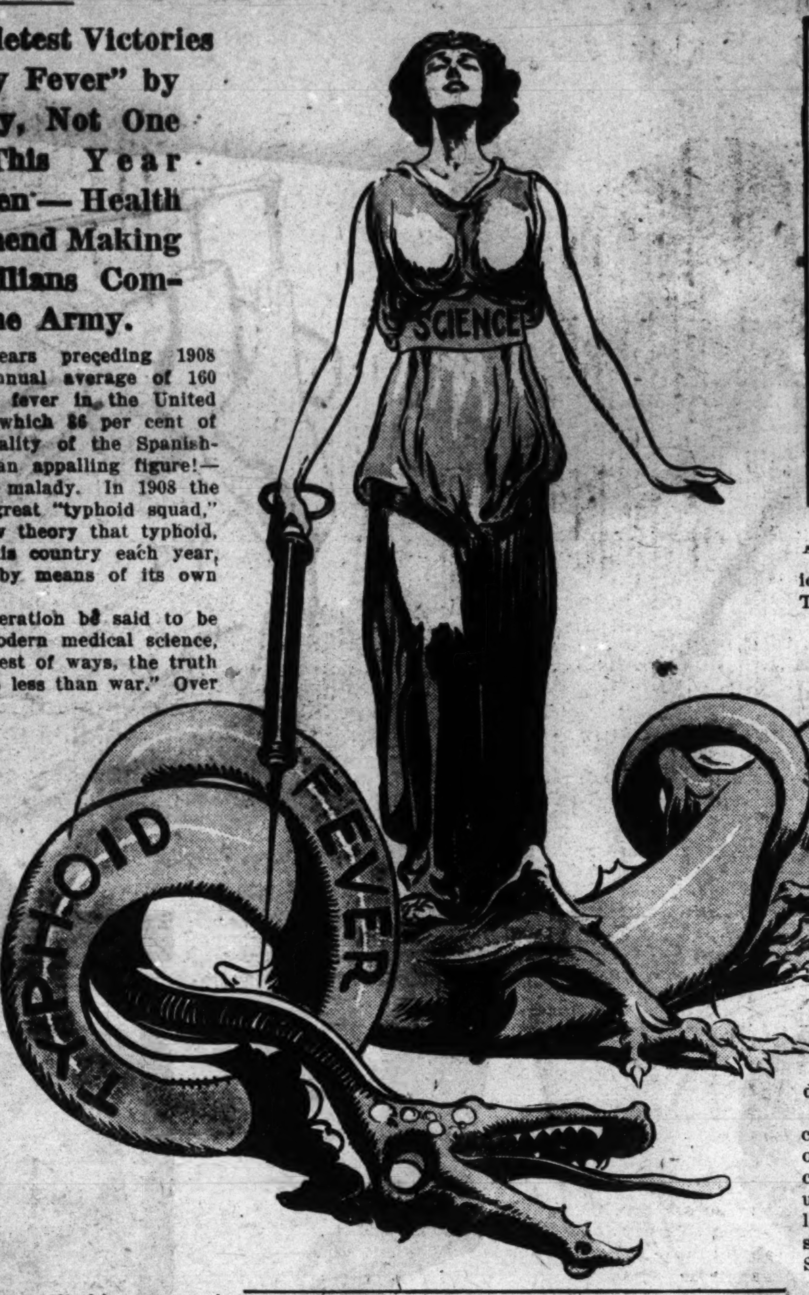
MUSIC AND NERVES

PROF. OPPENHEIM, a great German nerve specialist, finds that music has become the plague of modern life. In his practice he has been struck by the fact that the largest percentage of sufferers come from the hotels where there is what he calls "perpetual plague of music." He adds that the common method of going to a seaside or mountain resort for rest, and stopping at one of the large hotels where the music plague rages as badly as in the cities, makes real rest for the worn nerve impossible.

"Against this evil there cannot be too energetic protest and action. I am not unmusical; I have had many enjoyable hours with music, and I have even written upon the healing value of music, but there is no longer a question of enjoyment and benefit, but of disorderly disturbance, which should be checked."

HERE GOES ANOTHER ENEMY of MANKIND TYPHOID!

One of Science's Completest Victories Won Over "Military Fever" by United States Army, Not One Case Occurring This Year Among 85,000 Men—Health Authorities Recommend Making Inoculation of Civilians Compulsory, as in the Army.



Army surgeon vaccinating recruit with typhoid antitoxin

DURING the five years preceding 1908 there was an annual average of 160 cases of typhoid fever in the United States army, in which 86 per cent of the total mortality of the Spanish-American War—an appalling figure!—was due to this malady. In 1908 the whole army was turned into a great "typhoid squad," to test on a grand scale the new theory that typhoid, which kills 40,000 persons in this country each year, may be made to destroy itself by means of its own bacteria.

The result may without exaggeration be said to be the most splendid triumph of modern medical science, and illustrates again, in the noblest of ways, the truth that "Peace hath her victories no less than war." Over no other disease has the success been so complete. For during the first nine months of this year—the latest statistics available—not one single case of typhoid occurred in the entire army of 85,000 men!

This spells the eventual extinction of one of the most dreadful scourges of mankind. Officials like Health Commissioner Starkloff of St. Louis are advocating that anti-typhoid vaccination be made compulsory in civil life as it is in the army, and urging that the same method which has succeeded so brilliantly in the military would mean the wiping out of the disease universally.

The figures speak with the eloquence of facts. Two years after vaccination had begun in the army the annual average of cases shrank from 160 to 44. One year more, and the 44 is diminished to 18. A little longer—until this year—and the 18 has vanished into 0.

And this is the disease which during the Spanish War attacked 10,738 men and took a toll of 1580 lives! This is the malady which caused an outlay of $20,000,000 in the British South African War! It afflicted 80,000 men in the Union army alone during the Civil War. It has been the peculiar blight of armies, killing and maiming more men than powder and shot. Its cost to civilized nations is estimated at $350,000,000 per year.

Now, the success of the typhoid prophylactic having been assured by the War Department, and its scope recently extended from the army throughout the navy, the progressive Health Department of New York City has put the treatment in use, and the St. Louis Health Department employs it in every case in which a person volunteers for vaccination. It has also been used here for immunization in communities such as an orphan home which was not long ago threatened with an epidemic.

The triumph of bacteriology, the newest of the sciences, has progressed so steadily that the prediction is confidently made that the twentieth century will see the practical extinction of infectious disease. Smallpox has almost disappeared. The mortality of diphtheria has been reduced from 80 to 5 per cent. United States army surgeons, at Panama and San Francisco, taught the world how to conquer yellow fever and bubonic plague.

Antitoxins have been discovered for infantile paralysis and its adult form, spinal meningitis. Typhoid, it is now declared, may be totally eradicated from the earth. Scarlet fever, tuberculosis and cancer remain unvanquished, but scientists are attacking them with all the resources of great laboratories in surety of ultimate victory.

The War Department's fight against the typhoid bacillus had its beginning one autumn afternoon in 1908, when there gathered in Washington the following distinguished physicians and surgeons: Brigadier General R. M. O'Reilly, Surgeon-General; Drs. Victor C. Vaughan, William T. Councilman, John H. Musser, Alexander Lambert, Simon Flexner, William S. Thayer and Capt. Frederick F. Russell, Medical Corps, U. S. A. With the exception of the Surgeon-General and Capt. Russell, this army board was made up of members of the Reserve Corps.

Capt. Russell read a report of his three months' study of typhoid vaccination in Europe, for which he had been detailed by the War Department. His recommendation that the treatment be adopted experimentally in our army among those who would volunteer was unanimously adopted, and he was placed in charge of the work. In two months he developed an improved technique in administering the serum, so that the reactions, which had been rather severe, now became mild.

All the medical officers, their families, many commanding officers and all of the Hospital Corps promptly volunteered, in order to set an example, and such numbers of the regular army hastened to submit to the treatment as to reflect credit on the service. During 1909 and 1910 about 18,000 men were vaccinated.

The results were so excellent that upon the mobilization of troops along the Texas border in 1911 the Secretary of War ordered the compulsory vaccination of all the soldiers in the field. The effect is made eloquent by a comparison of figures.

During the Spanish War the Second Division of the Seventh Army Corps was in camp from June to October, 1898, at Jacksonville, Fla. The Maneuver Division camped at San Antonio from March to July, 1911. The first had 10,759 men; the second 12,801. The two divisions were in nearly the same latitude for the same length of time, each had a good camp site and a pure suply of artesian water.

At the Jacksonville camp there were 2693 cases of typhoid fever, resulting in 258 deaths. All other causes of death combined had only 23 victims. At San Antonio there was one doubtful case of typhoid! During this period there were 49 cases of typhoid, with 19 deaths, among the civil population of San Antonio, and in Galveston 192 cases were recorded during the same period.

At other army posts during these four months the percentage of typhoid seizures was 34 per thousand. So, on Sept. 30, 1911, the Secretary of War ordered the compulsory vaccination of every person in the army under 45 years of age, and of all recruits. Every enlisting man at Jefferson Barracks, in St. Louis, for instance, is vaccinated against typhoid. The United States has the only "immunized" army in the world.

Soon the larger drug firms of the country sent representatives to the laboratory of the Army Medical School at Washington to learn the formula of the vaccine and its process of manufacture. It is now prepared commercially and sold to physicians all over the country at a reasonable rate.

Regarding the act of vaccination itself, an authority states:

"It is quite simple, consisting merely of the subcutaneous administration, with a hypodermic syringe, of a small quantity of the opalescent prophylactic fluid. The syringe is sterilized by boiling, and the skin is prepared by painting a place on the arm the size of a quarter.

"The immunization is completed by the administration of three doses—the first containing 7 1-2 drops and the second and third, which are given 10 and 20 days later, 15 drops each.

"The site of the inoculation becomes somewhat red and tender for a day or so, but there is no sore or scar as in vaccination against smallpox. In a small percentage of cases, less than five, there is some headache and prostration, but it soon disappears, rarely lasting more than 24 or at the most 48 hours."

The United States Reclamation Service decided to use the typhoid prophylactic early in the year among its field force, scattered over a large area in the West. It was not made compulsory, but circulars were sent to the various camps describing the treatment and the results obtained in the army. One of the circulars contained the following ingenious announcement:

> Typhoid fever can be prevented.
> You can aid by being vaccinated.
> Prevention beats the physician and undertaker.
> Healthy persons may have typhoid tomorrow.
> Only those vaccinated or who have had typhoid are immune.
> Immunity lasts three years.
> Don't hesitate. Volunteer today.

More than 500 men volunteered for the treatment. Soon afterwards an epidemic of typhoid broke out in the town of Malta, Mont., most of the cases developing in a hotel where four of the Reclamation Service men took their meals. One had had typhoid, two had been vaccinated and one had refused to be vaccinated. The fourth man contracted a severe case of the malady and narrowly escaped with his life. The other three escaped the contagion.

Eberth, a German bacteriologist, discovered the typhoid bacillus in 1880. Dr. Paul Ehrlich advanced the theory that besides the toxin developed by the disease germs, the body in protection also produces another substance which is antagonistic to it and is its antitoxin.

Metchnikoff in 1884 made the great discovery that the white blood corpuscles are the policemen of the body, seizing upon outlaw invaders like disease germs and destroying them. Certain diseases practically never attack the same person twice, and this, the famous Russian scientist declared, was because the corpuscles become so "energized" against the particular germ they have conquered that it can never afterwards enter the system without being quickly gobbled up.

Sir Almoth Wright united the theories of Eberth and Metchnikoff by asserting that the antitoxin formed by the body first sensitizes the disease germs so as to make them palatable to the white corpuscles, which then devour the bacilli. It was Sir Almoth Wright who demonstrated that the dead bacteria of typhoid could be made into a preventive vaccine.

Would Have Vaccination Against Typhoid Compulsory

BY DR. MAX STARKLOFF.
Health Commissioner of St. Louis.

AS anti-typhoid inoculation has been so triumphantly vindicated in the United State army, I believe that vaccination against the disease should be compulsory.. Thus the disease could be completely wiped out forever.

But this would require a legal enactment, which would probably be held unconstitutional. Vaccination against smallpox is not compulsory in the public schools, which, however, enforce it by refusing to admit pupils who have not been vaccinated.

The Health Department, so far as its resources permit, attempts to inoculate against typhoid everyone who volunteers for the treatment.

America the Lost Land of Ophir, King Solomon's Treasure Box

Western Scientist Believes Mexico Was the Biblical Country for Which the Galleys of Hiram of Tyre Set Forth on Three-Year Voyages—Finds Traces of Hebrew and Phoenician Civilizations on Pacific Islands Held to Be on Route of the Journey.

ABOUT three thousand years ago, three great ships set sail from the shores of Arabia. Their destination was the Land of Ophir.

The great vessels were gone three years. They went back laden with gold and silver for the building of Solomon's Temple; then they sailed away for another three years. This happened again and again.

No one, with the exception of a few oath-bound navigators, knew where the Land of Ophir lay. To the world at large, it was somewhere in the region of dreams, three years beyond the borders of the Red Sea. Thus, when the ships, through some cause, ceased to ply their way back and forth over the long seaway, the Land of Ophir sank quietly back into the mystery from which is had emerged. Within a few years it became an enigma of the past; a puzzle to which save in the dead brains of wise men and kings, there existed no answer.

Out of this age-old enigma, a California scientist named Thomas Crawford Johnston has extracted, to the satisfaction, at least, of himself and many other scientists, the solution of another historic puzzle—Who Discovered America?

Sacrificial stone of Tizoc, said to display convincing proof of Phoenician design.

It was the latter problem that Johnson started out to solve. The importance of the lost Land of Ophir arose incidentally. As the scientist's investigation progressed he became more and more certain that the two mysteries were closely related. At last he reached definite and startling conclusions. They were:

1. That the lost Land of Ophir and the American continent were identical.

2. That the adventurers who, 3000 years ago, set out from the shores of the Red Sea, can be accepted as the original discoverers of America.

In support of his theories, Johnston has written a 300-page book. He calls it: "Did the Phoenicians Discover America?" The title would be more descriptive if it were: "Did the Phoenicians, aided by the Hebrews, the Scythians and the Thracians, Discover America?" This is what the author believes and, in careful detail, undertakes to prove.

Johnston has searched among the Aztecs and Toltecs, the Phoenicians, the Hebrews and several other races. As a result, he has found striking similarities of traditions, customs and general character. These furnish the groundwork of his book.

The author begins by bridging the greatest gap—the distance between Asia and America. He searched about until he found a people capable of navigating this distance. The prize navigators of ancient days were the Phoenicians. Their ships weren't quite up to the Imperator, but they were far from being catboats. The liners of Bible times were much larger than the average person may imagine. St. Paul was wrecked in a ship which carried 276 persons besides the crew, and the boat which dropped Josephus into the sea had a passenger list of 600.

These ships, Mr. Johnston point out, were certainly capable of navigating the Pacific. In fact, history proves that they plied constantly between the east coast of the Mediterranean and the faraway shores of England. The Phoenicians were the traders of the age, a chief necessity of the period was tin; and the only available tin lay in Britain. The Phoenicians made a business of mining tin and selling it in Egypt. To do this, they had to be able to navigate the Mediterranean. Any ship which could navigate the Mediterranean would undoubtedly be able to navigate the Pacific.

Having established the seaworthiness of Phoenician ships, Johnston turns to the navigating abilities of their captains. He compiles evidence to prove that they were able to steer by compass and sun. The question of sailing from Phoenicia to America becomes, therefore, a matter of miles. The Phonecians could have covered them; Mr. Johnston's problem is to prove that they did.

He turns to the Bible. In I Kings, ix, he finds that Solomon "made a navy of Tharshish, at Eziengeber, which is beside Eloth, on the shores of the Red Sea, in the land of Edom. And Hiram sent in the navy his shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, with the servants of Solomon. And they came to Ophir, and fetched them gold four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to King Solomon."

Solomon was in the heighth of his glory about this time. Hiram was King of the Phoenicians. The Bible states that he and Solomon were fast friends. The Red Sea was the ideal starting point for a trans-Pacific expedition.

Another quotation, this time from II Chron. ix, reads: "For the ships went to Tharshish with the ships of Hiram, every three years once came the ships of Tharshish, bringing gold, silver and ivory, and apes and peacocks."

This is remarkable. Three years was a long time for the ships of Tharshish to be gone. There was so little silver in existence in the Orient that it was worth ten times as much as gold. There was plenty of gold, and ivory, and apes, and peacocks, but no silver. There was silver in Spain, but the ships of Tharshish did not sail toward Spain. They sailed east. And, so far as is known, the first country which proved to contain silver in large quantities was the American continent.

This is the tradition that Johnston finds in the Orient. He then turns to America, to the legends of the Toltecs and the Aztecs. The period of Aztec history which embraces the tenth century before Christ or thereabouts, is commonly known as the Votanic period, owing to the arrival at that time of a god or super-man known as Votan. This Votan, according to the Abbe Brasseur de Bourberg's translations of early Aztec documents, arrived on the Pacific coasts about 1000 B. C., accompanied by seven great ships. This was just at the time that Solomon and Hiram were beginning their three-year expeditions to the Land of Ophir.

The personnel of these expeditions, Johnston points out, was peculiarly conglomerate. First, there were the shipmen of Hiram and the servants of Solomon. In addition, the scientist believes, there were certain mercenaries, recruited from two warrior races of the time—the Scythians and the Thracians. It was the custom of both the Phoenicians and the Jews to hire such mercenaries. Johnston finds the possibility of their presence on these expeditions extremely valuable in explaining certain points.

This, then, is the evidence. At about 1000 B. C. he finds three great ships of Tharshish leaving the Red Sea on a three-year voyage to the mysterious land of Ophir; at about the same time, he finds the traditional founder of Aztec civilization landing on the shores of America. The ships bring back so much silver that it becomes a drug in the streets of Jerusalem; America is the only known country where silver could then have been obtained in such quantities.

It is thus assumed that the three great ships of Tharshish were bound for America. Johnston turns next to the course they may have followed. The way lay clear from the Red Sea to the Straits of Babelmandeb, then passed around the coast of Arabia into the Persian Gulf and continued along the west side of the Pahrein Islands to the mouth of the Euphrates, and down the east side of India. Thence the logical way to America was, and still is, by way of Java, Sumatra, Torres Straits, the Caroline Islands, Tonga, Samoa, Rappa, Tahiti and Easter Island. It is presumed by Johnston that the Phoenicians took this route; therefore, he has looked for traces of them, not only in Central America, but everywhere along the way. The evidence which he found forms the true basis of his theory.

Some of the traces are Scythian, some Thracian, some Phoenician, some Hebrew. This, he explains by the mixed character of the expedition. The Scythians and Thracians, he thinks, were left in charge of the way stations; the Phoenicians and Hebrews governed and colonized the newly-discovered Ophir itself.

A Scythian deity was Tabiti, the goddess of the hearth. Tabiti is the native name of the island of Tahiti. Other gods was Papeus, Apia, Apollo, Venus, Urania, Hercules and Maia. The names of these deities, with legends similar to those of Scythia, are found, in various forms, throughout the island group which includes Tahiti.

The Scythians always fought on horseback, used the bow and arrow and scalped their victims. So did the Indians of North America. They did not bathe in water, but affected something resembling a vapor bath. This custom is found among the natives of Tahiti. They painted their bodies and traced their ancestry back to wild animals. This, also, will be recognized as characteristic of the North American Indian. They were cannibals. So are some of the islanders in Tahitian or Society group.

Now, for the Thracians. The Thracians tatooed themselves. So do the Society Islanders. The Thracians fought with the spear and javelin. So do the Society Islanders. In fact, every characteristic of the inhabitants of the mid-Pacific points strongly toward a mixed and forcible influence. Their numeric skill, cosmogeny, astronomical knowledge and religion is declared by Johnston clearly to be Phoenician; their traditions—an example being the story of Adam and Eve—to be, with equal clearness, Hebrew.

Leaving the islands, and turning to Mexico, which is the point where the original discoverers of America are supposed to have landed, Johnston finds architecture which is plainly Phoenician; laws which are Hebrew, and customs which are either Scythian or Thracian. He does not merely make the assertion; he states instance and quotes authorities.

Such theories may be hard to prove, but the autho paints a new romance in the story of the world.

NEW MODELS OF NOTED ARTISTS

Here Are Some of the American Beauties Whose Likenesses You See Frequently on Magazine Covers and in the Illustrations of Novels and Occasionally in Decorative Work in Public Buildings

LIKE stage beauties, artists' models appear and disappear. Every season produces a new crop. Some of the select specimens, to be sure, outlast their first season and even reappear as apparent perennials for some years. But always the fresh discoveries, like a new Burbank "creation," are the most interesting for the moment. Just now a group of American girls, pictured on this page, is put forth as the choicest selections from the new crop of models whose beauty, through the artist's brush and pencil, is portrayed for the delight of the millions in magazine, book and newspaper illustrations.

One of these who is called a real American beauty is Miss Jean Van Rellin, who smiles at us every month from magazine covers and has loaned her face for the portrayal of more heroines in fiction than she can recall, though she has posed less than a year. Wenzell, Hutt, Gibson, Schnabelitz, Will Grefe and many others have found in this young woman the beauty necessary to satisfy a critical public. She was used by Wenzell as Eleanor Whittacer in his illustrations of "The Weaker Vessel" and she also originated the character of Jacquelin, illustrated by Gibson in "The Business of Life." Ben Ali Haggin has painted her, too.

"Not only is she a model with beauty, but she has the real intelligence required for a portrayal of the American girl," says Wenzell. "Being a true American girl, she is able to assist me materially in illustrating stories and can suggest and take poses which a mere doll would not be capable of."

Miss Van Rellin hails from Boston, where her family is well known. She has golden hair which inclines almost to kinkiness. Her eyes are blue and most expressive and her coloring suggests peaches and cream. Her features are regular, and when she smiles she shows a perfect row of teeth which a soft down-East vioce does not mar.

To the credit of America must go the honors for a perfect English beauty in the person of Miss Claudie Scott, who comes by her beauty through an English mother. Miss Scott has the long oval face associated with English beauties and a complexion which they say it takes a London fog to create. Her hair is light brown and falls in beautiful waves and she, too, has blue eyes. She has been posing for several years and there is little about her that is not paintable. Painters, sculptors, illustrators and photographers all use her. Blashfield, Herter and Maurice Compris have pronounced her profile perfect. The figures on the Memphis court house by Karl Bitter, which are veritable portraits, were made from her poses. She was W. F. Vreeland's model in "The Universal Scheme" panels. Maurice Compris won recognition on his picture "Dawn" done from her, and Herter and Blashfield use her frequently.

Next to her English sister comes a beauty who might have hailed from Dublin, whom even Titian might have envied. She is Miss Dorothy Fogarty, a newcomer to the profession of posing. Possessing an abundance of rich auburn hair with fair skin and Irish eyes of blue, she radiates the sentiment and poetry of her isle. Portrait painters have used her hair and photographers and fashion artists find her a good subject. Perhaps the best works of her are a series of studies by Arnold Genthe.

Thyra Von Ulm is a true type of Germany, from which land she comes. Golden hair, blue eyes and pale skin with natural red cheeks make her a desirable model for portrait painters, who use her coloring in the finishing of portraits of women who have not the desired color necessary for the artists to turn out a work of art. She was the late Robert L. McCameron's favorite model and is used by Francis Newton, too. She was the real peach in the painting exhibited by Kenneth Frazier at a recent exhibition called "Peaches and Oranges" which brought forth much comment.

Miss Von Ulm's beauty is of the statuesque kind. Robert McCameron used to say it was a shame she was born with arms, for she should have been a Venus de Milo.

Straight from Paris comes Louise La Salle, a charming little French maid who lends herself beautifully to the dancing pictures painted by Victor Hecht and Ben Ali Haggin. She has the dash, vivacity and piquancy of the true French woman. Her hair is black, as are her eyes. She is one of the favorite models of F. S. Church, who uses her frequently in the ideal

A Deep-Sea Story

By PERCEVAL GIBBON

(Copyright, 1913, by the Post-Dispatch.)

EVENING came up in a vast mellowness of coloring over the sea and sky. There was scarcely a stir of wind; save for the wake of the tug, in which the Etna moved, with all sail set, like something half asleep; the sea was smooth as a floor. Far astern of her, shading into the pale sky, the lowlands about the mouth of the Delaware were dimly seen; she was standing out on the first stage of her voyage around the Horn, from Philadelphia to San Francisco.

"Stand by to get the tow-line aboard," came the order from aft. The sailors, bone-weary with the long day of mending sail and getting the ship ready for sea, crowded for'ard to the forecastle-head, 16 hard and sullen men, strange to each other and to the ship. They came up in silence and grouped themselves ready to take in the hawser when the tugboat should give them slack. A few glanced aside as they stood to take stock of the second mate—glances fervid with calculation and suspicion, for the man had a name, a reputation current in forecastle and sailors' boarding houses. Men who had sailed with "Bucko" Logan had a pride in remembering it; they spoke of him with curses, but often. He stood beside them now, ignoring them utterly and watching the towboat, his lean, clean-shaven face, with its hard jaw and its thin, courageous nose, showing no consciousness of their neighborhood. He was tall and long-legged; there was a quality of slenderness and alertness in all his body, a readiness in his attitude; he looked quick and dangerous even as he stood at rest. There were grave faces among those that scanned him.

He was the first to see that the towboat had stopped her engines. He woke to action like a spring released from tension. "Get hold of that hawser," he commanded, and though he spoke quietly, the weary men started to their work with brisk urgency. "Never mind the capstan," he bade; "take her in hand over hand. Heave away, now."

He put no hand to it himself, but stood and watched the bent line of them as they snatched the heavy hemp inboard. The tug had put her helm over and was falling back on the ship's beam; she was like a neat toy on that great shining plain of water. On her little pulpit of a bridge, the Captain spun the wheel, leaning aside meanwhile to look over his shoulder at the ship; a couple of hands stood ready at the towing-chock to let go the line, and waved a farewell to the poop; and under her counter there was a bubble from the reversed propeller. Her Captain detached a hand from the spokes and waved it. "So long, Bucko," he was shouting, cheerily. Logan gave him no answer. The laboring sailors had no eyes to spare for this ceremony of farewells, in which no part was theirs; it seemed as though Logan joined them in a deliberate aloofness. The tug cast off the line, and it flopped into the water.

"Now, then," snapped Logan; "lively with that hawser." He thrust himself sharply in front of the foremost man and took hold of the wet rope. "Get a move on," he said, and laid his strength to it, while behind him the sailors hauled with a new energy. Already they had remarked on one thing—that Logan gave his orders without raising his voice to the conventional shout; shouting could have added no emphasis to their curt authority. And he had not sworn; the hawser had been got in by hand with none of that blusterous vociferation usual to such maneuvers. He was among them and close to them while they coiled the line down to dry on top of the fo'c'sle, swift and brief of speech, full of quick energy; they felt in him, in their dull, inarticulate way, something potent and individual for which they had no name. The need to discuss it made something of a bond between them when they knocked off at last for supper and sat about the narrow fo'c'sle over their food.

Choosing the Watches.

THEY were of all the races which furnish ships with crews, an all-nation, and no-nation crowd gathered together from the world's ports to drive the old Etna from the Delaware to the Golden Gate. For them, the spaciousness of the world was no more than a road; every part of it was on the way to somewhere, and no part of it was a final destination. English and Americans leavened their diversity thinly. They sat about on their chests and ate and drank absently, eyeing one another without interest.

It fell to an American to broach the matter which ripened in the mind of each.

"Well, boys," he said, over his steaming pannikin of fo'c'sle tea; "what d'ye make of Bucko Logan?"

They all turned toward him at the word; a white-haired seaman who sat next to him leaned forward and spat graphically on the dirty deck.

"I'd give a bit," he said slowly, "to ha' been sober the day I shipped for this trip. You wouldn't catch me aboard of here if I'd had my senses."

The Yankee who had spoken first nodded his full comprehension. He had a lean, humorous face, burned to the color of teak by many suns.

"Guess we'll be sober enough by the time he's through with us," he said, slowly. "But say. Did ye see what style he had on him? As quiet as a funeral."

Another Englishman took up the tale. "That's what's said of him, that is. Don't holler at yer like what an ordinary mate does; speaks as soft as a parson and then hits like the kick of a mule. There was a shipmate of mine in my last ship—Bucko Logan had broke the bone of his jaw for stoppin' a buntline too tight, an' then made him crawl aloft, with his mouth hangin' sideways on his face to cut the stopper."

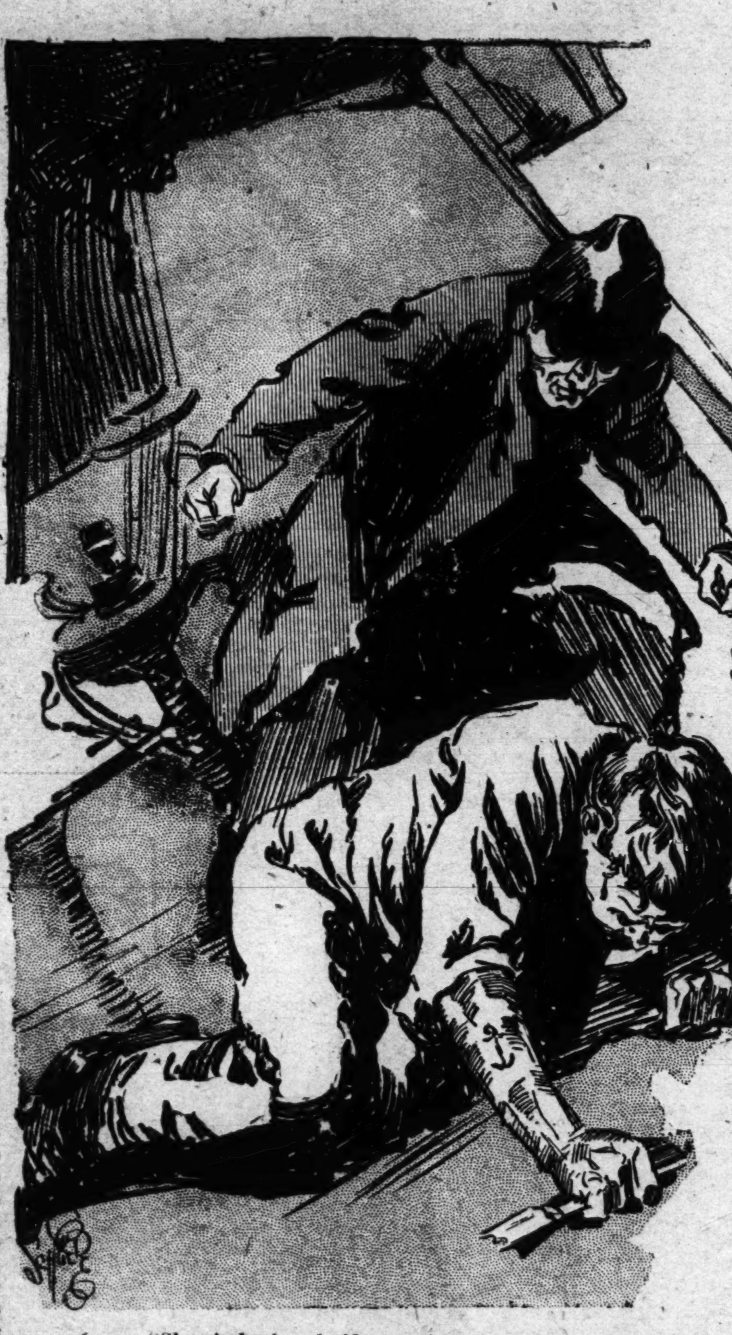
There was headshaking over this; the man who stops the gear so that it will not run when it is needed has no friends aboard ship.

"I haf haird," began a plump man near the door, "dat vonce he vos come into der focksle"——

The white-haired seaman looked up sharply.

"Say, mates," he said, "I didn't notice nobody askin' that Dutchman to oblige the company. There's reason in everything, now ain't there? We may be shipped for a tough voyage, but that ain't to say that a Dutchman's to open his mouth here without havin' something shoved into it."

A murmer of agreement threaded its way through those who were not "Dutchmen;" the citizens of the sea acknowledged its code. It served to set them together and somewhat overcome that strange reserve which sailors exercise toward new shipmates. Talk ran more easily while the night darkened without and the loose gear slapped and creaked overhead. All the old tales of Bucko Logan were set forth afresh; his world-wide fame had its due; stories of his fine seamanship, as when he brought the Soldan home with smallpox aboard of her and only five hands left to work her up to quarantine, of his ruthlessness, instanced by the case of "a man I was shipmate with in the So-and-so," of his strength, his fighting prowess, his behavior to women, and the rest of the characteristics which had won him a place in the mythology of the sea before he was 35. The dull lamp swung above their heads and cast its meager light over them and over the meanness of their bunks and possessions, and the "Dutchmen" accounted for and accurately placed without their circle, listened in placid silence.



"Shaw's broken knife was found where he had fallen."

Eight bells put a period to the talk. "Aft all hands," sounded the due order. Watches were to be chosen and set according to immemorial custom. The night was still and splendid with stars; here and there the lights of ships showed near at hand; the traffic of the Delaware mouth.

At the poop-rail the Captain with his two mates awaited them; a globe-lamp to read their names by held the three of them in the circle of its radiance. The men, awkward and shy, gathered about the after hatch, staring and breathing heavily. The officers were consulting over the list, and the men made the most of their opportunity to scrutinize their masters. Logan, tall and tight-lipped, was a little in the background. The Captain, gray-haired and florid, with a manner of moving his hands as he talked, was accepted as a type; they all knew captains like him. The mate, a stumpy, powerful man, was also nothing out of the way. In contrast with them, Logan stood out like an aristocrat.

"All aft?" demanded the Captain at last. His voice had a note of petulence; shipmasters are prone to it. "Answer to your names as I call them." This form achieved, the setting of the watches began, the Captain and the mate choosing alternately. Noble, the white-haired seamen, found himself in the starboard—Logan's—watch. With him was Fullerton, the American, Shaw, another Englishman, four of the docile Dutchmen, and a stout little Frenchman. Then came the Captain's speech.

He leaned upon the rail, the globe-lamp illuminating his round face, and looked down upon his crew. His attitude looked confidential, persuasive, intimate.

"Now, men," he said, in his rather high tones; "here we are. This is a good ship; don't make no mistake about that. A man that can do the work he shipped for's all right; he'll find her a good ship. Let's have quick hands and feet fore an' aft and we'll get on first-rate. But"—— he paused, and some of them saw Logan smile behind him——"but, if there's any shenanigan, stand by for trouble. You hear me. Hell'll be a summer resort alongside this packet if there's goin' to be trouble. Now we understand each other, so go below, the watch."

Thus the crew of the Etna, full-rigged ship, entered upon their voyage. A crew and a ship are never at one till they are out of soundings; it takes a day or two for the sea habit to assert itself and the vessel to become familiar. Things are stiff at first, like the sheaves of the blocks; officers do not get to close quarters till the ship is clean of the land's defilement. In due season the hands turn out of the fo'c'sle, holystone and scrub it and make it clean; their bodies are emptied of liquor and the boarding-house languor; they settle down to the routine that will govern and guide them as long as the blue water is under them. The starboard watch was quick to find its bearings; its members were alert to avoid collision with Logan. Old Noble, with 40 years of seafaring behind him, soon took stock of his position and confided his conclusions to Fullerton. Both men were out on the jib-boom at a piece of work, standing on the foot-ropes while the brisk sea swelled and sank beneath them.

"Say, Jim," said Noble, "I don't see how Logan's goin' to get at you an' me."

Fullerton, parceling an eye ready for serving, did not look up.

"Same old way, I guess," he replied.

"I don't know," said Noble. "You see, Jim, it isn't as if he wasn't a sailor. Now, you and me—we're up to our work. We can do it as well as him. A man's got to have some sort of a reason for startin' to punch."

Fullerton spat. "Oh, hell," he said.

"But he's got to have some sort of a reason," Noble insisted. "What I say is—don't give him none."

"It ain't a reason he wants; it's an excuse," answered Fullerton. He looked up. "Don't you never make a mistake?" he asked. "Ain't you never brought a ball of marline along instead of spunyarn, or something?"

"What about it?" demanded Noble.

"That's excuse enough for him, an' reason enough, too," said Fullerton. "Don't you worry, old chap; what's comin' is comin', and served hot."

* * *

He bent again to his work, and Noble pondered. He would have spoken further, but a sudden uproar from the main deck checked him. Both men listened. There were yells, sounds or woeful expostulation, and noise as of driving nails with a mallet. The deckhouse stood between them and the cause of it all; they could view nothing of what was happening; but they could see a man on the foreyard looking down aft. Presently, with a last howl, the uproar ceased. Fullerton looked across the boom at Noble.

"Better get on with yer job," he said, quietly. "It's begun. That was one of the Dutchmen—or maybe two of 'em."

It seemed to both of them as though the voyage really started from then, and what had gone before was merely preliminary, like casting off from the wharf and towing down the river. Old Noble, fitting a strop to a downhaul block, bent his head above his task and worked deftly, with all the skill of long custom, but his thoughts were aft. His years, his consciousness of sound shipcraft, and his good record had given to him something like dignity; he was accustomed to have good work expected of him and to render it, and to enjoy in return a certain immunity from the lesser form of discipline. He was uneasily aware that there would be no such plea to be won on the Etna. There was indignation in his thoughts that he should have come to such a pass. And then he heard Logan's step on the forecastle-head. He uttered a short hiss of warning to Fullerton and worked faster.

The second mate—Noble could see him with the corner of his eye—took account at leisure of the lashings on the anchors and of the jib-sheets. He stood a while with his back to the two men, scanning the gear on the foremast, humming to himself. At last he turned, cast a leg over the rail, and came edging

RESCUED FROM A TERRIBLE DEATH, HUGO PLANS REVENGE

"Ravengar I mean to put you to the same test you put me and, frankly, I don't think you'll survive it" again. In five minutes she had acquainted Simon with all her experiences; they were but the complement of what he himself had witnessed.

The sense of a mysterious calamity overhanging Hugo, and the sense of the shame which had already disgraced Hugo's, pressed heavily on both of them.

They knew that only one man could retrieve what had been lost and avert irreparable disaster. Their faith in that man was undiminished, and Simon at least was sure that he had been victimized by some immense conspiracy.

"Why don't you find Mr. Hugo?" Lilly demanded.

"I've looked everywhere. A letter was brought up to him about an hour ago, and he went off instantly."

"And where's the letter?"

"I expect it's in that drawer, where he throws all his private letters," said Simon, pointing to a drawer in the big writing table on the opposite side of the room from the piano.

"Is it locked—the drawer?"

"No."

"Then open it."

"It's the governor's private drawer," said Simon. "I've never"——

"Stuff!" Lily exclaimed, and she opened the drawer and drew out the topmost letter.

It was on blue paper.

"Yes, that's it," said Simon. "The envelope was blue, I remember."

"He must be in the safe deposit," said Lily, perusing the letter with flying glance.

-And Simon, at length sufficiently emboldened, seized the letter and read:

> Sir:
>
> Mr. Polycarp has just been here, and accidentally left behind him keys of his vault, including safe of late Mr. Francis Tudor, etc. In these peculiar circumstances I shall be glad to know what I am to do.
>
> Yours respectfully,
> H. BROWN.
> Head Guardian, Hugo's Safe-Deposit.

"What on earth can Brown be thinking about?" muttered Simon. "Hasn't he got enough gumption to send a messenger after Mr. Polycarp, without troubling the governor? He'll catch it."

"Never mind that," said Lily sharply. "Run down to the safe deposit. Run, Simon."

It was as though a delay of minutes might mean ruin. Who could say what was even then happening in the disorganized and masterless department?

CHAPTER XII.

Safe Deposit.

THE safe deposit at Hugo's was perhaps the most wonderful of all the departments. Until Hugo thought of it, and paid a trinity of European experts to design and devise it, there had existed no such thing as an absolutely impregnable asylum of valuables.

You descended 10 feet below the surface of the earth, gave a password on emerging from the lift, traversed a corridor, and at length stood in front of the sole entrance to the safe deposit.

A guardian, when you had signed your name again, unlocked three unpickable, incombustible and gunpowder-proof locks in a massive steel door, and you were admitted; assuming always that the hour was between 9 and 6. Out of hours and on Saturday afternoons and on Sundays, a time-lock rendered it utterly impossible for any person whatever to turn any key in the safe deposit.

Once the lock was set, Hugo himself could not have entered, not even to save the British Empire from instant destruction, until the time-lock had run its course.

Now it was a singular thing that when Simon Shawn, having proved his identity and his mission at the lift, arrived at the entrance to the safe deposit, he discovered the great steel door ajar, and no door guardian in the leather chair where a door guardian always sat.

This condition of affairs did not affect the essential impregnability of any individual vault or safe, but, nevertheless, it was singular.

Simon walked straight in.

"There's no one at the door," he said to the patrol, whom he met in the main passage. "I want to see Mr. Hugo at once. He's down here somewhere, or he's been here."

"Yes, Mr. Shawn," said the patrol politely; "I did see Mr. Hugo here about an hour or so ago."

"I saw him just here, sir," said the patrol, turning down a short side corridor—the grille was unfastened—and stopping before a door numbered 39.

"He was talking to Mr. Brown, and the door of the vault was open."

"That must be Mr. Polycarp's vault," Simon observed; and then he started and put his ear against the door.

"Listen!" he exclaimed to the patrol. "Can you hear anything inside?"

And the patrol also put his ear to the steel face of the door.

"I seem to hear a faint knocking, but it's that faint as you scarcely can hear it. There! it's stopped."

"He is inside," Shawn whispered.

"Who's inside?"

"Mr. Hugo."

"It's God help him, then," said the patrol.

A brief silence ensued, and then Simon said: "We must telephone to the police."

The patrol stood mute while Simon Shawn told the telephone receiver what had occurred in the bowels of the earth beneath Hugo's.

"Wait a minute," said the telephone, and then, after a pause: "Are you there? I'm Inspector Winter?"

"That's him as has charge of all the strong room cases," the patrol interjected to Simon.

"I've got Mr. Jack Galpin here, as it happens," said the telephone.

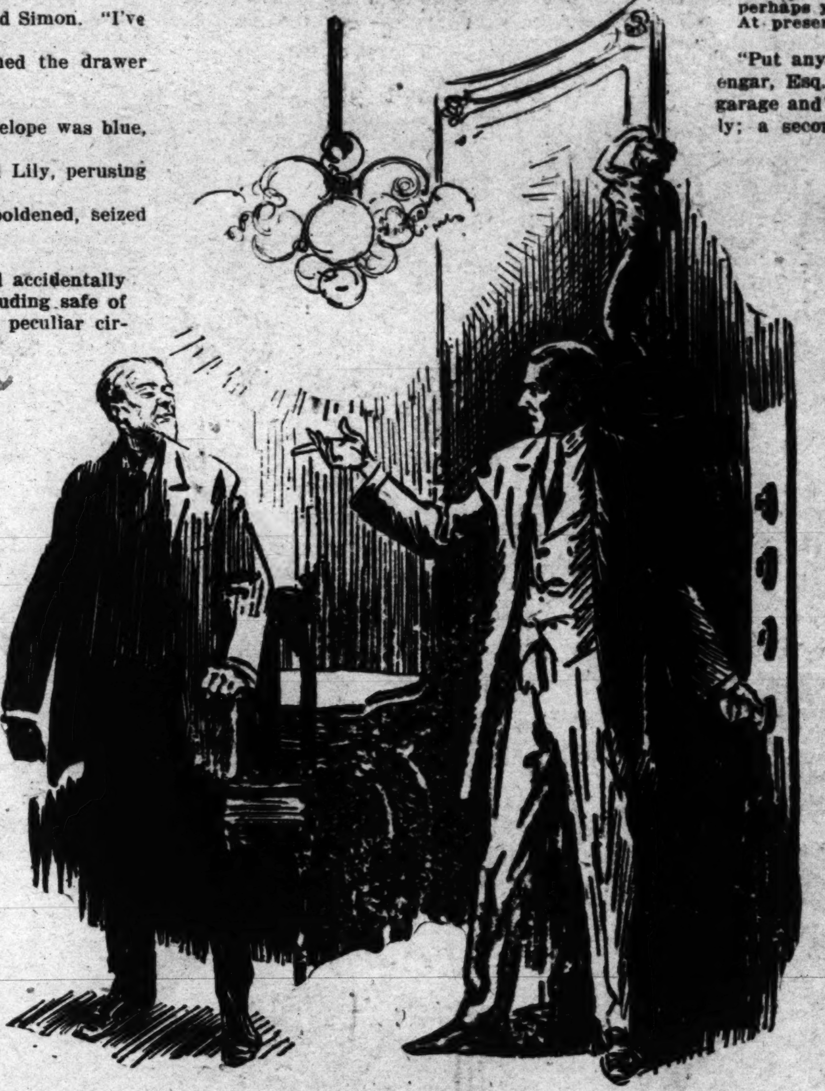
"Mr. Jack Galpin?" Simon questioned.

"He's just done 18 months for an attempt in Lombard street," the patrol explained. "I've heard of him."

"I'll come down with him immediately in a cab," said the telephone.

When Simon returned to the impregnable door of Vault 39 he listened in vain for a sound.

Then he knocked with his penknife on the polished steel, and presently there was an answering signal from within—a series of scarcely perceptible irregular taps. It struck him that the irregularity of the taps formed a rhythm, and after a few seconds he recognized the rhythm of the intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana," which he had played for Hugo that very morning.



" 'Ravengar, what a fool you are!' Hugo, who stood concealed near the switch, turned on the lights as he uttered this greeting, and stepped forward."

• • •

When the patrol and Simon between them had explained the mysterious and fatal situation to Mr. Jack Galpin, Mr. Jack Galpin leaned against one of the marble tables in the waiting room and roared with laughter.

"Well," observed Mr. Galpin, "he didn't have his safe deposit built for nothing, anyhow!"

And he laughed again.

"But he's slowly dying in there!" said Simon.

"Yes, I know," said Mr. Galpin.

"I have a notion about that clock. It's a pendulum clock, and you know how fast a clock ticks when you take the pendulum away, and the escapement can run free. It does an hour in about three minutes. Now, if I get the pendulum out without alarming the clock it would be 9 tomorrow morning in no time. See?"

Within exactly 25 minutes Mr. Galpin entered the waiting room.

"See that?" he said, holding up a pendulum. "That's it. You can come and look now. But I don't invite the public to see my own private melting process. Not me!"

He had burned two holes through the half-inch plate of Bessemer steel in which the clock was enclosed, and by means of two pairs of tweezers (which must certainly have been imitated from the armory of a dentist) he had detached the pendulum without stopping the clock. The hands of the clock could be plainly seen to move, and its ticking was furiously rapid.

Mr. Galpin made a calculation on his dazzling cuff.

"In three-quarters of an hour the clock will have run out," he informed his audience, "and you will be able to open any locks that you've got keys for. I shall call tomorrow morning, young man, for the swag. And don't you forget that there's only one Jack Galpin in the world. My address is 206, the Waterloo road."

He left, with his bag.

Simon rushed to Vault 39 to encourage the captive by continual knocking.

Then the messenger boy, who had been despatched to obtain food for the prisoners behind the various grilles, came back with the desired food, and with a copy of the Evening Herald.

The back page of the Herald bore Hugo's immense advertisement.

The front page was also chiefly devoted to Hugo. It displayed headings such as: "Shocking Scenes at a Sloane Street Sale," "Women Injured." "Customers Complain of Wholesale Swindling," "Scandalous Mismanagement," "The Hugo Safe Deposit Suddenly Closed," "Reported Disappearance of Mr. Hugo," "Is He a Lunatic?"

And when the three-quarters of an hour had expired, Simon and the patrol unlocked the massive portal of Vault 39 and swung it open, fearful of what they might see within. And Hugo, pale and feeble, but alive, staggered heavily forward and put a hand on Simon's shoulder.

"Get a sheet of plain paper," he said to Simon, "and write this letter. Are you ready? Yes, it will do in pencil; I even prefer it in pencil.

> DEAR SIR: I have reason to think that you may be interested in some extraordinary information which I have in my possession concerning Camilla Tudor, who is supposed to have been buried at Brompton Cemetery in July last year. If I am right, perhaps you will accompany the bearer to my rooms. At present I will not disclose my name.
> Yours, etc.

"Put any initials you like. Address it to Louis Ravengar, Esq. Now listen to me. Go down to the auto garage and choose a good man to take the note instantly; a second man must go with him. If they bring back Ravengar, he is to be taken to No. 6 Blair street, shown upstairs, and brought along the bridge passage into the building. It will be quite dark, and he will never guess. If necessary, he must be brought to me by force, once he is inside."

CHAPTER XIII.

Ravengar in Captivity.

"RAVENGAR, what a fool you are!" The dome was in darkness. Hugo, who stood concealed near the switch, turned on all the lights as soon as he had uttered this singular greeting, and stepped forward.

He had decided to kill Ravengar. The desire to murder was in his heart, and in order to give all his instincts full play, he had chosen a theatrical method of welcoming his victim into the fastness from which he was never to escape.

Ravengar gazed at his captor, irresolute. His clean-shaven upper lip seemed longer than ever, and his short gray beard and gray locks gave him an appearance of sanctimony which not even his sinister eyes could destroy. Then he sat down on a chair.

"I should like to know"—— he began, trying to speak steadily.

"You would like to know," Hugo took him up, "why I am here alive, instead of being in that vault, suffocated. It was a pretty dodge of yours to get me down there. You counted on my curiosity about the Tudor mystery. You felt sure I should yield to the temptation. And I did yield. You were right. I was prepared to commit a breach of faith in order to satisfy that curiosity. No sooner was the door closed on me than I knew to a certainty that you were at the bottom of the affair. So easy to make out afterward that it was an accident! So easy to explain everything! Why, Ravengar, you intended to murder me! I saw the whole scheme in a flash! You have corrupted many of my servants today. But you didn't corrupt all of them. And because you didn't, because you couldn't, I am alive. You would like to know how I got out. But you will never know, Ravengar. You will die without knowing."

Ravengar put his hands in his pockets.

"I can only assume that you are going mad, Owen," said he.

Hugo laughed.

"You must have been maturing the day's business quite a long time, my boyhood's companion, my floater of public companies, my pearl of financiers. Yes, decidedly, parts of it were wonderfully ingenious. To sow the place with pickpockets, to get at my cashiers, my commissionaires and my services. To substitute your own false shopwalkers for the genuine article. To arrange for the arrest of important customers on preposterous charges of theft. To lock up a hundred women in a gallery till they nearly died. To have my best and most advertised bargains removed in the night. To deprive the restaurants of food, and to employ women to turn them upside down. To produce, as you contrived to do, a general air of pandemonium, and to ruin the discipline of over 3000 of the best trained employes in England. All this, and much else which I do not mention, was devilish clever in its conception, and the execution of its commands my unqualified admiration."

Ravengar smiled superiorly. And then Hugo sprang forward in a sudden overmastering passion.

Ravengar yawned and glanced at his watch.

"It's nearly my dinner time," said he.

Hugo, snatching at his watch, tore it and the chain from Ravengar's waistcoat, dashed them to the flour, and stamped on them. He was amazed, and he was also delighted, at his own fury. The lust of destruction had got hold of him.

"Ass!" he murmured, suddenly lowering his voice. "Can't you guess what I mean to do?"

"I cannot," Ravengar stammered.

"I mean to put you to the same test to which you put me. You arranged that I should spend 22 hours in a vault without ventilation. At the end of five hours I was by no means dead. I might have survived the 22. But, frankly, I don't fancy I should. And I don't fancy you will. In fact, I'm convinced that you won't."

(TO BE CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.)

SPEAKS SOFT AS A PARSON AND HITS LIKE A MULE

"You're the finest sailor I ever seen," said Noble; "but this bucko business has done for you."

out on the foot-rope till he stood at Noble's side.

"How are you gettin' on with that?" he said, in his quiet tones.

Noble shifted to let him see for himself and took a look at him. His hard young face was nonchalant and composed; he turned the block over calmly, concerned with nothing else. Only—the hand that touched it had a smear of blood across the big knuckle that whitened under the skin with every movement of the fingers.

"Yes," said the second mate. "That ought to do. Put a seizing on those clip-hooks when you're through. How are you doin' over there?"

He straddled over the boom to Fullerton, looked at the job, nodded, and went inboard again. Both looked at his back as he went down the ladder to the main deck, and then eyed each other in the same impulse.

"That's a terror for you," said Noble, slowly.

"That's so," agreed Fullerton, with a puckered brow. "Darn me, if I can make him out. Half kills a man one minute—see that blood on his fist?—and then comes along to look over a job without so much as a 'hurry up.'"

"Aye," said Noble. "I wisht he'd curse a bit. It's that deadly soft way of his, as if—as if he knowed he'd got you, no matter how you squirm. That's what makes me itch, that's it."

At eight bells they were quickly made aware of what had happened on the main deck. In their bunks in the fo'c'sle, two of the "Dutchmen" were sobbing over their new troubles. Noble stood up and bade them show their faces; they raised their bruises obediently to view. The old man scanned them, his lips pursed; both men had been sorely beaten.

"Yes," he said, thoughtfully, "you've had the cream of it, you two. What was you doing?"

"Not'ing," cried one of them. "He joost come up and poonch us for not'ing."

The other Englishman in the watch laughed shortly.

"That's just what they was doing" he explained to Noble. "I was close by, an' them Dutchmen was soldiering all the watch. I'd ha' punched 'em myself if I'd been the second mate."

The men started with their dinner in silence. Noble had a sense of relief at finding that the sufferers after all were Dutchmen; it might have been worse. A man who is hard on such as they may none the less be a good officer from the point of view of the fo'c'sle. In fact, it helped to identify Logan, to fit him in; this was a recognizable attribute of an energetic second mate. Noble turned into his bunk after dinner with a mind eased of a few of its darker forebodings.

Good winds helped the old Etna into the trades: with her easting made, she turned her stout stem to the south and justified her builder. Incidentally, she most completely justified her second mate. A full-rigged ship, built of wood and heavily sparred, is the true material for fine seamanship, and Logan was a seaman of the highest order. The old skysail-yarder gave him scope; with his keen instinct for a ship's character, he soon learned just what she could do and how much she could stand. During his tricks at the wheel at night, when the horizon was blotched with quick squalls, Noble had many occasions to judge Logan's abilities. "Stand by your royal and topgallant halyards," he would order, as the fresh wind strengthened and a spurt of rain traveled down to them. A word to the man at the wheel, a blink into the binnacle and then he would take up his position at the weather poop-rail, his eyes aloft on the gear, his every faculty alert, and sail the old ship through the thick of a squall without starting a sheet. Noble came to mark such incidents as typical of the voyage. He was an expert judge of an officer's worth, and rendered Logan the tribute of his unfeigned surprise and admiration. He began to think skeptically of the man's unholy reputation. He tried to express himself to his mate Fullerton.

"They call him Bucko," he said, "but he hasn't come no bucko with us. Who's he hit? Only a pair of Dutchmen for loafin' and Shaw a clip on the ear for belayin' the royal halyards with a hitch. And as for bein' a sailor, why there's Admirals couldn't work a ship the way he does."

Fullerton was not convinced. "It's comin'," he said, "and when it comes you stand from under. I guess I know the breed. He wasn't called Bucko for nothing."

Shaw Attempts the Impossible.

THE starboard watch had the middle watch that night. The trades were failing, pettering out in squalls that kept the hands on the jump and the gear stretched. When Noble relieved the wheel at four bells the Etna was on a bowline, laying her rail well down to the sea that raced past in white streams from the bows. The captain was on deck, walking the poop with Logan; both were in oilskins. It was breezing up purposefully, out of a sky that shifted from dark smoke-color to dead black, and Noble could feel in the heavy helm that the old ship was carrying all she could stand. He was not sorry that the captain was on deck, for Logan alone had a way of carrying on to the last minute which sailors detest. It did not take the captain long to decide to shorten sail; Logan ordered the royals in and went down to the main deck to see it done. Topgallants, jib-topsails and flying-jib followed; and Noble had rung one bell, which indicates the time to call the watch below, before the second mate returned to the poop. The captain had already gone below, and Logan came aft and took a look into the binnacle.

He stood at Noble's side for a couple of minutes.

"Lot too many Dutchmen on this trip," he said at length.

"Yes, sir," said Noble; "I've no use for Dutchmen myself."

Logan nodded, still staring into the compass.

"That man Shaw calls himself an Englishman, don't he?" he asked.

"Yes, sir; Shaw's English," answered the old sailor.

"Pity he don't act like it, then," said the second mate, so quietly that it seemed as though he were talking to himself.

He looked round suddenly at Noble as though he were about to add something more. Then he smiled and stepped a pace away.

"Strike eight bells," he ordered, and walked away.

The man of the port watch relieved Noble, and the old man went forward. The night was very dark, and he trod with care along the wet decks. At the corner of the for'ard house some men were gathered in a knot, a gleam of light from the lamp in the fo'c'sle shone dully on their wet oilskins.

"Ain't you fellows goin' to turn in?" said Noble, as he came to them.

Some of them turned to see who spoke, but nobody answered. Their interest was focused on a figure stretched upon the deck; two of them were kneeling by it. Everybody was very quiet. A wave of sickness passed through Noble's body. He laid a hand on the arm of the man next to him.

"Is—is that Shaw?" he asked.

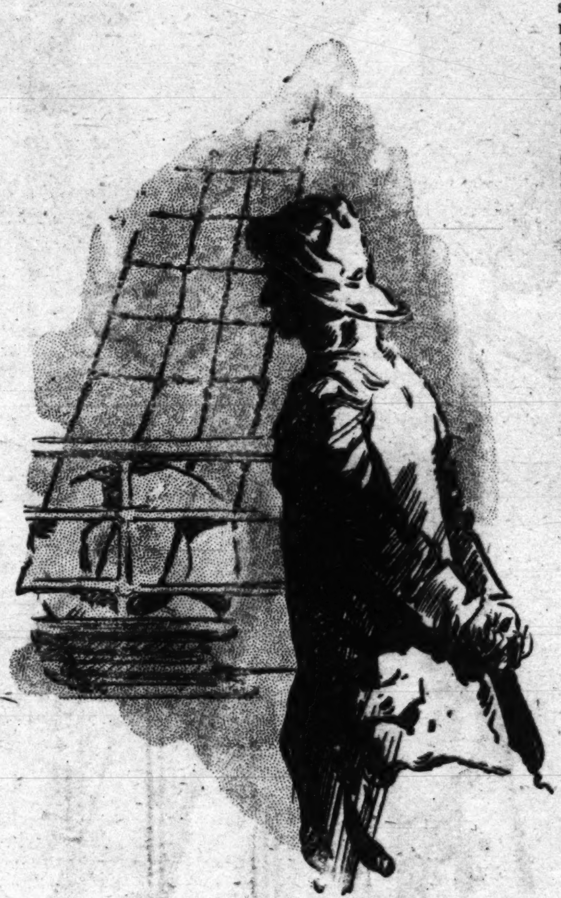
The Dutchman—it was one of those whom the second mate had thrashed—looked round to him.

"Yes," he said. "Dat's Shaw."

Fullerton rose from his knees by the prone man.

"Here," he said. "Let's get him in the fo'c'sle. He's got it bad."

Four men, ungainly in their stiff oilskins, raised him in their arms and bore him to his bunk. The ship was rolling somewhat; they had to balance and poise as they went, and there was a momentary jam in the narrow doorway. But Shaw uttered no sound. They got him into his bunk, and reached the lamp down from its hook to see him more clearly. The hair over one ear was bound into strings with blood, but the face was unmarked. It had the color of yellow clay and seemed to have become sharper and thinner. The lower lip hung down and let the teeth be seen.



"Noble's immunity made the others suspicious of him."

Fullerton pointed with a finger to the clotted hair.

"It was a belaying-pin did that," he said, almost in a whisper.

"Logan?" asked Noble, in a whisper.

Fullerton turned on him. "Logan," he repeated. "Who else'd it be? Of course it was Logan—the man-killin', sailor-drivin' dog!"

His voice, wrathful and loud, seemed an offense against the stillness in which Shaw lay unmoving.

"What was it about?" asked Noble hastily.

Fullerton sneered. His face was curiously white. "Who knows what it was about?" he cried. "Whatever he done, he hadn't earned that." Again his pointing finger carried their eyes to the bloody hair. "He was at the fore-to'gallant halyards; the rest of us was on the clewlines. We heard him sing out and curse; we never heard Logan at all—you know the swine's quiet style. An' then there was a sound like splitting a board and we heard him fall, and Logan lowered the yard himself. Aye. Pity some of us wasn't by with a sheath-knife."

The Frenchman was bathing Shaw's face from a pannikin, while the others stood about staring and wordless. Fullerton, having spoken, crossed to his own bunk and began to remove his oilskins. Noble stood a while and looked at the prone man, then turned to the door.

"Where you goin'?" demanded Fullerton.

"Aft," said Noble. "That man might die."

The port watch were at the weather main braces as he passed, the leading man yo-ho-ing with vigor. The door of the poop alleyway on the lee side was open, and Noble made for it, meaning to wake the steward. The second mate's room was the first to pass, and, as it chanced, Logan had his door open also.

The second mate was standing in the middle of the room stripped to the waist, and he looked up as the old man appeared.

"That you, Noble?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," said the sailor.

"Goin' to call the steward?" suggested Logan. "It's no use, though; I guess his skull's cracked all right. I sort of felt it give."

He looked enormous in the tiny berth; his shoulders and chest seemed to crowd the place. The little hurricane lamp screwed to the bulkhead behind him, and let him be seen as a great silhouetted mass.

"He looks bad," said Noble. "I've a notion he's done for."

"So have I," was the answer. "So you might as well come in here and lend me a hand."

Noble knew he didn't want to; at the back of his mind there smoldered a savage wrath against this big young man; but he entered and closed the door as he was bidden.

"Just lift the lamp out of the socket and hold it for me, will you?" directed Logan. "That's it," he said, as Noble obeyed. "Now I can get a look at the damage."

He turned as he spoke and old Noble uttered an oath of sheer amazement. Half the side and thigh were sticky with blood, which oozed still from a wound low down in the ribs.

"Steady with that lamp," said Logan. His big, spade-ended fingers were busy about the wound, callously stretching and kneading it as though in curiosity. "Ah, here it is," he said suddenly, and picked something forth from it. He swished it in the water of the wash-hand-basin and held it to the lamp.

"See?" he said to Noble.

Noble saw; it was two inches of the point of a sheath-knife, broken off in the wound.

"Dirty trick," said Logan, nonchalantly, hitching up his trousers. "I'll get my shirt on and call the captain. You can go and turn in, Noble."

Nobody in the starboard watch managed to retain a clear memory of that event; the implication of it shifted so suddenly. One moment their minds were full of bloody murder, of a shipmate ruthlessly slaughtered in the dark for mere wantonness; the body in Shaw's bunk seemed to cry out upon his slayer. And the next moment the captain was there, shrill and shaking, incoherent with anger, showering epithets on them and on the dead. Shaw's broken knife was found where he had fallen.

"Set of knifing cowards," the captain babbled at them. "Lucky that belayin-pin was handy, Mr. Logan—the low-down blanky Dagoes. You work 'em after this, Mr. Logan; keep the stabbin', underhand dogs on the move, d'ye hear?"

"Aye, aye, sir," said Logan, formally, looking over his head at the bewildered men.

On the run down to the Horn Logan displayed his "Bucko" form more than once; it was the "Dutchmen" that suffered. Noble saw one of them felled one day. The man was smoking during his watch on deck; he was at work under the fo'c'sle head and Logan came round the for'ard house and upon him suddenly. The man's back was to him, and the second mate, without so much as a frown, tapped him on the shoulder. It was done so quietly, with such a manner of equanimity, that Noble looked to hear a mere word of rebuke and an end to it.

The man started round at the touch and let his pipe fall, gaping at the officer; the next instant Logan's fist knocked him breathless across the barrel of the windlass. He had the luck, or the good sense, not to stir for a minute, and Logan, after looking at him thoughtfully, set his heel on the pipe, broke it and turned away. He had not even spoken. The man's front teeth were broken and his lip split through; trembling violently, he swabbed the blood from his face and crept back to his job. Noble saw his eyes were white and wide.

Fullerton "Gets His;" Noble, Immune.

IT was a well-trained watch which Logan commanded by the time the Etna braced up and made the Horn, a watch that was never a minute late on deck, which put its force to its work with a feverish readiness and never failed to jump at an order. Save only Noble, not a man of them but had come under the second mate's heavy hand and had his scars to show. Fullerton's turn had come one night when he was drowsy on the lookout, and Logan had seen a distant light first. The American had taken his hammering standing up and fighting; he had left his mark on Logan's hard face and had been pounded to unconsciousness in return for it. Noble's immunity made the others suspicious of him; they talked with guarded words in his presence, for fear he should be in an understanding with the afterguard.

They saw the Horn, a mere black buttress of rock peering up over chill seas, on a Sunday morning. Somehow, it is always Sunday morning when one sights the Horn. Save for the skysails, everything was set; a quiet wind came out of the southeast and shifted them no more than three knots an hour. That ultimate spire of land, nosing toward the Antarctic, deals only in extremes of weather—in mornings of cool calm and afternoons when the wind spins round to the north and west and blows great guns.

The captain, muffled to the eyes, spent the forenoon watch on the poop, alternately peeping at the barometer in the companion and scanning the sky. The wind hauled steadily to the northward, and soon after noon the word was passed for "all hands," and they commenced to strip her. Quick as the starboard watch was Logan was before them; he was at the fo'c'sle door, urgent and formidable, as they came on deck at a run; hunted them from halyards to clewlines with the menace of his presence, and openly set them to race the port watch, working at the fore. To the rhythm of old Noble's yo-ho-ing, the great structure of sails crumpled in the gear; with Logan at their backs, speaking his quiet "Haul there" into their very ears, the libeled Dutchmen put their useful weight into the work gallantly.

"Now," he said, when all the sails but the lower topsails were clewed up; "two hands to furl that to'gallant; the rest to the upper tops'l. Come along, boys."

He gave them the lead himself; his vigor infected them and they went aloft at a run. With Logan at the bunt, they had the topsail furled as soon as the topgallant. He was an inspiring leader at such a job; his call to haul up to windward summoned all their power and his own great strength, and the fierce energy and speed with which he worked kept them strung up to their utmost endeavor. From the main to the mizzen he

HUGO ☙ By Arnold Bennett

The famous Hugo New Year sale becomes as a succession of scenes from a mad-house. Is Hugo Insane? . . . . .

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Floating high above the world's greatest emporium, where one can buy everythi[illegible]rom yachts to silk[illegible]ats, a flag bears[illegible]e word HUGO. It is the name of the originator of the scheme which culminated in the colossal shop. And Hugo, the great potentate, is wildly in love with Camilla Payne, one of his shop girls. Most ungallantly he has her shadowed by one of his detectives, and discovers that she spent the afternoon in the apartments of the wealthy Mr. Tudor, and that at 10 p. m. she is still there. But a moment later she appears at Hugo's own apartments and explains that she had just escaped from Mr. Tudor, who had lured her to his rooms. Hugo declares his love, and the two go to the outside of Tudor's apartments. Camilla suddenly leaves Hugo and a moment later appears within Tudor's parlor. Then the blind is pulled down. Another aspirant for the hand of fair Camilla appears in the person of Louis Ravengar. Strangely enough the three suitors are all stepbrothers. Tudor, however, wins out and departs for France with his bride. Hugo is plunged into despondency and is about to leave for Devon when his detective reports the return of the Tudors. But one of them, Camilla, comes in a coffin. Tudor himself succumbs suddenly to heart disease.

XI.

The Bargain Sale.

STRANGE sights are to be seen in London.

At five minutes to 9 a. m. on the first day of the year, seven vast crowds stood before the seven principal entrances to Hugo's; seven crowds of immortal souls inclosed in the bodies of women.

But the seven crowds, growing larger each moment, recked nothing of these inconveniences. They waited stolidly, silently, in a suppressed and dangerous fever, as besiegers await the signal for an attack.

Between the various entrances, on the three facades of the establishment, ran the long lines of windows dressed with all the materials for happiness, and behind these ramparts of materials could be glimpsed Hugo's assistants moving about in anxious expectation under the electric lights which burned red in the foggy gloom.

Then suddenly something went off with a boom; it was the first stroke of the great Hugo clock under the dome. Six pairs of double doors opened simultaneously, six pairs of golden commissionaires were overthrown like ninepins, and in a fraction of time six companies of determined and remorseless women had swept like Prussian cavalry into the interior of the doomed edifice.

But the seventh crowd was left on the pavement, for the seventh pair of doors had not opened. And this was the more extraordinary in that the seventh crowd was the largest crowd, and stood before the entrance nearest to the principal scene of the day's operations.

Instantly the world became aware that Hugo's management was less perfect than usual, and people recalled incidents in his business during the previous four months which had not been to his credit.

Then at length a tall gentleman in a beautiful frock coat was seen to be expostulating sternly with the seventh pair of golden commissionaires; the recalcitrant doors flew open, and the beautiful frock coat was hurled violently against a marble pillar for its pains.

Just as the seventh regiment was disappearing to join the sack and loot, a young and pretty girl drove up in a hansom, threw the driver a shilling (which the driver contemplated with a scorn too deep for words), and joined the tail of the regiment.

"I knew I should do it," she said to herself, "and Alb said I shouldn't."

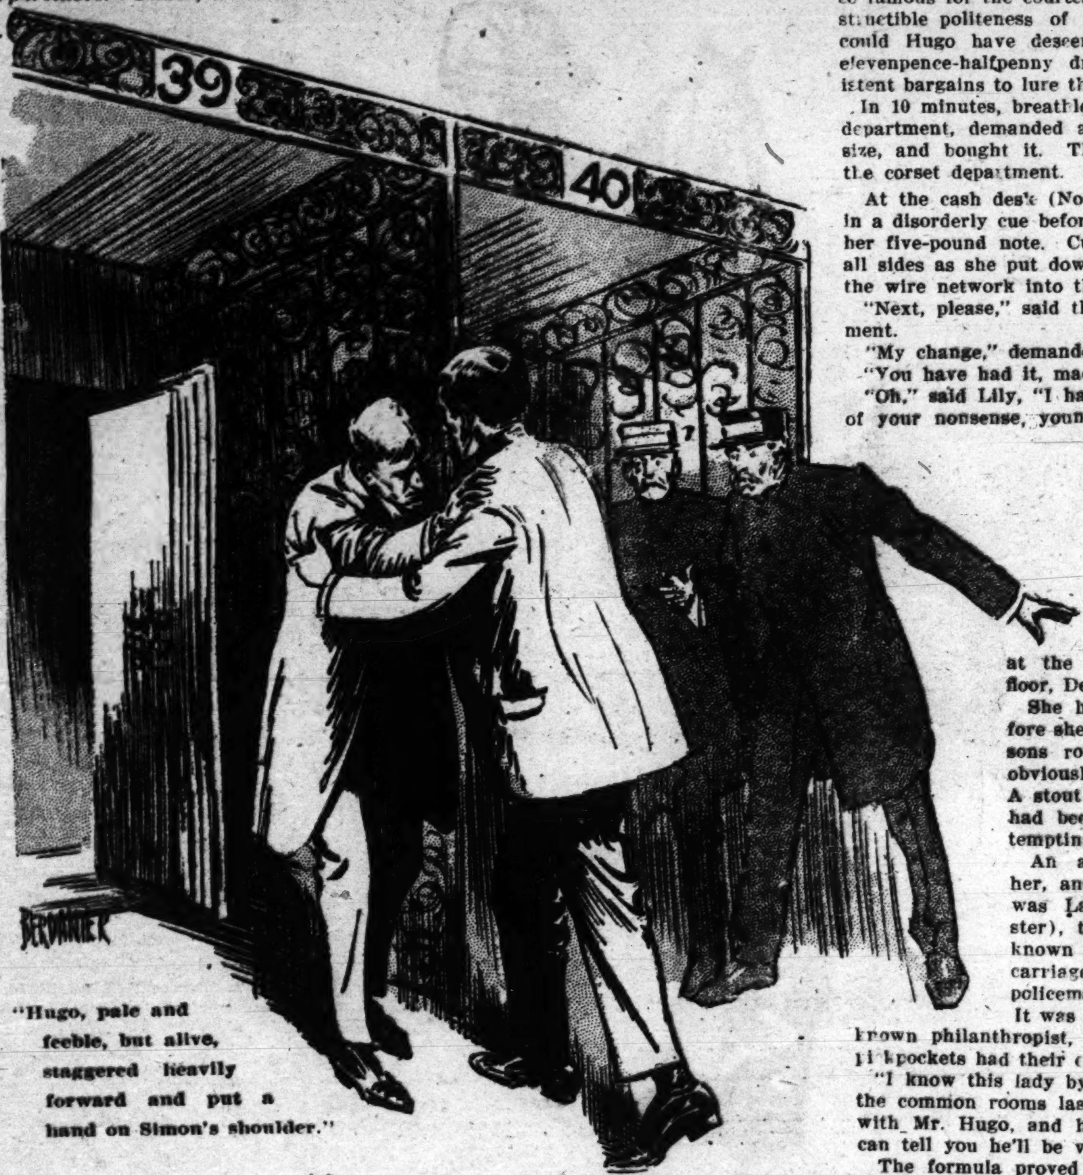
For three days past Hugo had bought whole pages of every daily paper in London, in order to break gently to the public the tremendous fact that his annual sale would commence on New Year's Day, and the still more tremendous fact that it would close on the third of January.

There are only three genuine annual sales in the metropolis. One is Hugo's, another happens in Tottenham Court road and the third—but why disclose the situation of the third, since all persons from Putney to Peckham Rise who are worthy to know it, know it?

Hugo's was naturally the greatest, the largest, the most exciting, the most marvelous, the most powerful in its appeal to the most powerful of human instincts—the instinct to get half a crown's worth of value for two shillings. In earlier years Hugo had made his annual sale prodigious and incredible, with no thought of profit, merely for the pleasure of the affair.

And now Hugo's annual sale was to be more astonishing than ever; some said that he meant at any cost to efface the memory of those discreditable incidents before mentioned. Decidedly, many of his advertised bargains were remarkable in the highest degree. There was, for example, the "fine silvered fox stole, with real brush at each end," at a guinea. Every woman who can tell a silvered fox stole from a cock's feather boa is aware that a silvered fox stole simply cannot be sold for a guinea. Yet Hugo had announced that he would sell two thousand of them at that price, not to mention muffs to match at the same figure.

And there was the famous "Incroyable" corset, white coutil, with wide-belted band round hips, double belt to buckle at sides, cut low—Enough! Further indiscretions of description are not necessary to show that eighteen and nine is the lowest price at which a reasonable creature could hope to obtain the "Incroyable" corset. But Hugo's price was twelve and eleven. And the whole-page advertisements were a solid blazing mass of such jewels.



"Hugo, pale and feeble, but alive, staggered heavily forward and put a hand on Simon's shoulder."

The young and pretty girl who had known that she would "do it" hastened with assured steps, and as quickly as the jostling multitudes would allow, to the fur department.

She was in pursuit of one of the silvered fox stoles with real brush at each end. She had her husband's permission—nay, his command—to purchase a silvered fox stole at a guinea—if she could.

On the way to her goal she encountered by chance Simon Shawn, and it occurred that a temporary block compelled her to halt before him. The two gazed at each other, and Simon looked away, flushing.

It was plain that, though acquainted, they were not on speaking terms. The fact was that their silence covered a domestic drama—a drama which had arisen as the consequence of a great human truth—namely, that even detectives will marry.

She was Mrs. Albert Shawn, as neat as ninepence, as smart and pert as a French maid out for the day. She drove in hansoms, and she had a five-pound note in her pocket.

Albert had been granted two weeks' vacation for his honeymoon, and he ought to have resumed his duties of detection that morning. The honeymoon, however, had lasted only nine days, and the remaining five days of the period had been spent by him in some secret affair of his own, an affair which had ended in an accident to his left foot, so that he could not walk.

The consequence was that, on this day of all days, Hugo was deprived of his services. Lily was, perhaps, not altogether sorry for the catastrophe which kept him a prisoner in the nestlike home in Radipole road, for it had resulted in this excursion of hers to the sale. Albert had bidden her to go buy a stole and other things, to keep her eyes open, and to report to Hugo in person if she observed anything queer. He had given her a pass which would insure her immediate admittance to any of Hugo's private lairs.

She fought her way to a counter in the fur department.

Then, behind a counter, she saw a girl whom she used to serve with a glass of milk every morning.

"Oh, Miss Lawton," she cried, as an equal to an equal, "can you tell me where the stoles are to be found?"

"Probably over there, Mrs. Shawn," said Miss Lawton kindly, nodding the greeting she had no time to utter.

So Lily got away from the counter, plunged into a chartless sea of customers, and eventually emerged in the quarter which had been indicated.

"All sold out, miss!"

Such was the blunt answer to her demand for a silvered fox stole.

"Don't talk to me like that!" said Mrs. Albert Shawn. "It isn't above half past nine on the first morning of the sale, and you advertised 2000 of them."

"Sorry, miss. All sold out," repeated the second shopwalker.

"I shall report this to Mr. Hugo. Do you know who I am? I'm"——

And the second shopwalker also turned his back.

Could these things be happening at Hugo's—at Hugo's, so famous for the courtesy, the long patience, the indestructible politeness of its well-paid employes? And could Hugo have descended to the trickeries of the elevenpence-halfpenny draper, who proclaimed nonexistent bargains to lure the unwary into his shop?

In 10 minutes, breathless, she had reached the corset department, demanded an "Incoryable" of the correct size, and bought it. There was no dissatisfaction in the corset department.

At the cash desk (No. 56) she had to wait her turn in a disorderly cue before she could tender the bill and her five-pound note. Customers pressed round her on all sides as she put down the note and peered through the wire network into the interior of the desk.

"Next, please," said the cashier sharply, after a moment.

"My change," demanded Lily.

"You have had it, madame."

"Oh," said Lily, "I have had it, have I? Now, none of your nonsense, young man! Do you know who I am? I am Mrs. Albert Shawn."

"Mr. Randall," the cashier called out coldly, and a grave and gigantic shopwalker appeared who knew not the name of Albert Shawn, and who firmly told Mrs. Shawn that if she wished to make a complaint she must make it at the central inquiry office, ground floor, Department 1A.

She had not proceeded 20 yards before she was stopped by a group of persons round a policeman—a policeman obviously called in from Sloane street. A stout woman of ladylike appearance had been arrested on a charge of attempting pocket picking.

An accusatory shopwalker charged her, and she replied warmly that she was Lady Brice (nee Kentucky-Webster), the American wife of the well-known philanthropist, and that her carriage was waiting outside. The policeman and the shopwalker smiled. It was so easy to be the wife of a well-known philanthropist, and in these days all the best pickpockets had their carriages waiting outside.

"I know this lady by sight," said Lily. "She visited the common rooms last year to see the arrangements, with Mr. Hugo, and he called her Lady Brice, and I can tell you he'll be very angry with you."

The formula proved useless. Lady Brice (nee Kentucky-Webster) was led off in all her vast speechless, outraged impeccability, and poor little Lily was glad to escape with her freedom and the memory of Lady Brice's grateful bow.

She ran, glided in and out between the knots of visitors, until she was stopped by a pair of doors being suddenly shut and fastened in her face.

The reason for the obstruction was plain. Those doors admitted to the blouse department, and the blouse department, as Lily could see through the diamond panes, was a surging sea of bargain hunters, amid which shopwalkers stood up like lighthouses, while the girls behind the counters trembled in fear of being washed away. Discipline, order, management, had ceased to exist at Hugo's.

Then someone cried out for air, and someone else protested that the doors at the other end of the short gallery had also been shut. Lily, whose manifold misfortunes had not quenched her interest in the "Incroyable" corset, opened her parcel, and found that the corset was not an "Incroyable" at all, but an inferior substitute, with no proper belted band, and of a shape to startle even a Brighton bathing woman! The change must have been effected by the assistant in making up the parcel.

And, moreover, the condition of the packed gallery soon caused her to forget even the final swindle of the corset. The air had rapidly become exhausted.

Women clutched at each other; women rapped frenziedly against the heavy, glazed doors; women screamed.

It was the Black Hole of Calcutta over again, and yet no one in the blouse department seemed to notice the signals of distress. Lily felt the perspiration on her brow and chin, and then she knew that she, too, must scream and clutch; and she cried out, and the pressure which forced her against the door grew more and more terrible. She had dropped the corset. She murmured feebly "Alb"—— She began to dream queer dreams and to see strange lights.

* * *

When she recovered perfect consciousness, she was in the dome. She knew it was the dome, because Albert had once, at her urgent request, taken her surreptitiously to see it. Simon was standing over her, as sympathetic as the most exigent sister-in-law could wish, and the great Shawn family feud had expired.

In two minutes she was her intensely practical self
